MEANING OF TERMS

USED IN CLASSIFYING ANNOTATING CASES.

THE different expressions used to describe the effect of the annotating cases have the following meanings, and the classification of the annotating cases has been done strictly in accordance with these meanings. The annotating cases are listed chronologically except such as are classified as "Referred to" or "Mentioned." These come at the end and are arranged inter se in chronological order. The terms used in classifying the annotating cases are as follows :—

"APPLIED" (Apld.).—This expression is used to denote the fact that the principle of law enunciated in the annotated case has been applied to a new set of facts and circumstances in the annotating case.

"APPROVED" (Apprvd.).—This expression is used to denote the fact that the annotated case has been considered to be good law in the annotating case where the latter is in a higher court than the former.

"CONSIDERED" (Consd.).—This expression is used where the remarks in the annotating case are devoid of adverse criticism and merely denote the giving of more or less careful consideration to the annotated case.

"DISTINGUISHED" (Distd.).—This expression is used where the earlier case is not neces sarily doubted, but where some essential difference (either on the facts or in law) between it and the annotated case is pointed out.

"DOUBTED" (Dbtd.).—This expression is used where the court in the annotating case without definitely going to the length of saying that the annotated case is wrong, adduces reasons which seem to show that it is not accurate.

"EXPLAINED" (Expld.).—This expression is used where the earlier case is not necessarily doubted, but the decision arrived at is justified or accounted for by calling attention to some point of fact or of law which is usually, but not necessarily, one not obvious on the face of the report.

"EXTENDED" (Extd.).—Compare "APPLIED," supra.

"FOLLOWED" (Folld.).—This expression is used to denote that the same principles of law are applied in the two cases. It does not necessarily imply that the facts are substantially identical in the two cases.

"NOT FOLLOWED" (N.F.).—Compare "FOLLOWED," supra, to which it is the adverse.

"OVERRULED" (Overd.).—This expression is used where the annotating case is on substantially identical facts with the annotated case and in a higher court and the rule in the latter case is held to be wrong.

"REFERRED" (Refd.).—This expression is used only where the annotating case deals with the point of the Digest paragraph and is without comment of any definite character on the case annotated, and where there is no delicate shade of approval or disapproval which would justify the use of any of the foregoing words.

"MENTIONED" (Mentd.).—This expression is used only where none of the foregoing terms apply. In other words, it is used only where the case annotated is cited on a point having nothing to do with the point in the Digest paragraph.

Part I.—Who is a Common Carrier.

SECT. 1.—HOW DETERMINED.

1. Question of fact.]—The question whether the liability of a common carrier has been undertaken in a particular case is one of fact & not of law.—TAMVACO v. TIMOTHY & GREEN (1882), Cab. & El. 1.

Annotation :—Consd. Travers v. Cooper, [1915] 1 K. B. 73.

2. By warranty of safety—Liable as common carrier.]—If A. send goods by B. who says "I will warrant they shall go safe," B. is liable for any damage sustained by the goods notwithstanding A. send one of his own servants in B.'s cart to look after them.

Deft. is not a common carrier by trade, but has put himself in the situation of a common carrier by his particular warranty (CHAMBRE, J.).—ROBINSON v. DUNMORE (1801), 2 Bos. & P. 416; 126 E. R. 1359.

Annotations :—Distd. Hutchinson v. Guion (1858), 4 Jur. N. S. 1149; Bergheim v. G. E. Ry. (1878), 3 C. P. D. 221. Refd. Butcher v. L. & S. W. Ry. (1855), 16 C. B. 13; Talley v. G. W. Ry. (1870), L. R. 6 C. P. 44.

3. Notice at booking office—Whether sufficient proof.]—Evidence that at the door of a booking office, there is a board on which is painted, "conveyances to all parts of the world," & a list of names of places, is not sufficient proof that the owner of the office is a common carrier, so as to charge him for the loss of a box which was booked there.—UPSTON v. SLARK (1827), 2 C. & P. 598, N. P.

Annotation :—Distd. Muschamp v. Lancaster & Preston Junction Ry. (1841), 8 M. & W. 421.

4. Carrying on business as a carrier—Furniture remover.]—Deft., a furniture remover, undertook to remove pltf.'s furniture from B. to M. for an agreed price. Before fixing the price, deft. first inspected the furniture. Apart from the fixing of the price there were no other terms expressed with regard to the removal. On the journey a fire broke out, through no fault of deft., in one of the vans & destroyed some of the furniture. Pltf. sued deft. for the loss. It was admitted that deft. was not a common carrier, but it was contended that he was carrying on the public employment of a carrier, & was consequently under the same liability as a common carrier :—Held : in the absence of any express agreement that deft. undertook the liability of a common carrier, the admission that he was not a common carrier was sufficient to defeat pltf.'s claim.—WATKINS v. COTTELL, [1916] 1 K. B. 10; 85 L. J. K. B. 287; 114 L. T. 333; 32 T. L. R. 91; 60 Sol. Jo. 404, D. C.

Annotation :—Refd. Belfast Ropework Co. v. Bushell, [1918] 1 K. B. 210.

See, also, Nos. 13, 233, post.

5. Carrier of goods—Of all persons—For hire.]—H. undertaking to carry goods of all persons indifferently for hire, is a common carrier, & the goods are privileged against distress.—GISBOURN v. HURST (1710), 1 Salk. 249; 91 E. R. 220.

Annotations :—Consd. Belfast Ropework Co. v. Bushell, [1918] 1 K. B. 210. Refd. Watkins v. Cottell (1915), 114 L. T. 333. Mentd. Gilman v. Elton (1821), 3 Brod. & Bing. 75; Thompson v. Mashiter (1823), 1 Bing. 283; Matthias v. Mesuard (1826), 2 C. & P. 353; Wood v. Clarke (1831), 1 Cr. & J. 484; Adams v. Grane (1833), 1 Cr. & M. 380; Brown v. Shevill (1834), 2 Ad. & El. 138; Muspratt v. Gregory (1836), 1 M. & W. 633; Joule v. Jackson (1841), 7 M. & W. 450; Clarke v. Millwall Dock Co. (1886), 17 Q. B. D. 494.

6. —— Terminus beyond seas.]—(1) One who holds himself out as a carrier of goods between two places one of which is beyond the confines of England, is still subject to the common law liability of a carrier for hire, & is bound to accept all goods which are reasonably tendered to him for conveyance between those limits.

(2) A common carrier has no general right to refuse to receive a parcel tendered to him for conveyance, unless informed of the nature of its contents.

(3) A railway co. acting as common carriers, & bound by statute to deal equally with all persons, cannot make a regulation for the conveyance of goods, which in practice affects one individual only.

(4) The fact that a package is composed of separate parcels, the aggregate amount of the carriage of which, if carried separately, would be greater than will be chargeable for the entire package, & that the person who tenders the package is himself a carrier, & collects such parcels in the way of his business, is no legal ground for refusing to carry it on the same terms as similar packages for other persons.—CROUCH v. LONDON & NORTH WESTERN RY. CO. (1854), 14 C. B. 255; 7 Ry. & Can. Cas. 717; 23 L. J. C. P. 73; 22 L. T. O. S. 224; 18 Jur. 148; 2 W. R. 166; 2 C. L. R. 188; 139 E. R. 105.

14. Corporation tramway—Of passengers.]—A municipal corpn. owned a tramway constructed under statutory powers. In accordance with a statutory requirement they exhibited in a conspicuous place in their tramcars a list of the fares to be exacted, & they appended thereto a special notice to passengers stating, as the fact was, that the fares charged were less than the maximum authorised charges, & that in consideration thereof a passenger was only carried on the terms that the maximum amount recoverable from the corpn. on account of any injury suffered by a passenger & for which the corpn. were legally liable was £25 :—Held : (1) so long as the tramway was open for public traffic, the corpn. were bound to carry any passenger, not being an objectionable person, who offered himself & was willing to pay the published fare, provided they had accommodation for him; (2) they were not entitled to impose a condition limiting their liability for negligence without giving the passenger the option of travelling at a higher fare without any such condition; either (3) upon the construction of the statutes regulating the tramway (COZENS-HARDY, M.R., & KENNEDY, L.J.), or (4) upon the ground that the corpn. were common carriers of passengers at common law in the sense that they were bound to carry according to their profession (FARWELL & KENNEDY, L. JJ.).

(5) Semble : if the corpn. published alternative lists of fares, one containing the maximum rates, & the other containing reduced rates, & gave an option to the passenger to pay either the full rate without any condition limiting their liability or the reduced rate with such a condition, a passenger electing to pay the smaller rate would be bound by the condition (COZENS-HARDY, M.R., & FARWELL, L.J.).—CLARKE v. WEST HAM CORPN., [1909] 2 K. 15. Haulage contractor—No general offer of carriage.]—Deft. described his business as that of an automobile engineer & haulage contractor. He owned two lorries intended for sale. With these & others which he hired when necessary he carried sugar from L. to M. At M. he invited offers of goods of all kinds except machinery, for carriage to L. & other places at charges varying with the state of his business. These offers he accepted or rejected according as the rate, route, & class of goods were or were not satisfactory. Deft. through an agent made a contract with pltfs. to carry certain hemp belonging to them from M. to L. In the course of the transit the hemp was damaged by fire without negligence of deft. :—Held : inasmuch as he reserved to himself the right of accepting or rejecting offers of goods for carriage from M. to L. he was not a common carrier of such goods & consequently not liable.—BELFAST ROPEWORK CO. v. BUSHELL, [1918] 1 K. 18. —— Passengers—Dogs.]—A condition, contained in a ticket signed by a person delivering a dog for carriage to a railway co., stated that " the co. are not & will not be common carriers of dogs, nor will they receive dogs for conveyance except on the terms that they shall not be responsible for any amount of damages for the loss thereof, or for injury thereto beyond the sum of £2 unless a higher value be declared at the time of delivery to the co. & a percentage of 5 per cent. paid upon the excess of value beyond the £2 so declared " :—Held : although the co. were not bound to be common carriers of dogs, yet, being bound by Railway & Canal Traffic Act, 1854 (c. 31), to afford reasonable facilities for the carriage of dogs, they could only limit their liability in respect thereof by reasonable conditions, & the above-mentioned condition was not just & reasonable within sect. 7 of the Act, & therefore did not protect the co. from liability to an amount exceeding £2 in respect of damage done to the dog through the negligence of their servants.

It would be a mistake to suppose that railway cos. are bound to carry as common carriers everything whch they can be required to carry under the provisions of Railway & Canal Traffic Act. Railway cos. are bound by that Act to provide reasonable facilities for carrying passengers, but they are not common carriers of passengers (LINDLEY, L.J.).—DICKSON v. GREAT NORTHERN RY. CO. 19. Coal.]—(1) A railway co., in order to prevent the obstruction of their railway, which would be caused by an unlimited coal traffic, ascertained the probable consumption of coal in the neighbourhood of each of their stations, & the sort required, & made arrangements with the collieries supplying the particular sort of coal for the requisite supply ; they appointed depot agents to manage the sale of the coal, who from time to time ordered the quantity wanted from the collieries, & caused the number of waggons wanted for the carriage to be sent up. All the depots were in the hands of these agents, who accounted to the collieries for the proceeds of the sale. No coal merchant was dealt with in this way, but only coalowners ; but each dealer was treated alike, & as one of the public. On a motion by a coal merchant to enjoin the co. to afford to him the same facilities for receiving and forwarding his coals as to those who consigned their coals to the co. :—Held : the arrangements of the co. were proper, & not such as gave or caused any unreasonable preference or disadvantage ; & the injunction was refused.

(2) When the rule was first before the ct. it was considered that (the coal merchant) had no right to call upon the co. to carry all coals & coke that he might offer for that purpose ; & since then an opinion has been expressed by the Ct. of Exch., in an action between these very parties that the co. are not common carriers of coal ; thus confirming our view of the claim in question (per CUR.).—Re OXLADE v. NORTH EASTERN RY. 21. Shipowner—Trading ship.]—In an action against the owner of a ship for non-delivery to the consignee of gold shipped from Portugal :—Held : (1) the fact that the export of gold is forbidden by the law of Portugal could not alter the right of an English subject, unless there had been a particular determination in his case ; (2) a usage in such trade for the master & not the owner, to be entitled to the freight, would not prevent the owner being liable on the bill of lading ; (3) where there is a trading ship concerned in a voyage, it must be considered in the nature of a common carrier.—BOUCHER v. LAWSON (1736), Cunn. 144 ; Lee temp. Hard. 85, 194 ; 95 E. 22. —— General ship.]—The owner of a general ship is subject to the same responsibility for loss or damage of goods as a common carrier.

By the terms of a bill of lading containing the usual exceptions, the owner undertook absolutely to deliver goods shipped on board his vessel :—Held : he was not excused by reason of the goods having been damaged by rats, notwithstanding he had kept cats on board, such damage not being within any of the exceptions in the bill of lading.—LAVERONI v. DRURY (1852), 8 Exch. 166 ; 22 L. 24. —— Goods shipped without bill of lading—Insured by shipowner.]—Pltf., a wool merchant at B., bought wool in L. & handed a delivery order to deft., who shipped the wool on board his steamer in L., carried it by sea to G., & forwarded it thence by rail to B., charging pltf. a through rate of £1 7*s.* 6*d.* per ton, which covered all expenses of the transit from L. to B., including insurance. The insurance was effected by deft., who selected the underwriters & paid the premium, after receiving directions from pltf. as to the amount per bale for which he was to insure. Pltf. did not receive possession of the policy; on previous occasions, when losses had occurred, deft. had received payment from the underwriters, & had settled with pltf. The wool was shipped without a bill of lading. In cases where pltf. imported wool, he insured it for the whole transit, & deft. charged only £1 5*s.* 9*d.* per ton for its conveyance from L. to B.:—Held: deft. had insured the wool, not as agent for pltf. but to cover his own liability of carrier, & had undertaken a liability equal to that of a common carrier, & had not, either expressly or impliedly, stipulated for any limitation of his liability, & was liable without proof of negligence.—HILL v. SCOTT, [1895] 2 Q. 25. Shipping agent—Distinguished from shipowner.]—Pltf. was a merchant & deft. was a shipping agent. Pltf. sent deft. two cases of goods with instructions to forward them to the address of certain customers of his at S. & V. Deft. caused them to be delivered to the agent of a steam navigation co. for carriage & delivery to those addresses, taking from him bills of lading signed by him made out to deft., as shipper, but for delivery to pltf.'s customer abroad. There was a mistake in the delivery, the goods intended for the one being delivered to the other, & both packages were refused & returned. Pltf. brought action against deft. as a carrier, on a bailment of goods to be safely & securely carried & delivered:—Held: the action was misconceived. Deft. was charged as carrier on a duty to carry & deliver, but his employment was as a shipping agent to forward, that is, to cause to be carried & delivered by carriers. The duties of shipping agent & shipowner are different & distinct.—PLATZHOFF v. LEBEAN (1865), 4 F. & F. 545, N. P.

26. Wharfinger—Carriage incidental to business—From wharf to ship.]—(1) The liability of a wharfinger who undertakes to convey goods from his wharf to the vessel in his own lighters is similar to that of a carrier.

(2) Notice to the vendor of goods that the carrier by whom he sends them, limits his responsibility, is equivalent to notice to the vendee who directs them to be sent.

27. —— —— For customers only.]—Wharfingers, who described themselves as wharfingers, lightermen, & carmen, carried goods from their wharf for their own wharf customers, but not for strangers unless at arranged prices, & not then unless they considered the business good:—Held: they were wharfingers & not carriers, &, if carriers, not common carriers.—CHATTOCK & CO. v. BELLAMY & CO. 28. —— —— ——.]—Wharfingers who, as incidental to their business as wharfingers, transport goods for their customers by lighter from the importing ships to their warehouse, but do not hold themselves out as ready to carry goods for any other persons, are not in respect of that transport subject to the common law liability of common carriers, but are liable only for negligence.—CONSOLIDATED TEA & LANDS CO. v. OLIVER'S WHARF, [1910] 2 K. 29. —— Goods received as agents—Admissibility of parol evidence.]—Pltfs. requested defts., wharfingers & lightermen in L., to quote a through rate for carriage of machinery from L. to C., & handed to them a specification of the machinery in writing headed, "Approximate specification of the parts, pieces & contents of ironwork for transit to C." Defts., in reply, sent to pltfs. the following written quotation:—"From L. to C. Cylinders & castings 33*s.* 4*d.* per ton (12*s.* 6*d.* per ton extra for pieces over 2½ tons each, & we require twenty-four hours' notice of intended shipment, provided we can get ship alongside British & Foreign Wharf to load). Pilotage 21*s.* At owner's risk. Includes collection within three miles & delivery at other side. Includes freight & wharfage at both ends." Pltfs. paid the through rate to defts., & delivered the machinery to them. In an action to recover damages for injury caused to the machinery whilst on board a steamer in the course of the transit to C.:—Held: there was no concluded contract in writing between pltfs. & defts., & parol evidence was admissible to prove that defts. received the goods as wharfingers only, & acted in the carriage of the goods as agents only, & not as carriers, & they were not answerable for any damage after the goods were placed on board ship.—PONTIFEX & WOOD, LTD. v. HARTLEY & CO. 30. Lighterman—Carriage for all persons indifferently.]—If a person holds himself out to carry goods for everyone as a business, & he thus carries from the wharves to the ships in harbour, he is a common carrier. The criterion is, whether he carries for particular persons only, or whether he carries for everyone. If he holds himself out to do it for everyone who asks him, he is a common carrier, but if he carries for particular persons only, that is matter of special contract.—INGATE v. CHRISTIE (1850), 3 Car. & Kir. 61, N. 32. —— Absence of special contract.]—(1) Pltfs. agreed verbally with deft. that he should lighter pltfs.' goods from L. to steamers in the Thames, at a low rate of freight. No express contract was made as to the terms of carriage, but it was known to both parties that pltfs. intended to insure the goods, & they were in fact, insured by a policy expressed to be " without recourse to lightermen." It is a common practice for lightermen on the Thames to contract on the terms that they shall not be liable for any insurable risks, or that they shall only be liable for the negligence of themselves or their servants :—Held : the contract between the pltfs. & the deft. was subject to an implied condition that the deft. should not be liable for any damage to the goods caused by risks which could be insured against.

It cannot be doubted that, if there were no special contract between the lighterman & his employer, the lighterman took upon himself all the onerous liabilities of a common carrier (MATHEW, J.).

Pltf. was being rowed across, with two horses aboard, which he himself had embarked, under deft.'s instructions. In the middle of the stream one horse became frightened, jumped into the water & was drowned :—Held : deft. was under no obligation to provide a safer boat ; &, as pltf. had elected to take the risk & to remain in charge of his own animals while crossing, was not liable for negligence as a private carrier.—ROUSSEL v. AUMAIS (1901), 20 C. At the request of the officer of the steamer the master of the tug received two cases of feathers, consigned to pltf., to take on shore with the passengers & luggage. 43. —— —— Liability to invitee.]—Pltf., a decorator & gardener in the service of deft., sued him for negligence in conveying him to perform for him certain work. Deft. drove, & while on the road the kingbolt of the carriage broke, the horses bolted, the carriage was overturned, & pltf. was injured. There was no evidence of gross neglect on the part of deft.:—Held: (1) in the absence of any evidence of gross negligence on the part of deft., pltf. was not entitled to recover damages; (2) the evidence did not disclose such negligence as to render deft., performing a gratuitous service for pltf., responsible.—MOFFATT v. BATEMAN (1869), L. 44. —— —— Liability to licensee.]—Deft., a contractor for making a tunnel for a tube railway, had constructed, for the purpose of carrying out the work, a temporary line on which an electric engine ran. This engine was used to draw trucks containing the excavated material to a spot where it could be brought to the surface. It was not fitted for passengers, & deft. had directed that no one should be allowed to ride on it but the driver & a guard. It had, however, been used to carry officials in the employment of deft. and of the railway co., with the knowledge & concurrence of deft.'s representative. Pltf. was an inspector of works appointed by the engineer of the railway, & he accepted from deft.'s timekeeper, who was riding on the engine, an invitation to be conveyed by it to his destination. An accident happened while pltf. was on the engine, & he sustained injuries. In an action to recover damages from deft. in respect of these injuries, the jury found that pltf. was on the engine for his own convenience, but with the permission of deft.'s representative, & that the accident was due to the negligence of deft.'s servants:—Held: (1) deft. must be taken, through his representative, to have permitted pltf. to ride on the engine; (2) his liability was that of a person who undertakes the carriage of another gratuitously; (3) the duty in such a case is that the care exercised must be reasonable in the circumstances; (4) there was evidence of such a failure of due care on the part of deft.'s servants as would make him responsible for damages arising therefrom; & pltf. was entitled to judgment.—HARRIS v. PERRY & Co., [1903] 2 K. 45. Forwarding agent—Whether liable for loss.]—Pltf. employed defts., shipping & forwarding agents, to forward certain goods from L. to a French port, & thence by passenger train to Y. It was part of the contract that defts. should have the goods insured. Defts. duly insured the goods, and duly shipped them to the port of C., where they were landed. Being subject to duty, the goods were discharged into the custody of the customs authorities at that port. While the goods were thus in the custody of the customs authorities, & before they were put on rail to be carried to their ultimate destination, two parcels of the goods were lost. The underwriters were not satisfied with the evidence of the loss, & refused to pay. Pltf. thereupon sued the forwarding agents for damages for negligence in not preventing the loss of the goods, & not securing an effective insurance on them:—Held: as defts. had made the usual & proper arrangements with steamships & railways for the carriage of the goods to their destination, & had also made proper arrangements with the underwriters for the insurance of the goods during transit, they were not liable for the loss of the goods in the circumstances.—JONES v. EUROPEAN & GENERAL EXPRESS CO. 46. —— —— By pilferage—Custom of Port of London.] — Pltfs. employed defts., who were shipping & forwarding agents, in Oct. 1919, to collect & carry a quantity of goods, including tin, from certain wharves where they were lying to a ship on the Thames. Defts. were not lightermen, having wharves & barges of their own, & nothing was said about the terms on which the lighterage was to be done, except that defts. were to be paid a flat rate for their services. Defts. employed carters to cart the goods from the wharves where the goods were lying to a wharf in respect of which they had an arrangement to use, & which they described in their correspondence with pltfs. as "our wharf." They then employed a firm of lightermen to lighter the goods from the wharf to the ship in the river. Owing to the watchman's negligence a quantity of the tin was stolen. Pltfs. claimed to recover the value of the stolen goods. Defts. relied on a custom that all contracts for lightering goods in the Port of London were subject to the terms of the London lighterage clause, which exempted lightermen from liability for any loss in any circumstances whatever, howsoever, whensoever any such loss might be caused, & whether caused by negligence or the wrongful act or default of the servants or agents of the lightermen, or other persons for whose acts the lightermen would otherwise be liable. The transaction was of a casual nature, & defts. did not act strictly as shipping agents but were contractors to employ carriers at a rate which included

45 i. Forwarding agent—Whether liable for loss.]—Defts. were accustomed to board steamers to secure contracts from passengers to carry their effects ashore, & thence, by themselves or by other persons on their behalf, to their destinations. Pltf. engaged defts. to take luggage ashore for him & to deliver it at an address given. Pltf. was not aware, nor did defts. inform him, that before they would be able to deliver the luggage, it would necessarily be handed to the Harbour Authorities. Pltf. therefore left the ship without taking steps to safeguard custody of the luggage. Portion of the goods was lost when defts. commenced delivery:—Held: (1) defts. were not liable as insurers; (2) they were, as bailees, liable for the loss of the goods owing to their negligence in having failed to warn pltf. of the practice as to landing goods.—O'NEILL v. MCCORMACK & CO. On the arrival of the goods at V. the consignee took delivery of the goods & abandoned the rest of the transit. 50. —— If space sufficient—Information as to nature.]—(1) A carrier is an insurer of the goods that he carries; (2) he is obliged, for a reasonable reward, to carry any goods that are offered him, to the place to which he professes to carry goods, if his carriage will hold them, & he is informed of their quality & value; (3) he is not obliged to take a package, the owner of which will not inform him of its contents or value; but, if he do not ask for this information, or if, when he asks & is not answered, he still takes the package, he is responsible for its value, whatever that may be; (4) he may, by notice, limit his responsibility as an insurer; but (5) a notice will not protect him against the consequences of a loss occasioned by gross negligence.

(6) In an action against coach-proprietors, for the loss of a parcel, defts. proved a notice, exposed in a booking-office at S., kept by a person named W., in the following terms: "Take notice. The proprietor of this office will not be accountable for any parcels or packages exceeding the value of £5, unless entered as such, & paid for accordingly." One W. was a deft. on the record; but no evidence was offered to show that he was the same W. who was the proprietor of the office:—Held: this was not a sufficient notice, & defts. were still subject to the unlimited responsibility of common carriers.

(7) Qu.: whether the entrusting valuable property to a servant, of whose character the carrier gave no account at the trial, was sufficient to authorise the jury to find that the carrier had been guilty of that degree of negligence which would deprive him of the protection of a proper notice.

(8) A carrier's agent telling the female servant of the owner of a parcel above the value of £5, that it ought to be insured:—Held: not a sufficient notice of the limitation of the carrier's liability.

(9) To give proper security to property, the law has added to that responsibility of a carrier which immediately arises out of the contract to carry for a reward, viz. that of taking all reasonable care of it, the responsibility of an insurer. From his liability as an insurer, the carrier is only to be relieved by two things, both so well known to all the country when they happen, that no person would be so rash as to attempt to prove that they had happened when they had not, viz. the act of God & of the King's enemies (BEST, C.J.).—MACKLIN v. WATERHOUSE (1828), 5 Bing. 212; 2 Moo. & P. 319; 7 L. 51. —— Effect of Railways Clauses Consolidation Act, 1845 (c. 20).]—Railways Clauses Consolidation Act, 1845, does not impose on a railway co., acting as carriers, any further liabilities than those which attach to common carriers. Therefore, although the co. carry coals & other goods for hire from one end of their line to the other, & carry goods other than coals from an intermediate station, they are not bound to carry coals from that station, unless they have publicly professed to do so; & even if they have held themselves out as carriers of coals from that station, no action for refusing to carry coals from it will lie, unless it be shown that the company have conveniences at the station for receiving & carrying the coals.—JOHNSON v. MIDLAND RY. Therefore, it is competent to them to restrict their coal-traffic to the carriage of coals for colliery owners, from the pit's mouth to stations where such colliery owners have cells or depots appropriated to them for the reception & sale of their coals, & to decline to carry coals from station to station, or for coal merchants, such an arrangement being essential to the regulation of the large traffic in that article, & the co. not being common carriers of coal.—Re OXLADE v. NORTH EASTERN RY. CO., No. 6, ante.

56. —— ——.]—(1) Common carriers are bound to carry such goods as are tendered to them for the purpose of being carried, together with the proper charge for such carriage; they cannot insist upon the sender signing such conditions as are unreasonable.

(2) A condition that the co. should not be liable for the loss, detention or damage of any package insufficiently packed, is unreasonable, both at common law & under Railway & Canal Traffic Act, 1854 (c. 31), s. 7.

(3) Semble: a condition imposed by a railway co. carrying on business as common carriers for hire, that no claim for damage will be allowed unless made within three days after the delivery of the goods, nor for loss unless made within three days of the time that they should be delivered is unjust & unreasonable (COCKBURN, C.J.).

(4) Common carriers have no right to close their offices, & refuse to receive goods which are tendered to them with the proper amount for carriage, while at the same time they continue to receive goods, prepared, assorted and packed in the same manner, from a particular individual.

(5) By 6 Will. 4, c. xxxvi., the B. Railway Co. were incorporated, & the co. were empowered to charge for the carriage of parcels. By 8 & 9 Vict. c. clv., s. 91, amending 6 Will. 4, c. xxxvi., the co. were authorised to charge at so much per ton per mile:—Held: this provision overrides the provisions of 6 Will. 4, c. xxxvi., so far as concerned parcels exceeding 500 lbs. in weight, but not as to parcels below that weight.

(6) The co. obliged pltfs. to pay more than the maximum amount allowed by 8 & 9 Vict. c. clv., s. 19:—Held: the excess paid on all parcels exceeding 500 lbs. in weight might be recovered back.

(7) Common carriers cannot, in addition to the charges for the carriage of goods between the place where the goods are handed to them, & the place where they are ordered to be delivered, charge for collection & delivery, where they have not, in fact, collected or delivered the goods. Such charges, if imposed, & paid under protest, may be recovered back.

(8) Defts., being common carriers from B. to E., & also from B. to B., charged pltfs., who employed them to carry goods between those places, higher rates than were charged to other persons:—Held: the sums paid in excess of the sums charged to other people could not be recovered by pltfs., under a count for money had & received, on the ground simply that the charges made by the co. were unequal.

(9) Defts., being common carriers, were in the habit of charging certain rates upon the aggregate weight of parcels containing the same kind of goods, & brought at one time, by any one of the public, not being a common carrier; but when pltfs., who were common carriers, sent a number of such packages in one parcel addressed to pltfs., but each of such packages addressed separately to the person to whom it was to be sent, defts. insisted upon charging for each parcel separately:—Held: such a mode of charging was improper, & pltfs. might recover the amount so improperly charged to them.

(10) Defts., sometimes intentionally, & sometimes by mistake, charged pltfs. heavier rates than were set out in the bills published by them:—Held: pltfs. could recover back the excess paid.

(11) By 6 Will. 4, c. xxxvi., s. 188, the co. was to paint on boards an account of the several rates & tolls to be taken by them, & to affix such boards upon the toll-houses, &c.; and by s. 189, the co. were not to take any rates or tolls, &c., except during the time that the board should be so affixed:—Held: the omission to put up such boards did not prevent defts. from recovering such sums of money as they had a right to charge, & pltfs. could not, as a result of such omission, recover back such sums as they had been charged.

(12) Semble: the enactment in s. 188 did not apply at all to the tolls charged for the carriage of goods in the carriages of defts.—GARTON v. BRISTOL & EXETER RY. CO. (1861), 1 B. & S. 112; 30 L. J. Q. B. 273; 26 J. P. 54; 7 Jur. N. S. 1234; 9 W. R. 734; 121 E. R. 656.

59. ——.]—(1) In the absence of an express contract, the obligation of a carrier of goods is to carry them according to the usual route professed by him to the public & to deliver them within a reasonable time.

(2) On Wednesday, Aug. 7, defts., a railway co., received goods from pltf. to be carried from A. to B. near S. " by luggage train," pltf. having contracted to supply them on hire at B. on Saturday, Aug. 10. The ordinary practice of defts., if goods did not make a truck load, was to send them to N., which was farther from B. than S. is from N.; they might be sent either by railway to S., from which there is a carrier to B. daily, or direct to B. by a carrier on Tuesdays & Thursdays. Defts. sent the goods, which were not a truck load, to N., and kept them there from Friday till Tuesday, & then sent them by the carrier to B., where they arrived on Wednesday. Pltf. did not inform defts. that it was important that the goods should arrive at B. on Aug. 10, nor was it known to pltf. that the goods, if a truck load, would have been sent direct to S. In an action to recover the loss of the hire of his goods & for personal expenses in inquiring for them, the jury having found that the delay at N. was unreasonable:—Held: pltf. was entitled to the latter damages, but not to the former.

62. —— Country in disturbed condition.]—Deft., a common carrier to & from B. through W. to R. employed distinct boats to carry to & from B. to R. & to & from B. to W. which passed on different days. Pltf. knowing this, & having corn at W. which was threatened to be seized by a mob, wrote to deft. at B. to send a private boat quickly on account of the state of the country, to take the corn to B., to which deft. not returning any answer, & pltf. fearing to wait till the day deft.'s boat would in the usual course of employment go from W. to B. stopped the boat passing by from R. to B., & without disclosing the circumstances to the boatman prevailed on him to take the corn on board, & then dispatched him forward in the night, having privately sent orders to open the lock at any time when he should pass. After a verdict for deft. negativing that the corn was delivered in the usual course of dealing as a common carrier:—Held: the verdict might be sustained, either on the general ground of fraud in pltf., or on the circumstances of the case, furnishing altogether evidence of a tacit stipulation on the part of deft. to do the best he could, but not to be answerable as a common carrier for the violence of the mob; or because it did not appear that the boatman, whose ordinary employment was between R. & B. had authority from deft. to accept the goods at W. for B., much less to accept them in that manner.—EDWARDS v. SHERRATT (1801), 1 East, 604; 102 E. SECT. 2.—CHARGE FOR CARRIAGE.

65. Must be reasonable—Charge for valuable goods.]—HARRIS v. PACKWOOD, No. 295, post.

66. —— According to value of goods.]—(1) A carrier is bound to convey goods only on payment of the full price, which depends on their value, for the carriage, & if not paid, it is competent to him to limit his liability by special contract.

(2) A carrier, who receives valuable goods, after notice to the bailor that he will not be responsible for loss or damage, unless a higher than the ordinary rate of insurance is paid for the carriage of such goods, does so on the terms of such notice; but a carrier is not exempted thereby from all responsibility; he is, notwithstanding his notice, bound to take ordinary care in the conveyance, & is liable not only for a total abandonment of his character or wilful negligence, but also for a conversion by mis-delivery, which has arisen from inadvertence or mistake, if such inadvertence or mistake might have been avoided by the exercise of ordinary care.

(3) Semble: in such case the burden of proof would lie on pltf.

Declaration in case. The first count stated a delivery to defts., at their request, of a case containing certain maps to be carried, &c., alleging a receipt thereof by defts., whereby it became their duty to take due & proper care thereof; breach, that defts. did not take due & proper care thereof, whereby the goods were lost. The second count was in trover. Plea, to the first count, that at the time of delivery of the case & its contents, defts. were common carriers for hire, & then gave notice to pltf., who then had notice & knowledge that defts. would not be responsible for the loss of or damage done to certain goods & chattels, delivered to them for the purpose of carriage, & amongst others, maps in packages or otherwise, unless the same were insured according to their value, & paid for at the time of delivery; that the case was the package in which the maps were contained; that they received the case & maps to be carried upon the terms & conditions of the notice, of which pltf. at the time of delivery had notice; & that the maps were not at the time of delivery insured according to their value, or paid for. To the count in trover, there was a similar plea, alleging the conversion to have been by a mis-delivery, through mistake & inadvertence. On special demurrer to both pleas:—Held: (4) the action being on a breach of duty arising ex contractu, the allegation in the pleas of a special contract, was sufficient; & as defts. accepted the goods only on the terms of the notice, a special averment of pltf.'s consent was unnecessary; the third plea was not an argumentative traverse of the facts in the declaration from which the breach of duty was implied; as the declaration might apply to any kind of negligence, it was not necessary to allege in the third plea, that the loss was occasioned by such negligence as defts. were not responsible for; & if defts. had committed negligence for which they were liable, notwithstanding their notice, pltf. should have new assigned it; (5) the case itself was not separable from the maps; (6) the plea to the count in trover could not be supported, inasmuch as it admitted a conversion by inadvertent delivery, & did not show that the inadvertence was such as was protected by the notice.—WYLD v. PICKFORD (1841), 8 M. & W. 443; 10 L. 67. —— Packed parcels.]—A railway co. by their Act of incorporation were empowered to fix the sum to be charged by them in respect of the carriage of small parcels, not exceeding 100 lbs. each, as to them should seem proper; but that provision did not extend to articles, matters, or things sent in large aggregate quantities, although made up of separate & distinct parcels, such as bags of sugar, coffee, meal, & the like, but only to single parcels unconnected with parcels of a like nature which might be sent upon the railway at the same time. A subsequent Act provided that the charges by that Act authorised to be made for the carriage of goods, &c., by the co., should be at all times charged equally to all persons, & after the same rate, in respect of all goods of a like description & conveyed on the same portion of the line; & that no reduction or advance should be made either directly or indirectly in favour of or against any particular co. or person:—Held: the co. were restricted to a reasonable charge, & were not justified in making an increased charge in respect of the conveyance of packed parcels, the jury having negatived that they incurred any additional risk or expense in the carriage thereof.—PIDDINGTON v. SOUTH EASTERN RY. 70. Equality to all customers.]—A railway co. were impowered by s. 175 of their act of incorporation (6 & 7 Will. 4, c. cvi.) to charge certain tonnage-rates or tolls for all articles, matters, & things carried or conveyed along the line, & by ss. 177, 179, to provide locomotive or other power for the carriage & conveyance of passengers, cattle, goods, &c., & to make reasonable charges for such carriage & conveyance, in addition to the tonnage-rates. By s. 182, the co. might from time to time make such orders for fixing, & by such orders fix, the sum to be charged by them in respect of small parcels, not exceeding 1 cwt. each, as to them should seem proper. By s. 186, the rates & tolls to be taken by virtue of the act were at all times to be charged equally & after the same rate per ton throughout the whole of the railway, in respect of the same description of articles, matters, or things, & no reduction or advance in the rates & tolls might either directly or indirectly be made partially or in favour of or against any particular person or co. Under s. 182, the co. framed a scale of charges for the carriage of parcels not exceeding 1 cwt. each, which were higher than the tonnage-rates warranted by s. 175, but included a reasonable charge for the use of their carriages & locomotive power under ss. 177, 179. Under this scale, where a number of separate parcels, each weighing less than 1 cwt., but exceeding 1 cwt. if taken in the aggregate, were brought to the railway by the same person, & containing the same article, & all directed to the same person at their place of destination, the co. charged the tonnage or lower rate by s. 175, but, if similar parcels were brought addressed to several different persons, they were charged the higher or parcels rate :—Held : (1) there was nothing to induce the ct., or which ought to induce a jury, to infer that the charges so made were unreasonable, regard being had to the additional trouble incurred by the co.

(2) Semble : s. 186 applied to small parcels.

(3) Though limited to a reasonable charge, there is no common-law obligation on a carrier to charge equal rates of carriage to all his customers.

75. To carry & deliver safely—Robbery.]—In an account pltf. declared that he delivered goods to deft. to merchandise for him; the deft. said that the goods with divers other of his own proper goods were taken at sea where he was robbed of them. It was moved that this was no plea in bar of an account, but if it be any plea it shall be a plea before auditors in discharge:—Held: it was a good plea before auditors; there is a difference between carriers & other servants & factors: for carriers are paid for their carriage & take upon them safely to carry & deliver the things received.—ANON. 88. —— —— Events excepted.]—(1) Deft., a common carrier by sea from L. to A., received from pltf. a mare to be carried to A. for hire. In the course of the voyage the ship encountered rough weather, & the mare received such injuries that she died. The jury found that the injuries were caused partly by more than ordinary bad weather, & partly by the conduct of the mare herself by reason of fright & consequent struggling, without any negligence of deft.'s servants :—Held : deft. was not liable for the death of the mare.

The carrier does not insure against the irresistible act of nature, nor against defects in the thing carried itself; if he can show that either the act of nature or the defect of the thing itself, or both taken together, formed the sole direct & irresistible cause of the loss, he is discharged. In order to show that the cause of the loss was irresistible it is not necessary to prove that it was absolutely impossible for the carrier to prevent it, but it is sufficient to prove that by no reasonable precaution under the circumstances could it have been prevented.

(2) A shipowner, who is not a common carrier, is not subject to the liability of a common carrier; that is, he does not insure the goods bailed to him for carriage (COCKBURN, C.J.).

(3) A loss is a loss by the act of God if it is occasioned by the elementary forces of nature unconnected with the agency of man or other cause; & a common carrier is entitled to immunity in respect of loss so occasioned if he can show that it could not have been prevented by any amount of foresight, pains & care reasonably to be required of him.—NUGENT v. SMITH (1876), 1 C. 90. —— —— Duty to protect during transit.]—Pltfs., purchasers of calico goods lying at K.'s works in B., requested K. to forward the goods to them at M. In 1903 K. who had private sidings connecting with the L. Railway, entered into an agreement with the railway co. in accordance with Schedule of Maximum Rates & Charges, s. 4, to their Confirmation Act, whereby K. performed for himself the services of loading & sheeting goods consigned in separate trucks from his sidings to the railway co. for carriage, the co. supplying the trucks & the sheets, & was allowed by the co. a rebate off the charge for carriage in respect of these services. By a consignment note of 1917, K. consigned calico goods, ready loaded & sheeted, in a truck to the co. for carriage & delivery to pltfs. at M., pltfs. to pay carriage, & the co. signed an acknowledgment on the consignment note that the goods were received in good condition. On delivery the co. charged pltfs. at a rate which included the loading & sheeting. The goods were damaged by water during the transit owing to defects in the sheet by which they were covered. Pltfs., who had no knowledge of the agreement of 1903, sued the co. for damages:—Held: the co. were liable to pltfs. for the damage caused by the defective sheeting, either as common carriers or under the contract contained in the consignment note, irrespectively of the private agreement between the co. & K. as to terminal services.—LONDON & NORTH WESTERN RY. There was another vessel of defts.' alongside the pier, & it was the usual & most safe course for the steam-boat so approaching to stop until the other vessel had left. On this occasion the steam-boat with the boat in tow was twice stopped, in consequence of the stopping of the other vessel, & on the second time of stopping the tide lifted up the tow-boat & pitched it on the rudder of the steam-boat, whereby the tow-boat sprung a leak, & pltf.'s goods were damaged. There was no negligence on the part of the captains of either vessel :—Held : the damage was not caused by the act of God ; & defts. were liable.

B. King's Enemies.

114. Exception—Unjustifiable deviation—Breach of special contract.]—Pltfs. were holders for value of two bills of lading for a quantity of wool shipped in N. Z. for L., by a vessel belonging to defts. The bills of lading had in the margin the following words : "Direct Service between N. Z. & L." They were headed "Steam from N. Z. to L.," & proceeded in the following terms : "Shipped in good order & condition by . . . . on board the SS. T. . . . now lying in N., N. Z. & bound for L. . . ., with liberty to proceed to & stay at any port or ports . . . in N. Z. . . . & bound . . . on finally leaving N. Z. for L., & with liberty on the way to London to call & stay at any intermediate port or ports to discharge or take on board passengers, cargo, coal or other supplies, with permission, if desired, for the vessel to call at R. &/or M. &/or P. for the purpose of taking on board coal, supplies &/or cargo &/or live stock, & to sail with or without pilots, & to tow & assist vessels in all situations, the following goods" (goods described) "to be delivered subject to all the above liberties to deviate & to the exceptions & conditions at foot hereof, in like good order & condition, at L." Clause 1 of the exceptions & conditions excepted (inter alia) the King's enemies. After pltfs.' goods had been shipped, defts. took on board a parcel of frozen meat for H., which was not one of their usual ports of call. When the vessel was about seven miles from H. she was torpedoed by a German submarine, & sank with her cargo. By going to H. the length of the voyage to L. was increased by fifty-four miles, & no ship belonging to defts. had ever gone there before. In an action by pltfs. to recover from defts. the value of the wool :—Held : (1) inasmuch as the usual ports of call for defts.' line had become well known, & did not include H., that port was not an intermediate port within the meaning of the liberty reserved in the bills of lading ; there had been an unjustifiable deviation, & defts. could not rely on the exception of the King's enemies contained in the bills of lading ; (2) as defts., in deviating were committing a breach of their contract as carriers when the loss occurred, they could not rely on the implied common law exception of the King's, enemies, & were therefore liable to pltfs. for the loss of the goods.—MORRISON (JAMES) & CO. C. Inherent Defects.

115. General rule.]—A common carrier is not liable for an injury to goods caused by an inherent latent defect in the goods themselves, the existence of which was unknown both to the sender and the carrier.

Defts. contracted with pltf. as common carriers to carry for him an engine from his yard to a neighbouring town on defts.' railway. The engine was on wheels & fitted with shafts to allow of its being drawn by horses. While defts. were drawing the engine with their horses to the railway station one of the shafts, owing to its being rotten, broke; the horses took fright & upset the engine, which was damaged. The defective condition of the shaft was not known to either pltf. or defts., & could not have been discovered by any ordinary examination:—Held: as the engine was not in fact fit to be carried in the way in which it was intended to be carried, & the damage resulted in consequence of that unfitness, defts. were excused. —LISTER v. LANCASHIRE & YORKSHIRE RY. D. Improper Packing.

120. Knowledge of carrier—Question of fact.]—In an action against carriers for injury to casks of oil, alleged by them to have arisen from defects in the casks, it was left to the jury whether it arose from such defects, & whether, even if it did, defts. knew or ought to have known thereof, & had acted negligently in sending them on in that state.

The questions left to the jury were (1) did the damage occur while in defts.' possession from any inherent defects in the casks themselves; (2) if there were defects in the casks, had defts. knowledge, or reasonable means of knowledge, of such defects, & did the damage arise from such defects; (3) in the event of their opinion on the other two being adverse to pltfs., i.e. if defts. had not notice of any defects in the casks at the time of loading, but had such notice when they arrived at the goods' station, were they guilty of negligence, in fact, in forwarding them in their then state.—COX v. LONDON & NORTH WESTERN RY. 121. —— Carrier not informed — Nominal damages.]—On Dec. 19, 1881, eighteen bales marked "Rags" were delivered by pltfs. in L. to defts. for conveyance to W., where in the ordinary course they should have been delivered within twenty-four hours. By mistake they were forwarded to another place, & did not reach W. until Jan. 4, 1882, when, finding them to have become heated, through being packed in a damp state, & therefore unfit for the manufacture of paper, the consignees rejected them; ultimately the rags were found useless for any purpose, & were destroyed. There was an admitted breach of duty on the part of defts., & it was conceded that the rags would have sustained no injury if they had been packed dry:—Held: pltfs. were entitled to a verdict but for nominal damages only, on the ground that the loss was attributable to pltfs.' own act in packing the rags in a damp state, without informing defts. that special care was necessary.—BALDWIN v. LONDON, CHATHAM & DOVER RY. 122. —— Immaterial.]—Where goods are delivered to a common carrier for carriage insufficiently packed, & are damaged in the course of the transit, the carrier's knowledge of their condition at the time of their receipt will not preclude him from setting up as a defence that the damage was due to the insufficient packing.—GOULD v. SOUTH EASTERN & CHATHAM RY. Neglect of consignor—Carriers not liable.]—Pltf. intending to send furniture by defts.' railway to D. wrote for rates, & subsequently, whether the rates included packing & unpacking; the rates were forwarded with an extract of the notice & conditions relating to the terms on which goods could be forwarded, one of which was that the co. would not be responsible for improper packing. There was also a notice that no officer of the co. had power to dispense with the conditions. Defts. declined the packing & unpacking. When their carman, in pursuance of instructions from pltf., arrived to fetch away the furniture it was found not to be packed, although there were materials at hand for the purpose; & as the carman declined to undertake the packing himself, it was conveyed away unprotected, & suffered damage during transit to D. It was found as a fact that the damage was occasioned by improper packing:—Held: it was pltf.'s duty to pack the furniture, & as the damage was occasioned by his neglect to do so, he was not entitled to recover compensation from defts.—BARBOUR v. SOUTH EASTERN RY. 130. ———.]—Declaration in case against the owners of a ferry stated, that defts. were possessed of a ferry across the river M., from W. to L., & that pltfs. delivered to them a phaeton, & certain jewellery & watches contained in it, to be by defts., for reward taken care of & carried in a steam-boat from W. to L., & there landed for pltfs.; that defts. accepted & received the carriage containing the jewellery & watches from pltfs., & it became their duty to take proper care of them while they remained in their custody, & in the carriage, conveyance, & landing of them. Breach, that defts. took such bad care of the carriage, jewellery, & watches, & so negligently conducted themselves that they were injured. Plea, that pltfs. did not deliver to defts., nor did they accept & receive from pltfs., the goods in the declaration mentioned:—Held: (1) a contract to carry & land the carriage & jewellery, as stated in the declaration, could not be implied from the mere character of defts. as owners of the ferry; it was a question for the jury, whether there was in fact a contract between the parties, either express or implied from usage, to receive the carriage on board, & to land it again at the end of the transit across the river.

Pltf. had gone on board deft's. steam-boat, with his horse & carriage, paying defts.' charge for a "light four-wheeled phaeton;" the jewellery & watches, which much increased its weight, were contained in a box under the seat, & he made no communication of that fact to defts. The carriage was taken safely across the river, & on the arrival of the boat at the pier head at L., two of defts.' servants put the carriage out upon the slip, & commenced drawing it up the slip towards the quay, but in doing so were overpowered by its weight, & it ran down into the river, whereby the jewellery & watches were injured:—Held: (2) pltf.'s right of action for this injury was not affected by his not having communicated the fact of the jewellery & watches being contained in the carriage; (3) it was a question for the jury, supposing a contract to land were established, whether the landing was complete in the above circumstances; (4) to rebut evidence of a usage to take on board & land the carriages of passengers, a notice stuck up at the door of entrance for foot passengers to the slip at W., but not visible to those who came with carriages, nor shown to have been known to pltf., that defts. did not undertake to load or discharge horses or carriages, & would not be responsible for loss or damage thereto, was not admissible.—WALKER v. JACKSON (1842), 10 M. & W. 161; 12 L. One of defts.' usual conditions was that they would not be responsible for articles unless the value was previously declared, & in no event would they be liable for more than £20. At the bank defts.' messenger was given a sealed envelope to take to pltf. The envelope contained £140 in bank-notes, & the messenger lost it on the way. In an action by pltf. against defts. for breach of contract or negligence, the jury found that the loss was caused by negligence, that defts. did not give pltf. reasonable notice of their conditions, that pltf. was content to employ defts. without asking their terms, & that pltf.'s request that the messenger should bring a reply from the bank was not sufficient notice to defts. that the messenger would have to bring a considerable sum of money from the bank:—Held: though the condition was reasonable, yet the mere fact that pltf. asked defts. to undertake certain work did not amount to asking them to undertake it on their usual terms, & though defts. had no notice that their messenger would have to carry a large sum of money, yet if a carrier took delivery of a parcel & asked no question he was bound to carry it as it was, & therefore defts. were liable to pltf. for the value of the notes.—LONG v. DISTRICT MESSENGER & THEATRE TICKET CO., LTD. Second count:—that the defts. as a railway co., having received from the pltf. certain horses to be conveyed by them on their said railway for hire, in consequence of the defective state of the trucks provided by defts. & their negligence & want of care pltf.'s horses were injured. Defts. paid £25 into court, & pltf. claimed damages ultra. At the trial it appeared that before defts. would furnish the trucks, pltf. was requested by them to sign & did sign, a declaration that the value of each horse did not exceed £10, &, in consequence of the rate charged for conveyance, that he agreed they were to be carried entirely at the owner's risk. Evidence was given for pltf. that the horses were worth more than £10 each, & it was admitted that if taken at their real value, £40 was the amount of compensation pltf. would be entitled to, but if £10 each then £25 was the right amount:—Held: (1) the declaration as to the value of the horses, signed by pltf. was no part of the contract; that even if it were it did not vary or qualify in substance the contract declared upon; (2) the ct., as a jury, taking into consideration the evidence & admitted facts, might treat it as a declaration untrue to pltf.'s knowledge, made by him for the purpose of inducing & by which he did induce defts. to contract to carry on terms involving the assumption of its truth; and that therefore the pltf. ought not to recover more than the £25 paid into ct.; (3) the latter part of the declaration signed by pltf., namely, that the horses were to be carried entirely at the owner's risk, was a condition unreasonable & void within Railway & Land Traffic Act, 1854 (s. 31), but (4) the former part, that the value of the seven horses did not exceed £10 per horse, was not thereby vitiated, & might be relied on by defts.—M'CANCE v. LONDON & NORTH WESTERN RY. The bill of lading, as tendered by pltfs. for signature, described the contents of the case as linen goods; but before signing the captain impressed upon it with a stamp the words "weight, value, & contents unknown." The freight charged for silk was higher than that charged for linen goods, & the freight for the goods so delivered was that for linen goods; but pltfs. represented the goods to be linen inadvertently & without fraudulent intention. On the ship's arrival at her destination it was found that two pieces of silk had been abstracted from the case. In an action by pltfs. against defts. as common carriers for non-delivery of the silk goods so lost:—Held: the result of the addition of the words "weight, value, & contents unknown" to the bill of lading was completely to do away with the effect of the description of the goods as linen, & defts.' contract was to carry the case & its contents, whatever they might be, & pltfs. were entitled to maintain the action.

146 i. Excuses for delay—Unusual course of business adopted—Truck not forwarded.]—Pltf., Sept. 10, delivered machinery to defts. at D., addressed to & to be delivered at the agricultural show yard at W. where an agricultural show was then being held. In the ordinary course of traffic the machinery would have reached W. Sept. 11. The machinery was sent from D. in due course, but when it arrived at B. the rails were in a slippery condition, & a great increase of traffic had taken place. Defts.' servants therefore uncoupled the trucks containing the machinery, & substituted trucks which had been left behind by a previous train. The machinery was delayed till a late train, & arrived too late for the show. Defts. had taken no precaution to provide for the additional traffic, though they might have anticipated it :—Held : the machinery had not been delivered within a reasonable time & defts. were liable.—WALLACE v. GREAT SOUTHERN & WESTERN RY. pltf. at their station at W. a quantity of fruit for transit by railway from W. to C., & dispatched it from W. by a goods train which arrived, in due course, at 5.45 p.m. on Friday at their station at L., where their line of railway ends, & whence goods, booked by them for C., have to be transferred from their station to the goods station of the Midland Ry. Co. at L., a short distance off from defts.' station. Had pltf.'s fruit been so transferred at any time before 8 p.m. that evening, which would have taken about half an hour to do, it would have been sent on by a Midland goods train that night, & have arrived at C. early on Saturday morning. It being, however, the custom for defts.' servants to leave work at L. station at 6 p.m. every evening, the fruit in question was, according to the usual course in such cases, kept at defts.' station all that night, & was not transferred to the Midland station until Saturday morning, & consequently did not arrive at C. until Sunday. There was a conflict of testimony as to the terms of the contract, pltf. swearing that the stationmaster at W. undertook that the fruit should be at C. in time for the particular market, whilst the latter denied giving any such undertaking; but he did indorse a memorandum on the waybill of these goods "Forward immediately —wanted for market on Saturday. . . ." Defts. also set up a contract under the consignment note, which pltf. had signed, & contended that the goods had been sent on according to their ordinary course of business:—Held: defts. were negligent in not sending on the goods to the Midland station the same evening; it was not a reasonable course of business in them to keep at their station until the following morning goods marked in the waybill to be "forwarded immediately."—SHARP v. NORTH EASTERN RY. 150. —— Reasonable facilities provided—Train late in starting.]—An action was brought against a railway co. for non-delivery of goods within a reasonable time. The goods, which consisted of poultry in four hampers, arrived at the station at one minute after 11 o'clock, the train by which they were to be forwarded being advertised to leave at 11. The porters had to attend to a passenger train which ought to have left at 10.56 but in point of fact did not leave until 11.3. After that passenger train left, porters came & attended to pltf.'s goods, which were then weighed & booked & taken to the platform to be placed in the train, but the train which was eight minutes late in starting, went off before the goods could be placed in it. The goods were then forwarded by the next train at 1.25 & arrived at their destination in the afternoon. They had been ordered by pltf.'s customers for use on that day, but no notice of that had been given to defts.:—Held: the railway co. were not liable; they had, in the circumstances, afforded pltf. all reasonable facilities for the forwarding of the goods.—NICHOLLS v. NORTH EASTERN RY. CO. (1888), 59 L. T. 137; 4 T. L. R. 464, D. C.

151. —— Strike of carrier's servants.]—Perishable goods were consigned by defts.' railway for delivery to pltfs. no time being specified within which the goods were to be delivered. During the transit a general strike of railway servants, including defts.' servants, broke out, & defts. were unable to forward the goods to their destination. There was no evidence that the strike was caused or contributed to by defts. The goods becoming deteriorated, defts. sold them. In an action to recover damages for breach of contract to deliver the goods:—Held: in calculating what was a reasonable time for delivery, the strike of defts.' servants must be taken into consideration as one of the circumstances existing at the time of the carriage, & defts. were not liable for the delay.

Semble: the doctrine as to sale by an agent of necessity applies to a carrier by land as well as by sea, provided that the necessary conditions exist, namely, that there is a real necessity for the sale, & that it is practically impossible to get the owner's instructions in time as to what shall be done.—SIMS & CO. v. MIDLAND RY. 152. Who liable for delay—Goods sent over several systems.]—There is a junction between the L. & N. W. Ry. Co. & the N. S. Co., near to C. station of the former. An arrangement was entered into between the two cos., under which goods received by one co. to be delivered at a station on the line of the other, were delivered to such other co. at the junction. Certain goods were delivered to the L. & N. W. Co., at their station at C. to be carried to a station on the N. S. Ry., & they were taken by the L. & N. W. Co. to the junction, & there delivered to the N. S. Co. to be forwarded to their destination. A delay took place on the line of the N. S. Co., & an action was brought against them to recover damages:—Held: the N. S. Ry. Co. were not the agents of the L. & N. W. Ry. Co., & the action lay against them.

Semble: the action might also have been maintained against the L. & N. W. Co.—CAWLEY v. NORTH STAFFORDSHIRE RY. CO. (1856), 26 L. T. O. S. 222; 20 J. P. 72.

153. —— —— Land & sea.]—(1) On a contract made in a foreign country with carriers for the conveyance of goods to this country, & a breach of duty by negligence, causing an injury, in that country, no question being raised as to the lex loci contractus, it was left to the jury, upon an express contract, & upon evidence as to the course of business, & the other facts in the case, as occurring abroad, to form a judgment as to whether there had been such negligence as would be a breach of duty in the carrier, & as to what would be reasonable in such circumstances.

(2) In case of carriers undertaking expressly to send goods into England, the jury were directed that this meant in a reasonable time, & that the default of carriers by sea employed by them to carry the goods would be no excuse for a delay to ship them in such time, or for damage done by the weather, either on the quay or on the passage, which might have been avoided by reasonable care & due despatch.

155. Effect of delay—Consignee may refuse goods.]—Pltf., a travelling hawker of ready-made clothes for sale to retail dealers, delivered at defts.' station at C. on Nov. 18 a truss of goods to be carried to S., directed to pltf. at S., to be called for, & was told by the booking clerk at C. that the transit would take two days. Upon calling at the station at S. on Nov. 20 he was told that the goods had not arrived. He called again on several occasions between that & Nov. 29, & on each occasion received the same answer, and on calling there for the last time on Nov. 29, & finding that the goods had not come, he told the station master that he was going back to L., & the goods would now be of no use to him, & he should not take them. The present action was then brought on Dec. 4, & the first count of the declaration charged a delivery of the goods to defts. to be carried by them from C. to S., & there to be delivered to pltf. for reward, etc.; yet defts. did not safely, etc., carry the said goods from C. to S., nor there deliver the same, but therein made default, & by their neglect, etc., in that behalf, the goods had never been delivered by them to pltf., although the time for doing so had long since elapsed. There was also a second count in detinue. Defts. pleaded, amongst other pleas, as to so much of the first count as alleged non-delivery within a reasonable time, payment into ct. of £5 as sufficient to satisfy the claim of pltf. in respect of the matter therein pleaded to. Pltf. accepted the money paid in, in full satisfaction of his claim in respect of the matter to which the said plea was pleaded, & continued his action:—Held: (1) pltf. having waited several days in vain for the arrival of the goods had a right in point of law to say to defts., "I will not now accept them; if you have them here now at this moment I am ready to take them, but if you have them not here now, I will not accept them, you must keep them yourselves, & pay me the value"; (2) the first count of the declaration was a count, not only for damages for unreasonable delay in delivery, but also for non-delivery of the goods altogether, & comprised a cause of action which was not satisfied by pltf.'s acceptance of the money paid into ct.—LEVENE v. GREAT WESTERN RY. The goods in question were, however, in compliance with the direction on the packages, carried no further than H., an intermediate station, where they were put on board a steamer, by which they were taken to B., & from B. to W. by another railway co. By defts.' published books of rates the rate charged included collection & delivery within the free cartage boundary only at a station where the cos. had a staff for that purpose. On arriving at D. station the boat was unloaded from the railway trucks on which it was carried by men sent by pltfs. to receive it, with the help of a crane lent for the purpose by the G. Ry. Co. The chain of this crane broke, & the boat was damaged. The jury having found that the crane was in a defective condition owing to the negligence of the G. Ry. Pltf.'s drover signed a way-bill, which contained a condition that for the convenience of the owner the co. would receive the shares payable to other cos. for conveyance of such cattle over their lines of railway, but the co. would not be subject to liability for any loss, delay, default or damage arising on such other railway. One sum was charged for the carriage, which was to be paid at B. The oxen were placed in trucks belonging to the G. Co., & on the arrival of the train at W. it was found that the bottom of one of the trucks was broken, & one of the oxen dead, & the others injured:—Held: this was one contract with the S. Ry. 165. —— —— Or forwarding carrier—If guilty of negligence.]—Pltf. desired to send a cow from D. to S., & took her to the station at D., belonging to the G. Co., where he booked her for S. by defts.' railway. He signed a contract, under which it was agreed between him & the G. Co. that they should not be responsible for any loss or injury to cattle, in the delivering, if such damage should be occasioned by kicking, plunging, or restiveness. The cow was put into a truck belonging to defts., & on arriving at S. was brought to a siding by defts.' yard for the purpose of being unloaded. A porter in charge of the yard began to unfasten the truck. Pltf. thereupon warned him not to let the cow out, as she would run at him; nevertheless he did let her out; she ran about the yard, & ultimately got on to the line & was killed. By an agreement between defts. & the G. Co. it was provided that a complete & full system of interchange of traffic in passengers, goods, parcels, etc., should be established from all parts of one co. & beyond its limits to all parts of the other co. & beyond its limits, with through tickets, through rates, & invoices & interchange of stock at junctions; the stock of the two cos. being treated as one stock. . . . That the two cos. should aid & assist each other in every possible way, as if the whole concerns of both cos. were amalgamated. In an action brought against defts. for the loss of the cow, the ct. having power to draw inferences:—Held: (1) the action was rightly brought, inasmuch as the agreement, if it did not constitute a partnership between the two cos., showed that the G. Co. became the agents of defts. to make the contract for the carriage of the cow; (2) the condition in the contract did not relieve defts. from liability for negligence on the part of their servants in delivering the cow; (3) the inference to be drawn from the facts was that there was negligence on the part of defts.' porter; & they were liable to pltf. for the loss of the cow.—GILL v. MANCHESTER, SHEFFIELD & LINCOLNSHIRE RY. 168. —— To servant—Authority to accept.]—(1) If a parcel be given to a waggoner for him to carry for his own gain, & not for the profit of his master, the master is not liable in case the parcel be lost.

(2) If a box of clothes, packed by the party's own hand, be sent by a carrier, & lost, the judge will recommend the jury to give the fair value of it in damages, although what particular articles the box contained cannot be proved.

(3) A delivery of the parcel to any of the meanest of their servants is quite sufficient, provided that servant, in receiving parcels, be acting by the authority or with the assent of his master (GARROW, B.).—BUTLER v. BASING (1827), 2 C. & P. 613, N. P.

(2) Under Carriers' Act, 1830 (c. 68), s. 1, there must be an express formal declaration of the value of pictures, etc., to the value of more than £10, sent by a carrier; it is not enough that the carrier had a conviction as to what the contents of a package were.

He left it at an inn in M., where defts.' & many other coaches were in the habit of calling for parcels to be conveyed to L. The inn-keeper delivered the parcel to defts.' coachman, who paid him for the carriage from B. to M.:—Held: defts. were liable to pltf., in an action of assumpsit, for the loss of the parcel.

(2) An inn where a coach regularly stops to receive & deliver parcels, is a receiving-house within Carriers' Act, 1830 (c. 68), although other coaches stop there for the same purpose, & although the inn-keeper keeps but one general booking-book for all the coaches, & uses his own discretion as to the coach by which the parcel is sent.

176. Tender—Delivery refused by master of ship.]—An agreement to load on ship-board seven casks of brandy, is well performed when the master refuses to take them on board by bringing them to the warehouse or the quay from which the vessel takes in her cargo, & offering them to the party there to send them on board; for being cumbersome goods the tender is sufficient if they be brought to a place from whence they may be well received, & need not be carried to the ship's side.—STONE v. GILLIAM (1690), 1 Show. 149; 89 E. 178. Special contract—Railway delivery agent.]—Pltf. delivered to defts., a railway co., certain goods to be carried, & took from them a receipt note which stated that the goods were to be conveyed by the co. as below, & on the conditions stated on the other side. The note stated that B. was the station from which, & P. the station to which the goods were to be conveyed, but below the name of the consignee, pltf., was added in pencil his address at C., which was beyond the immediate vicinity of the goods station at P. The conditions stated, that goods addressed to consignees resident beyond the immediate vicinity of the co.'s goods station would be forwarded by public carrier, or otherwise, as opportunity might offer; but that the delivery of the goods by the co. would be considered as complete, & the responsibility of the co. cease, when such carriers received the goods, & that any money received by the co. as payments for the conveyance of goods by other carriers beyond their own railway, would be received as for the convenience of the consignors, to be paid to such other carriers, & not as a charge made by the co. upon the goods as carriers beyond their own railway. Notice was also given in the conditions, that the co. would not be responsible for any loss or damage to goods occurring beyond the limits of their railway. The goods in question arrived safely at P., & were there delivered to a person appointed by defts. to collect & deliver goods beyond the limits of the railway, & by the negligence of his servants they were damaged before they were delivered to the pltf. at C. The declaration alleged a delivery of the goods to be carried from B. to C.:—Held: a fatal variance, for the contract with defts. ceased upon the arrival of the goods at P., & defts. were not liable for the subsequent damage.—FOWLES v. GREAT WESTERN RY. Co. (1852), 7 Exch. 699; 7 Ry. & Can. Cas. 421; 22 L. J. Ex. 76; 19 L. T. O. S. 67; 155 E. R. 1129.

SUB-SECT. 2.—AT WHAT PLACE.

181. Place to which directed—Direction defaced owing to own neglect.]—(1) A carrier is bound to deliver goods, if it be the general course of his trade so to do.

[Defts.'] general course of trade was to deliver goods at the houses to which they were directed; . . . they received a premium, & kept a servant for that special purpose. This box came directed to their warehouse at B. . . . The direction was afterwards defaced owing to their own neglect. They had [the consignee's] name in their way-bill, & might have found him out by their directory.

PART III. SECT. 7, SUB-SECT. 1.

177 i. To wharfinger—Custom.]—To an action for not delivering goods shipped on board defts.' vessel, to be delivered to pltfs. at T., defts. pleaded that they carried the goods to T., & there being no person there on pltfs.' behalf to receive the goods, or to whom notice of arrival could be given, & no means of notifying pltfs., who lived at a distance, defts. landed the goods at the only wharf there, where it was customary to land goods, & placed them in charge of the person in charge of the wharf, so far as he would consent to take charge of them:—Held: the plea constituted no defence.—CLOSE v. BEATTY (1878), 28 C. P. 470.—CAN.

d. In warehouse of carrier.]—Delivery of goods was to be considered complete when placed in the carrying co.'s warehouse at their distination. The goods were placed in the co.'s shed used for the purpose of storing goods at the station at the place of delivery, which was some distance from the village where pltf.'s place of business was:—Held: the station was the destination of the goods & not the village; after being placed there the co.'s liability was at an end.—RICHARDSON v. CANADIAN PACIFIC RY. Co. (1889), 19 O. R. 369.—CAN.

e. To customs officers.]—Defts. undertook to carry pltf.'s goods to C., whence pltf. was to take them. Upon their arrival at C., the customs duties not having been paid, & no one being in readiness to receive them, they were placed in a bonded warehouse, & whilst there were destroyed by fire:—Held: defts.' duty ceased on deposit of the goods in the bonded warehouse.—INMAN v. BUFFALO & LAKE HURON RY. h. Notice to remove—Constructive delivery.]—A ry. co. carried coals to the station to which they were addressed, & notified the consignee of their arrival, upon which, according to the usual practice between them & the consignee, it lay upon him to send for them & take them away; he did not do so within a reasonable time, & they unloaded the coals & left them on the siding, where they were lost. In an action against them as common carriers, for non-delivery:—Held: they had performed their contract by a constructive delivery.—BRADSHAW v. IRISH NORTH WESTERN RY. Co. (1873), 7 I. L. In an action for freight in which no claim for the undelivered package was made:—Held: the contract for carriage was not on its face indivisible, & pltf. could recover.—CHARLESON v. ROYAL STANDARD INVESTMENT CO. m. Changing character of goods.]—Defts. were taken by pltf. to cut logs of timber, & contracted to deliver them to pltf. on the bank of a river; the logs were cut in two by defts., without pltf.'s permission, & drawn to the river in that altered state:—Held: not delivery within the contract.—REYNOLDS v. SHUTER (1847), 3 U. C. R. 377.—CAN.

Sect. 7.—Duration and termination of liability—delivery: Sub-sects. 2 & 3.]

Therefore here is a gross & palpable negligence on the part of defts., who, whether bound to deliver or not by the general duty of carriers, had undertaken so to do by their general course of trade (GOULD, J.).

(2) All carriers are bound to give notice of the arrival of goods to the persons to whom they are consigned, whether bound to deliver or not (GOULD, J.).—GOLDEN v. MANNING (1773), 3 Wils. 429; 2 Wm. Bl. 916; 96 E. R. 541.

182. —— Misdelivery.]—Trover lies against a carrier for the delivery of goods otherwise than at the place to which they are directed.

Defts. had received, as carriers, a box directed to J. W., 27, W. Street, L., & finding the house shut up, afterwards delivered the box to a person at A., calling himself W. :—Held : (1) this was a misdelivery, for which defts. were liable in trover, although W. was the person for whom the box was intended, W. being a swindler, & the property in the goods not having passed to him, as he had obtained them from pltf. by fraud; (2) it was properly left to the jury to say, whether defts. had delivered the box according to the course of their business as carriers.—STEPHENSON v. HART (1828), 4 Bing. 476; 1 Moo. & P. 357; 6 L. 183. —— ——.]—If, on finding that goods have been misdelivered by a common carrier, the owner assents to the party who has received them selling them on his account, though that may be an acceptance of the delivery, it is, per se, no defence to the action for the misdelivery, as there is no consideration to make it a discharge, & it is merely accord without satisfaction.

An action was brought against a railway co. for the loss of butter entrusted to them as carriers on behalf of pltf. The butter was sent in casks marked "A," & addressed simply "B. Quay"; there was evidence that "A" meant a firm of A. & A, & that goods so addressed had been delivered to them at H. Wharf; the butter was delivered there by the railway co., by reason of which, A. & A. becoming insolvent, the value was lost to pltf. On hearing of the misdelivery pltf. had assented to the butter being sold by A. & A. on his account; but there was no evidence either of precedent authority on his part for the delivery to them, or that they, in obtaining possession of them, assumed to act as his agents :—Held : (1) on the misdelivery, there arose a cause of action against the co. for breach of their duty as carriers; & there was no defence, either on the general issue or on a plea that pltf. had assented to the delivery to A. & A., & had accepted such delivery in satisfaction; for, assuming the fact of acceptance, there was no consideration to make such acceptance a discharge; (2) pltf. was entitled to recover damages to the full amount of the value of the butter.—SANQUER v. LONDON & SOUTH WESTERN RY. 184. Residence of consignee.]—(1) Common carriers received goods of S., at L., on an undertaking to carry them to W., & deliver them there to S., for his use, on payment of the hire. The goods were carried to W., & sent from the warehouse, nearly half a mile, to the house of S.; but the hire not being ready to be paid, were taken back to the warehouse. Applications to send the goods again to the house were refused, not on the ground that the contract had been performed by the proffer, but until satisfaction of a lien set up on one side, & resisted on the other, & which proved to have been unfounded in fact :—Held : in the circumstances, the carriers had waived the benefit which would probably have resulted to them from insisting on the proffer as an execution of their undertaking: both parties had treated the contract as one continuing contract from the commencement of the transaction till an actual delivery should have taken place; & the carriers, not having performed their part of the agreement, the consignee was entitled to recover the value of the goods in an action of assumpsit.

185. Alteration of destination—By consignee—With carrier's assent.]—(1) Although the consignor of goods directs a carrier to deliver them to the consignee at a particular place, the carrier may deliver them wherever he & the consignee agree.

Pltf. having sold corn by sample, to be delivered to the purchaser at his mill at B., sent the corn by defts., railway carriers, paying the freight to B. station, & an extra sum for cartage from B. to the mill. In pursuance of general orders previously given by the consignee to defts., but not communicated to pltf., defts. left the wheat at their station at B., & advised the consignee of its arrival, who examined it, but left it there for two months, & afterwards refused to take it. The wheat deteriorated in quality during that time :—Held : defts. were not liable to an action by pltf. for not delivering at the mill, as the non-delivery there was pursuant to the orders of the consignee, & it made no difference in this respect that pltf. could not recover the price of the wheat from the purchaser in consequence of there being no acceptance of the wheat within the meaning of Stat. Frauds.

182 i. Place to which directed—Misdelivery.]—A servant of defts., who were carriers, called at pltfs.' place for goods, stating that he was to deliver them to C.'s place, whereupon pltfs. gave him them to make delivery accordingly. 186. —— —— Carrier's servant assenting—Scope of authority.]—Pltf. directed defts. to deliver goods at his house When defts.' carman came to the house with the goods in a waggon, pltf. wrote him an acknowledgment of the safe receipt of the goods, & a request to deliver at a stable occupied by him about 1000 yds. off; the goods were not unloaded at pltf.'s house but through the carman's negligence at the stable they were destroyed:—Held: defts. could be liable for the value of the goods only if this substitution of one place of delivery for another was within the scope of the carman's duty, or if the carman had authority to enter into a fresh contract of carriage on behalf of his employers; & these were questions for a jury.—POLLARD v. LONDON & SOUTH WESTERN RY. Co. (1870), 22 L. T. 551.

187. —— —— Consequential loss to vendor—Carrier not responsible.] — Where goods are delivered by a vendor to a carrier to be carried to a certain place, with the added words, "for Messrs. . . . & Co.," these persons thus appearing to be the consignees of the goods, may demand them of the carrier at another place; & if on such demand, & on receiving payment for the carriage, the carrier, who has not received from the vendor any special communication on the subject of the place of delivery, delivers them up to the consignees, the carrier will not be responsible to the vendor for any damages which may arise to the vendor from such delivery.

Distillers in C., who were under bond to the Crown to pay the duties on all spirits which they might be permitted to remove from one bonded warehouse to another, sold a quantity of whisky to S. & Co., spirit dealers in L. The duty on the whisky had not been paid. The distillers obtained the regular permit for its removal, the permit expressly describing the whisky as spirit on which duty had not been paid, & delivered it to a railway co. to carry it to L. The delivery note described it as sent from C. to "Customs Warehouse, L. . . . For Messrs. J. & Co., L. Station, L." The railway co. gave a receipt note for whisky addressed to S.'s Customs Warehouse at L., for J. & Co. If it had been taken to the customs warehouse, the consignees could not have obtained possession of it without having first paid the duty on it, but no special communication was made by the vendor to the carriers on this subject. Before arriving there the consignees, J. & Co., demanded it at the railway station, & on paying the carriage obtained possession of it, & thus escaped paying the duty. The vendors were compelled under their excise bond to pay the duty, & brought an action against the carriers for the amount:—Held: this was the case of an ordinary consignment; the consignees had the right to demand the whisky from the carriers; & the latter were not liable to make good the loss occasioned to the distillers by its delivery.—CORK DISTILLERIES CO. v. GREAT SOUTHERN & WESTERN RY. SUB-SECT. 3.—TO WHOM.

188. To consignee.]—(1) Pltfs., being carriers, with places of business in towns in the country where defts., a railway co. had stations, were for many years employed as the agents of the co. to carry goods from the stations to their places of consignment. The co. ceased to employ pltfs. as their agents, since when goods had been consigned to pltfs. by name, addressed to them or to their care, with the name and station of the country town in the invoice. Other goods arrived at the country stations addressed to pltfs. "under mark," i.e., bearing initials or other signs upon them indicating the names & addresses of the consignees, which signs were explained to pltfs. by letter sent by post. All these goods the railway co. refused to deliver to pltfs. Those that had directions were entrusted to the co.'s new agent to be delivered by him to their proper addresses, & those "under mark" were delivered by the agent to pltfs.' places of business in the towns. There they were tendered for acceptance. &, on being refused, were taken back to the station, & there at last delivered to pltfs., the co. charging pltfs. for cartage. Pltfs. filed a bill praying for a declaration that the co. were bound to deliver to them, pltfs., the goods so consigned to them, deducting for pltfs.' services a sum from the through rate charged by the co. Defts. demurred for want of equity, & the demurrer was overruled:—Held: without prejudice to any question of jurisdiction at the hearing, the demurrer was rightly overruled.

189. To addressee—Usual course of business—Fictitious addressee.]—H., an agent of pltfs. for obtaining orders for their goods at G., sent fictitious orders to them therefrom, in compliance with which pltfs. bonâ fide, & being imposed on by H., addressed goods to "T. & Co., 71, G. Street," the name & address furnished to them by H., & forwarded such goods from M., through M. & Co., carriers by canal, to L., with instructions to M. & Co. to forward them thence by steamer to G. Defts. carried the goods from L. to G., & on their arrival at the latter place they sent, pursuant to their usual course of business, a notice by letter to the address appearing on the goods, requesting their removal & the production of the notice indorsed as a delivery order. H. received this notice, &, having indorsed it in the name "T. & Co." presented it to defts., & thereby procured the delivery of the goods to be made to himself. There was no such name or persons as "T. & Co." at 71, G. Street. In an action by pltfs. against defts. as carriers, for misdelivery & conversion of pltfs.' goods:—Held: (1) pltfs.' contract was with M. & Co., & not with defts.; (2) defts. having, in dealing with the goods, bonâ fide pursued their usual course of business, the custom of which must be taken as incorporated into the directions given by pltfs., had obeyed such directions & had not been guilty of misdelivery or conversion of the goods; (3) pltfs. having accepted & acted on H.'s representations, were estopped from saying that there were no such persons as "T. &

190. To true owner—Jus tertii—No estoppel as to sender's title.]—A common carrier is not estopped from disputing the title of the person from whom he has received goods to carry. It is an answer to trover against the carrier by such person, that the goods have been delivered to the real owner on his claiming them.

C., residing at M., ordered goods of D. to be shipped to the port of L., to be paid for in cash against the bill of lading. C. never obtained the bill of lading or paid for the goods, but he sold the latter to pltf. The goods arrived at the port of L., but were not to be delivered, except on payment of freight. At an interview between the captain & B., pltf.'s agent at L., at which D. was present, the captain said, in answer to B.'s question, where the bill of lading was, that D. had passed it on to C., which was true, the bill having, in fact, been sent to D.'s agent at M. for that purpose, but C. not paying for the goods, the bill was returned to D. after this interview. No arrangement was then come to, but shortly afterwards B., as pltf.'s agent, paid the freight, on receiving from the captain a document given to him by D. when the bill of lading was signed, by which D. requested C.'s agents at L. to pay the captain his freight. Defts., who were common carriers, were then employed by B. to forward the goods to pltf.:—Held: (1) pltf. had acquired no right to take possession of the goods as buyer, either by the purchase from C. or by the conduct of D. at the interview between the captain & B., coupled with the document requesting payment of freight, & the payment of freight thereon; (2) defts. were protected against pltf. by their giving up the goods to D. on his claiming them.—SHERIDAN v. NEW QUAY CO. 197. Subsequent demand by consignee—Tender of charge — Within reasonable time.]—Pltf. delivered in L. to defts., who were common carriers, a parcel addressed to pltf.'s agent at P. Defts.' railway terminated at B., from whence they forwarded the parcel to P. by the S. Ry., & shortly before noon, on the day of its arrival, a porter tendered it to pltf.'s agent, who refused to pay the sum charged for its carriage, whereupon the porter took it away, saying that it would be returned to L.; it was sent back to L. at eight o'clock in the morning of the following day. About two hours afterwards pltf.'s agent tendered at the office of the S. Ry. the amount of the carriage & demanded the parcel, when he was told that it had been that morning returned to L. The parcel remained in the custody of defts. at their office in L., & it did not appear that pltf. had applied for it there. The jury found that the parcel was sent back to L. unreasonably soon; & that the demand of the parcel & tender of the charge for the carriage was made within a reasonable time after the parcel had been refused :—Held : (1) in the circumstances, defts. were liable for a breach of duty, even supposing their duty as carriers ended with the tender of the parcel; (2) there was no evidence of a conversion.

(3) The lien which a carrier has on goods carried for the carriage money is to be exercised subject to the obligation of keeping the goods for such a time in such a place as may be reasonably adapted for allowing the consignee means of taking possession of them on payment of the charge. Semble: these are questions for the jury in each case.—GREAT WESTERN RY. 198. Delay by police regulation — Subsequent loss — Carriers not liable.]—Pltf. delivered to defts., as common carriers, some cattle to be carried by them to L. The cattle arrived on a Sunday morning between 11 & 12 o'clock, but owing to certain police regulations pltf. was unable to take them away before 12 o'clock at night. Meanwhile, they were placed by defts.' servants, with the sanction & assistance of a man employed by pltf. to receive them, in pens at the station. Early on the Monday morning, when pltf.'s servant went to take them away, he found that two steers had been killed. He wished to take away the remaining cattle, but was refused permission unless he signed a receipt ticket for the whole number, which he declined to do. Later in the day pltf. came & removed them, but before he could reach the market at I. for which they were intended it was over, & he could not sell them until the Thursday following. 203. Delivery of wrong goods—Action for resulting damage.]—A statement of claim alleged that defts. were common carriers; that C. & B. were in the habit of sending empty casks by defts.' railway to pltf., which pltf. filled with ketchup & returned; that defts., by their agents & servants, knew the purpose for which the casks were delivered to pltf.; that defts. negligently & improperly delivered to pltf., as C. & B.'s casks, certain other casks not belonging to C. & B., which had contained turpentine; that pltf. not knowing or having reasonable means of knowing that the empty casks delivered were not C. & B.'s filled them with ketchup which was spoiled:—Held: on demurrer, the statement of claim showed no duty on the part of defts. which could give rise to a cause of action, & they were not liable.—CUNNINGTON v. GREAT NORTHERN RY. 204. Evidence of non-delivery—Conversion.]—If A. sends goods by B., a common carrier, to be delivered to C., proof that B., asserted he had delivered the goods to C., whereas in truth C. had never received them, is not sufficient evidence of conversion to support trover against B.—ATTERSOL v. BRIANT (1808), 1 Camp. 409, N. 207. Accidental fire.]—To a count in assumpsit by A. against B. upon a contract by B., to carry goods from D. to L., & to deliver them at L. to A., assigning a breach in non-delivery of the goods in L., B. pleaded that after the arrival of the goods at L., he caused them to be landed & deposited upon a certain wharf at L., at which goods conveyed from D. to L. were accustomed to be landed, for the use of consignees, & that the goods whilst they remained upon the wharf, & before a reasonable time for the delivery thereof had elapsed, were accidentally destroyed by fire; also that after the arrival of the goods at L. he was ready & willing to deliver the goods to A., but that A. was not there ready to receive them; whereupon he caused the goods to be landed, etc.:—Held: (1) pleas were bad in substance, which neither showed a delivery of the goods to A., nor alleged that a delivery at the wharf was a delivery, according to the usage of L., with respect to goods on such a voyage, or that A. had notice of the arrival of the goods, or that a reasonable time for A. to receive them had elapsed when the goods were landed, or when they were destroyed, or that A. had notice that B. was ready & willing to deliver the goods; & that, if, as the goods were deliverable to A., B. was not bound to deliver them until he had notice that A. would receive, or until the party entitled should come to receive them, still B. was bound to keep the goods on board, or on the wharf at B.'s own risk, for a reasonable time, to enable the consignee to fetch them, & B. continued liable until such reasonable time had elapsed; (2) evidence of former dealings between A. & B. as to the carriage of goods from B.'s wharf to A.'s place of business was admissible for the purpose of showing the course & usage of delivery at the port of L.; though, for the purpose of adding to, or otherwise varying the terms of

203 i. Delivery of goods not ordered—Action for resulting damage.]—The consignee of barrels of paraffin received with them from the carrier a barrel of naphtha which had not been ordered; without examination & without ascertaining what had been ordered, it was placed in his store beside the barrels of paraffin. A description of its contents, which was not noticed by the consignee or his servants, was stencilled on each barrel. Some weeks after delivery one of the consignee's servants, believing the barrel of naphtha contained paraffin, drew off part of its contents, by the light of a candle & an explosion ensuing, the store & its contents were destroyed by fire. In an action for damages by the consignee against the carriers:—Held: the consignee was entitled to recover the loss he had sustained.—MACDONALD v. MACBRAYNE (DAVID), LTD. (1915), 52 Sc. L. b. Proof of delivery—Onus.]—Defts. received goods for carriage & delivery to pltf. at the place where he carried on business. In an action by pltf. to recover the value of the goods for failure on the part of defts. to deliver them:—Held: the burden was upon defts. to prove delivery of goods, & this burden was not satisfied by the production of a receipt signed by a carter in pltf.'s employ, it being shown that it was usual for defts.'s agent to take the receipt for the goods before delivering them & before ascertaining whether or not the goods had arrived at the place to which they were addressed.—HENDERSON v. INVERNESS RY. & COAL CO. d. Limitation of liability by notice—Goods refused by consignee—Right of sale.]—Packages were carried by defts. for pltfs. & delivery thereof was tendered to pltfs., who refused acceptance; defts. retained possession of the goods & sold them for unpaid charges for transportation & storage; three days before sale, pltfs. requested defts. to deliver the goods to pltfs., but the goods had been forwarded to M. to be sold there, &, in consequence of the negligence of defts.'s clerk, the request did not reach the proper hands in M. until after the sale:—Held: (1) defts. were liable; (2) although defts., after refusal to accept, held the goods as warehousemen, they were entitled to the benefit of a provision in the shipping contract limiting their liability in case of loss or damage.—GETTY & SCOTT, LTD. v. CANADIAN PACIFIC RY. 207 i. Accidental fire—Limitation of liability.]—Four car loads of flour were delivered to defts. to be carried from N. to C. under a special contract whereby defts. were not to be liable for any delay occasioned by want of opportunity to forward goods beyond places where defts. had stations & defts.' line did not extend beyond T. On their arrival there, the goods were placed in defts.' freight sheds, & notices the written contract, it would have been inadmissible; (3) the judge was warranted in declining to tell the jury that a delivery at the wharf was, in point of law, a sufficient delivery, that B. was thereby discharged from all further responsibility, & that no contract could be inferred from the course of dealing, to vary or superadd to, the written contract contained in the bill of lading; & in stating that it was a question for the consideration of the jury, whether there had been a delivery of the goods, & that it was for them to say whether, upon the evidence, a delivery at the wharf was a delivery according to the usage & practice of delivering goods observed in the port of L.

In another count, on a promise, in consideration of the employment of B. by A. for other reward, to take care of the goods at the wharf, & to carry them from such wharf to A.'s place of business, in a reasonable time after landing, a breach was assigned in the non-delivery of the goods, although a reasonable time for that purpose had elapsed, B. pleaded that after the goods had been safely landed on the wharf, he caused them to be safely stored upon the wharf until they could be delivered to A., & that he took care of the goods whilst they remained upon the wharf until they were destroyed by an accidental fire before a reasonable time for delivery to A. had elapsed; by means whereof, etc.:—Held: (4) the plea was a good answer as the contract to carry from the wharf for other reward was not of the same nature as the contract to carry to it, & the count contained no averment that B. was a common carrier; (5) if B. was not subject to the liability of a common carrier whilst the goods were in the warehouse, all that he was bound to do by the contract was, to take reasonable care of the goods whilst in the warehouse.—BOURNE v. GATLIFFE (1844), 7 Man. & G. 850; 11 Cl. & Fin. 45; 8 Scott, N. Deft. sent a horse by railway consigned to himself to a station on the line, & paid the fare. 209. Whether warehousing justifiable — Direction to deliver "ex ship."]—Pltfs., directed defts., the owners of a line of steamships carrying certain goods for delivery to pltfs., to "deliver ex ship to the railway co., to our order." The contract contained a clause protecting defts. from liability for damage to goods by fire while lying for collection, delivery, or in the course of transit, at defts.' wharf or warehouse or any other wharf or warehouse at which they might be placed, landed, or kept. On arrival the goods were not delivered direct from the ship to the railway station, but were placed in defts.' warehouse adjoining the quay, where a fire broke out & the goods were destroyed:—Held: (1) the expression "ex ship" did not exclude taking the goods into warehouse for the purpose of despatching them by cart to the railway; (2) on the facts the purposes for which the goods were taken into the warehouse was justifiable; & defts. were covered by the exception.—ESSEX COUNTIES FARMERS' CO-OPERATIVE ASSOCN., LTD. v. NEWHOUSE & CO. SUB-SECT. 1.—BY PUBLIC NOTICE.

A. In General.

210. General rule.]—There is a difference where a man is chargeable by law generally, & where on his own contract. Where a man is bound to any duty, & chargeable to a certain extent by the operation of law, in such case he cannot by any act of his own discharge himself. As in the case of common carriers, who are liable by law in all cases of losses, except of those arising from the act of God, or of the King's enemies; they cannot discharge themselves from losses happening in these circumstances by any act of their own; as by giving notice, for example, to that effect. The case is otherwise where a man is chargeable on his own contract; there he may qualify it as he thinks fit (LORD KENYON, C.J.).—HIDE v. TRENT & MERSEY NAVIGATION CO. (1793), 1 Esp. 35, N. 212. Extent of notice—Whether applicable to out & home journeys.]—In an action against coach proprietors, for the loss of a parcel directed to pltfs. in L., by their agent at K., defts. put in a notice, in the following form:—"George & Blue Boar, L. Take notice. The proprietors of carriages which set out from this office, will not hold themselves answerable for any passenger's luggage, truss, parcel or any package whatever, above the value of £5, if lost or damaged, unless same be entered as such, & paid for accordingly, when delivered here or to their agents in town or country." They also proved, that pltfs. were in the constant habit of sending parcels from L. to the country & back by their coach. The trial judge being of opinion that the notice applied only to the journey from, & not to that to L., the jury found a verdict for pltfs.:—Held: the notice applied both to the out & home journeys; but, as it had not been left to the jury to say whether or not pltfs. were aware that the coach by which the parcel was sent, was one that started from the George & Blue Boar, a new trial must be directed.—RILEY v. HORNE (1828), 5 Bing. 217; 2 Moo. & P. 331; 7 L. B. Sufficiency of Notice.

(a) How given.

214. Advertisement in newspaper.]—In an action against a carrier for negligence, deft. cannot read in evidence, an advertisement in a newspaper by which he limits his responsibility, unless he first prove that pltf. was in the habit of reading that paper. Semble: an advertisement in the Gazette may be read without such preparatory proof, but without it, the evidence is weak.—LEESON v. HOLT (1816), 1 Stark. 186, N. Annotation:—Mentd. Wade v. L. & N. W. Ry., [1921] 1 K. B. 582.

215. ——.]—In an action against a coach-proprietor for the loss of a parcel, it was proved for deft. that pltf. had for three years taken in a weekly newspaper, in which deft. had regularly inserted a notice, that he would not be responsible for any parcel above the value of £5 unless entered & paid for accordingly:—Held: that such evidence was not sufficient to show that the pltf. had knowledge of such notice at the time of the delivery of the parcel.—ROWLEY v. HORNE (1825), 3 Bing. 2; 10 Moore, C. P. 247; 3 L. J. O. S. C. P. 118; 130 E. R. 413.

216. Notice on door of office—& bill.]—It is not sufficient notice to limit the common law responsibility of a carrier for him to paste upon the door of his office where goods are received & delivered a bill blazoning the advantages of his conveyances, & stating in small characters at the bottom of it, that he will not be answerable for goods above the value of £5 unless entered as such & paid for accordingly.—BUTLER v. HEANE (1810), 2 Camp. 415, N. P.

Annotation:—Consd. Van Toll v. S. E. Ry. (1862), 12 C. B. N. S. 75.

217. Notice in office—Must be conspicuous.]—If a carrier receive goods at a distance from his office, to be discharged from his common law liability, he must prove that the special terms on which he deals were communicated to the owner of the goods through some other medium than a notice stuck up in the office; & that to be of any avail must be in such large characters that a person delivering goods at the office cannot fail to read it without gross negligence.—CLAYTON v. HUNT (1811), 3 Camp. 27, N. P.

218. —— Must be brought home to consignor.]—In order to affect one who sends goods by a carrier with notice of the terms on which he deals, it is not sufficient to show that a printed notice was exhibited in the carrier's office, where the goods were delivered by a porter, although the porter could read, & had seen the notice, if in fact he had never read it.—KERR v. WILLAN (1817), 6 M. & S. 150; 2 Stark. 53; Holt, N. H. & Co. having received the goods, gave a receipt, on the back of which was indorsed a condition that defts. would not be responsible for any loss or damage arising from the negligence of their own officers & crew in the journey from London to Dublin. The ship sailed, & the goods were lost through the negligence of the officers & crew. Pltfs. knew nothing whatever of the condition :—Held : (1) the true question to have left to the jury would have been, "whether the receipt containing the condition on which alone the goods consigned to pltfs. were to be carried by defts. was delivered to pltfs. or to their agent at the time the goods were by their agent placed on the wharf of the wharfingers," & it was not necessary to explain to pltfs.' agent the conditions embodied in the receipt ; (2) defts. being carriers by sea, the condition was valid ; (3) K. & Co. being the agents of pltfs. in the making of the contract, pltfs. were bound thereby.—ALEXANDER v. MALCOLMSON (1869), 20 L. The co. decided not to receive after Aug. 20 any more freight with guaranteed delivery during 1899, & so notified P., of whom pltf. was a customer. P. afterwards shipped goods & received from the co. bills of lading marked with a special condition that the carriers were released by all parties in interest from all claims & liability arising out of or occasioned by non-delivery during 1899. The co. failed to deliver the goods :—Held : the goods were not carried under the exclusive contract for the season of 1899, by which delivery was guaranteed that same season, but that they were carried under the terms of the bills of lading, & the co. was not liable for the loss.—WILSON v. CANADIAN DEVELOPMENT CO., LTD. In the course of the voyage one of the casks of brandy was staved in & nearly all its contents lost:—Held: the notice in the handbills constituted the terms of the contract under which the goods were shipped, & those terms were not qualified by the notice at the foot of the freight note, & defts. were not responsible.—PHILLIPS v. EDWARDS (1858), 3 H. & N. 813; 28 L. 230. By custom—Port of London—Lighterage.]—Pltfs. received in London a quantity of lard from America. They employed defts. to store the lard for them in a warehouse & to lighter it from the ship to the warehouse. Defts. were not common carriers & had no lighters of their own, & could only convey the lard to the warehouse by employing lightermen. Pltfs. sued defts. for negligence whereby the lard had been damaged during the lighterage, & for negligence whereby it had been damaged during the storage:—Held: (1) defts. had been negligent both in relation to the lighterage & the storage; (2) the ct. must take judicial notice of the fact that in the Port of London lighterage was only undertaken subject to a clause which protected the lighterman from loss or damage to the goods from any cause whatever, & so far as the claim related to damage during the lighterage the action failed.—ARMOUR & Co., LTD. v. TARBARD (C.), LTD. 232. Whether common law liability excluded—No liability to deliver within definite time—Liability to deliver within reasonable time.]—(1) Declaration against defts., a railway co., as common carriers of cattle, for non-delivery of pigs within a reasonable time, according to the terms on which they had received them. Pleas (inter alia) that they were delivered within a reasonable time; & that they were received on the terms that defts. would not be liable for their delivery within any certain or definite time, or in time for any particular market. The pigs were in fact received on those terms & were forwarded by the first practicable train, according to defts.' arrangements, which were unknown to pltf. This, however, involved a detention of a day, from which the pigs suffered damage. The judge expressed an opinion that the pigs had been delivered within a reasonable time, & pltf. was non-suited, without any expressed opposition on the part of his counsel. On a motion for a new trial on the ground that the question ought to have been left to the jury:—Held: if it had gone to the jury, the judge would have been bound to direct them to find for defts. on the traverse of the terms alleged in the declaration.

233. —— Liability limited to breakage—Goods destroyed by fire.]—Deft. carried on the business of a carrier, removing goods & furniture for hire for all persons indifferently who applied to him, in his own vans, which he sent by road or rail to all parts of England, the goods & furniture being previously inspected before any contract was made. Generally in such contracts the van or vans were hired by & filled with the goods of one person only. Pltf. having applied to deft. to remove his furniture from one town to another, & deft.'s foreman having inspected it, the parties agreed that deft. should remove the furniture for £22 10*s.*, deft. undertaking risk of breakage, if any, not exceeding £5 on any one article. After the furniture was placed in deft.'s vans, & while in transit, it was burnt without any negligence on deft.'s part. Pltf. contended that deft. was liable as a common carrier:—Held: the special contract showed that the parties intended to limit deft.'s liability to loss by breakage or by deft.'s negligence, & excluded any question of liability as a common carrier.—SCAIFE v. FARRANT (1875), L. 1. Conditions printed on back of receipt—Whether part of special contract.]—Conditions printed on the back of the receipt for payment of charges given to a consignor do not necessarily form part of a special contract between the carrier & consignor; but it is a question for the jury, whether such receipt was given merely as an acknowledgment of the payment, or whether it was intended that the condition indorsed on the receipt should affect or qualify the contract.—ANDERSON v. CHESTER & HOLYHEAD RY. CO. (1854), 4 I. C. L. R. 435.—IR.

232 i. Whether common law liability excluded.]—Defts. received glass to be carried for pltf., who signed a paper, partly written & partly printed, requesting them to receive it upon conditions indorsed, which provided that they would not be responsible for damage done to china, glass, etc., delivered to them for carriage; & defts. gave a receipt with the same conditions upon it:—Held: such delivery & acceptance formed a special contract, valid at common law, which exempted defts. from injury to the goods, even though caused by gross negligence.—HAMILTON v. GRAND TRUNK RY. CO. (1864), 23 U. C. R. 600.—CAN.

232 ii. —— ——.]—Goods were delivered to defts. to be carried under a special contract whereby defts. were not to be liable for delay occasioned by want of opportunity to forward the goods beyond places where defts. had stations, & not to be liable after notification to forwarding carriers of readiness to deliver the goods for further conveyance; & not to be liable for loss by fire. Defts.' line did not extend beyond T., & the goods were to be forwarded by G. T. R.; on their arrival at T., they were placed in defts.' freight sheds, & notice was duly given that defts. were prepared to deliver the goods for further conveyance. After such notice, while the goods were in defts.' freight sheds, they were destroyed by fire without negligence on defts.' part:—Held: defts. were not liable because they had expressly limited their liability.—BRODIE v. NORTHERN RY. CO. (1884), 6 O. R. 180.—CAN.

235 i. Must be specially proved.]—Where a common carrier fails to deliver goods which he has undertaken to carry, the presumption, upon proof of non-delivery, is that they are still in his possession, & the onus lies upon him, if he relies upon a special contract not to be liable for loss, to prove that arising from the act of God, the King's enemies, fire, pirates, & all other dangers & accidents of the seas, rivers, & navigation of what nature or kind soever :—Held : this exception being beyond the common law exception, must be specially proved.

(2) Is there any difference between a carrier by land & by sea except that at sea the acts of God, which give rise to the accidents excepted are multiplied beyond those on land, & therefore many things at sea are excepted against which cannot happen by land (LORD ELLENBOROUGH, C.J.).—RICHARDSON v. SEWELL (1805), 2 Smith, K. Proof of — Question for jury.]—In an action against common carriers for the loss of goods entrusted to their care, there was contradictory evidence as to whether a ticket limiting their responsibility had been delivered by them to pltf. at the time by taking the goods in charge : —Held : (1) the jury were rightly directed to say, whether that ticket had ever been delivered to pltf. ; (2) it was not necessary to leave to them whether or not it had been read over or explained to him.—PALMER v. GRAND JUNCTION RY. 241. —— ——.]—Pltf. ordered of defts. certain trucks to be ready on a particular day to convey his cattle to market by their railway. The trucks were not ready on the day fixed, but the superintendent at the station then promised they should be ready on the day following, saying the cattle would be then quite in time for the market. Pltf. sent his cattle on the following day, & signed a forwarding note required of him by the co., with special conditions indorsed, but the cattle were then too late for the market, damaged by delay, & sold elsewhere at a loss. In an action against the co., the question left to the jury was, whether a contract had been made to carry the cattle & deliver them at their destination by a particular time ready for the market. On a motion for a new trial, on the ground of misdirection, alleging that the question should have been whether the cattle were carried according to the written bargain made on the day following :—Held : the question as left to the jury was the proper one, the other point not having been made by defts. at the trial.—BROWN v. BRISTOL & EXETER RY. The carriers had previously given notice that they would not be responsible for any package containing specified articles, or which, with its contents, should exceed £5 in value, if lost or damaged, unless an insurance were paid :—Held : notwithstanding this notice, the carriers were responsible for the parcel in question, in consequence of their having delivered it to be carried by another coach, of which one of the carriers only was proprietor.—GARNETT v. WILLAN (1821), 5 B. & Ald. 53 ; 106 E. 254. —— —— ——.]—A parcel containing country banker's notes, of the value of £1,300 & addressed to their clerk, in order to conceal the nature of its contents, was delivered to the carrier, without any notice of its value, to be carried by a mail coach, & was accepted by him to be so carried. The parcel was sent by a different coach, & was lost. The carriers had previously given notice that they would not be answerable for any parcel above £5 in value, if lost or damaged, unless an insurance were paid. No insurance having been paid in this case:—Held: notwithstanding that the carrier was responsible for the loss.—SLEAT v. FAGG (1822), 5 B. & Ald. 342; 106 E. R. 1216.

256. —— Delivery to wrong consignee.]—Pltfs. received an order from a stranger to furnish J. P. of H. Street, O., with goods, & finding upon inquiry that Mr. P. of H. Street was a tradesman of respectability, forwarded the goods by a carrier, having directed them to J. P., H. Street, O. On the arrival of the parcel at O., the carrier's porter there, who knew W. P. of H. Street, & was accustomed to deliver parcels at the houses of the consignees, told him of the arrival of the parcel, no other P. residing in that street, & W. P. said he expected no parcel. A person to whom the porter had before delivered parcels under the name of P., called at deft.'s office shortly afterwards, & saying the parcel was his, was allowed to take it on paying the carriage, there being many persons of that name at O. Pltfs. having thus lost their goods, desired deft., by letter, to apprehend the person who had taken them, if he again presented himself, & afterwards said, that they had done with deft., if the man who had the parcel were produced. A notice was suspended in a conspicuous part of deft.'s office, limiting his responsibility to £5, except where articles were entered according to their value; the parcel in question had not been so entered, though worth £89, but pltfs.' porter swore he never saw the notice. Pltfs. having sued the carrier, & the judge having directed the jury that the carrier's negligence had been such as to render it unnecessary to consider the question as to the notice touching the limited responsibility, & a verdict having been found for pltfs.:—Held: an application for a new trial, moved for on the grounds that the question touching the notice ought to have been considered, that the judge ought to have pointed the attention of the jury to pltfs.' letter, directing the carrier to apprehend the cheat, & the subsequent conversations thereon, & that the property of the goods had passed out of pltfs., should be refused.—DUFF v. BUDD (1822), 3 Brod. & Bing. 177; 6 Moore, C. The box was placed, with its lid outwards, at the tail of the waggon, which was left during several hours in the night standing in the road opposite an inn, where the waggoner stopped, without any person to watch it. The box was forced open, & its contents abstracted. A notice was proved limiting the carrier's responsibility to £5:—Held: the carrier was guilty of gross negligence in leaving the waggon so exposed, &, consequently, liable for the loss.—LANGLEY v. BROWN (1828), 1 Moo. & P. 583; 6 L. 262. —— Lost by unseaworthiness of ship.]—A carrier by water contracting to carry goods for hire impliedly promises that the vessel shall be tight & fit for the purpose & is answerable for damage arising from leakage, though he has given notice that he will not be answerable for any damage unless occasioned by want of ordinary care in the master or crew of the vessel, in which case he will pay £10 per cent. upon such damage so as the whole does not exceed the value of the vessel and freight. A loss happening by the personal default of the carrier himself, such as the not providing a sufficient vessel, is not within the scope of such notice which is meant to exempt the carrier from losses by accident or chance, etc., even if it were competent to a common carrier to exempt himself by a special acceptance from the responsibility cast upon him by the common law for a reasonable reward to make good all losses not arising from the act of God, or the King's enemies.—LYON v. MELLS (1804), 5 East, 428; 1 Smith, K. 264. Loss by fire & robbery—Goods missing from receiving office.]—A carrier received a parcel of notes to be carried from L. to D., under a contract to deliver them the next day, fire & robbery excepted; the parcel having been deposited by one of defts. in a desk at their office in L., was missing after a short absence of that deft. from the office:—Held: not a loss within the exceptions in the contract.—LATHAM v. STANBURY (1822), 3 Stark. 143, N. 265. Loss which can be covered by insurance—Loss through negligence—Carrier liable.]—Goods were loaded on a barge under a contract for carriage by which the barge owner was exempt from liability for any loss of or damage to goods which could be covered by insurance. The barge was sunk owing to the negligence of the servants of the barge owner, & the goods were lost. 266. —— —— Onus of proof.]—Goods were loaded into a barge from a ship for delivery at the barge-owner's wharf in the T. under a contract which exempted the barge owner from liability for any damage to goods however caused which could be covered by insurance. While the barge was lying alongside the wharf with the goods on board before being unloaded the barge-owner's lighterman who was in charge of the barge negligently left her unattended at night, & the barge, after taking the ground at low tide, became submerged as the tide rose, & the goods were damaged. There was no direct evidence as to the cause of the barge being submerged & the evidence left it in doubt whether the submerging was or was not attributable to the negligent act of the deft.'s servant in leaving the barge unattended:—Held: (1) the onus lay on deft., who was in possession of the goods as bailee, of showing that the negligence of his servant in leaving the barge unattended did not cause the loss, & he had failed to discharge that onus; (2) the term in the contract exempting deft. from liability for damage however caused relieved him from liability for damage caused by the negligence of his servant, & therefore he was entitled to judgment.—TRAVERS (JOSEPH) & SONS, LTD. v. COOPER, [1915] 1 K. 267 i. Loss which can be covered by insurance—Loss through negligence—Negligence expressly included—Carrier not liable.]—Defts., a lighterage co., agreed to lighter pltf.'s goods upon (inter alia) the following condition:—"The lighterage contractor will not be liable for any loss or damage, including negligence or the result thereof, which can be covered by insurance." During the lighterage operations, defts.' lighter sank, owing, it was alleged, to its unseaworthiness or its unfitness for the purpose of lightering the goods, or to defts.' negligence; & some of the goods were lost or damaged. The risks causing the loss or damage could have been insured against:—Held: even if pltf.'s allegations were proved, defts. were exempted from liability by the contract.—BERGE (AUSTRALIA), LTD. v. MOXON LIGHTERAGE CO., LTD. & tide permitting"—Delay by weather.]—Two consignments of fish for transport by special train & tidal boat from L. via F. to B. were made to a railway co. who advertised special trains & boats at special rates subject to the conditions contained in their tables. One of these conditions was that the co. would not be answerable for loss occasioned by the trains or boats not starting or arriving at the time specified; & another that the boats started wind, weather, & tide permitting. In each case, on arrival at F., it was found that it was not prudent to load the fish on the tidal boat owing to the state of the weather, & the fish had to be sent in the cargo boat, in consequence of which the P. train at B. was missed & the fish delayed for twenty-four hours, & deteriorated, besides losing the market:—Held: (1) there was no absolute guarantee that the fish would go by that particular train & boat, but that it was for the jury to say whether in the circumstances defts. had been guilty of negligence or whether they had substantially fulfilled their contract; (2) in estimating the damages, the loss of the market in P. by the non-arrival of the fish at B. in time to catch the train for P. was not to be taken into account.—HAWES & SON v. SOUTH EASTERN RY. CO. (1884), 54 L. J. Q. B. 174; 52 L. T. 514; 1 T. L. R. 146, D. C.

269. "Strike or riot"—Causing non-delivery of perishable articles—Carriage over several systems.]—R. consigned apples from a siding on the S. railway to a station on the L. railway, one of the conditions on the back of the consignment note being as follows:—"In respect of goods consigned to places beyond the limits of the managing committee's delivery the responsibility of the managing committee will cease when such goods have been delivered over to another carrier in the usual course of delivery." Another condition by which the consignor was bound was as follows:—"Perishable articles . . . not delivered in consequence of strike or riot may be sold without any notice to sender or consignee, & payment or tender of the net proceeds of any such sale, after deduction of freight charges & expenses, shall be equivalent to delivery." A railway strike took place & some of the apples were stopped on the S. railway, & the remainder on the L. railway. The apples were then sold by the officers of the Food Controller with the concurrence of the railway cos. In an action by R. against the cos.:—Held: (1) the S. Ry. Co. were protected by the first condition, &, as apples were perishable articles, by the second condition also; (2) the L. Ry. Co. were protected by the second condition as it must be held to apply to them as well as to the S. Ry. Co.

(3) Margarine was consigned on the G. railway & owing to a railway strike before the transit had been completed the representative of the Food Controller took the goods & sold them. In an action by the consignors against the railway co.:—Held: the act of the railway co. in handing over the goods at the request of the representative of the Food Controller was protected by Indemnity Act, 1920 (c. 48), s. 1 (1).—READER v. SOUTH EASTERN & CHATHAM RY. 270. Exception of statuary—Whether terra-cotta busts included.]—Resps. applied to applts., who were carriers, for their charges for shipping certain works of art from I. to S. Applts. replied, "For alabaster goods, furniture, etc., but not for goods described as statuary, the rate of 1s. per cubic foot. The rates do not cover any insurance risks, but are simply for freight." Some terra-cotta busts, being part of the goods in question, were damaged in transit by the negligence of applts.:—Held: (1) there were no words in the contract to free the applts. from their ordinary liability as common carriers; (2) the terra-cotta busts were not brought within the exception of "statuary" as understood in the carrying trade.—SUTTON & CO. v. CICERI & CO. Here there was a special notice given by deft., that he would not be answerable, but on certain terms, & there is nothing proved to have been done on his part which amounts to a dispensation with that notice. It appears that the book-keeper might have inferred that this parcel was one of value, but nothing was distinctly said about the actual value, nor did he undertake that the notice should be dispensed with. 290. —— Promise by servant of carrier—To forward after advertised hours.]—The G. Ry. Co., who were carriers on their line, published a printed notice, which was fixed up over the door of their station for the reception of goods in L., that all goods received after 4 p.m. would be forwarded on the next working day. Long after the publication of this notice, certain goods were brought to the station, about 5.30 p.m., to be forwarded to B. by the railway. The person who brought them, a servant of the owner, saw the co.'s weigher, & asked "if there was time" i.e. for the goods to proceed that evening; he said there was; & the goods were placed by the co.'s porters on the trucks on which goods are carried upon the railway. The same person had on former occasions taken goods of the same kind to the station at a later hour, which were never refused for being too late, & had been forwarded the same evening:—Held: upon these facts there was evidence to go to the jury of a special contract by the railway co. to forward the goods in question on the same evening on which they were delivered.—PICKFORD v. GRAND JUNCTION RY. A. Scope and Effect.

(a) Land Transit.

See 1830 Act, s. 1; 1921 Act, s. 56, Sched. VI.

299. Carriage over land & sea.]—(1) To a count charging defts., common carriers by railway from L. to S., & thence by sea to J. by steam-vessels, charging them with the loss of a passenger's portmanteau, defts. pleaded that the goods contained in the portmanteau were writings, silks, furs, & lace, within 1830 Act, & exceeded the value of £10, & were delivered by pltf. to defts., then being common carriers by land for hire, to be carried by them, as such carriers by land over their railway, that such delivery was made to the servants of defts., that, at the time of such delivery, the value & nature of the goods were not declared by pltf., & that the non-delivery of the said goods to pltf. in the count complained of was by reason of the same being lost by the defts. out of their possession while the same were upon the railway of defts., & in their possession & under their care as carriers by land:—Held: a good plea.

(2) To a count alleging that pltf. became a passenger by defts.' railway & steam-vessel from L. to J., & charging that defts. refused to carry his portmanteau, containing articles of wearing apparel, paper writings, & documents, defts. pleaded a similar plea to the above:—Held: bad on demurrer, the count not alleging a loss of the package.—PIANCIANI v. LONDON & SOUTH WESTERN RY. 300. —— Contract divisible.]—(1) A railway co. issuing a ticket for the conveyance of a passenger partly by land & partly by water are entitled to the benefit of 1830 Act, in respect of so much of the journey as is performed by land.

(2) Pltf. arrived at the railway station of defts., carrying a chronometer in his hand wrapped up in a handkerchief. This chronometer he gave to one of the porters, who in the presence of pltf. placed it on the seat of one of the carriages. Both the porter & pltf. immediately after this left the platform together, the porter to attend to other duties & pltf. to look after the rest of his luggage. After ten or fifteen minutes, pltf. returned & found that the chronometer was gone:—Semble: the chronometer, at the time of its loss, was in the charge of the co. as carriers, so that but for 1830 Act they would have been liable.—LE CONTEUR v. LONDON & SOUTH WESTERN RY. 302. —— No evidence as to when goods lost—Onus of proof.]—Three packages of furs, each of which was above the value of £10, were delivered by pltfs. to deft. railway co. for carriage from L. to B. Pltfs. made no declaration as to the nature & value of the goods, as required by 1830 Act, s. 1. The goods could not be traced beyond defts.' L. terminus, & there was no evidence as to when or where they were lost. Defts. relied upon 1830 Act, s. 1, as a defence to an action by pltfs. for the value of the goods:—Held: 1830 Act did not protect defts., inasmuch as that Act afforded protection to the carrier only when the goods were lost by land, & defts. had failed to show that the goods were lost during the land portion of the transit.—LONDON & NORTH WESTERN RY. v. ASHTON (J.P.) & CO., [1920] A. (b) Loss or Injury.

See 1830 Act, s. 1; 1921 Act, s. 56, Sched. VI.

303. Temporary loss—Delay—Whether within Act.]—1830 Act, s. 1, does not protect carriers in all cases where the owner of the article sustains damage from the neglect of the carrier, but the loss there referred to is confined to those cases where the article is abstracted or lost from the personal care of the carrier. A plea, therefore, alleging want of notice under the Act, is no answer to a declaration against a railway co. for breach of contract, in not safely delivering pltf.'s luggage on the termination of a journey, averring that by the carelessness of defts. it became wholly lost to pltf., & pltf. was deprived of the use of it from June 3 to Sept. 23, & the damages claimed being in respect of the delay in the delivery.—HEARN v. LONDON & SOUTH WESTERN RY. CO. (1855), 10 Exch. 793; 24 L. J. Ex. 180; 25 L. T. O. S. 23; 1 Jur. N. S. 286; 3 C. L. R. 597; 156 E. R. 660.

304. —— —— ——.]—A carrier is not deprived of the protection afforded by 1830 Act, s. 1, merely by the fact that the loss of the goods is temporary & not permanent, nor can the owner of goods, which ought to have been but were not declared pursuant to that Act, recover damages for the consequence of the loss of them, as distinguished from the loss itself.

Pltf. delivered to defts., who were carriers for hire from L. to R., a trunk to be sent by rail from L. to L., & thence shipped by steamer for I. Owing to defts.' negligence the trunk was put on board a vessel bound for N. Y., where it arrived, & a long time elapsed before it was restored to pltf. The trunk contained articles within the Act, the value of which exceeded £10. Pltf. was obliged to replace at enhanced prices the articles within the Act contained in the trunk:—Held: pltf. could not recover from the defts. damages either for the temporary loss of the articles within the Act or for being obliged to replace them at enhanced prices, a carrier being protected by the statute not only as to a loss but also as to all consequences flowing from it.—MILLEN v. BRASCH (1882), 10 Q. 307. Goods carried beyond destination.]—A carrier is not deprived of the protection afforded by 1830 Act, s. 1, by the fact that the loss of or injury to goods happens after they have been negligently taken by him beyond their point of destination. Pltf. took a ticket from Y. to D. by defts.' railway. Before starting on the journey he handed two water-colour drawings, which were tied together face to face, so that it could be seen that they were pictures of some kind, to the guard, asked him to take care of them, & saw them labelled for D. The pictures were above the value of £10, but pltf. made no declaration of the value. When the train arrived at D. he got out, took a fresh ticket for B., & told a porter to see that the drawings were taken out & put in the train by which he was starting. The drawings, however, were not taken out, but were carried on to M., & when they were recovered by pltf. had sustained considerable injury :—Held : pltf. was not entitled to recover for the damage to the drawings, on the ground that defts. were protected by the Act, which applied to the case of goods negligently carried beyond the point of destination.—MORRITT v. NORTH EASTERN RY. CO. (1876), 1 Q. B. D. 302 ; 45 L. J. Q. B. 289 ; 34 L. T. 940 ; 24 W. R. 386, C. A.

B. What Articles within.

See 1830 Act, s. 1 ; 1921 Act, s. 56, Sched. VI.

308. General rule—"Great value in small compass."]—(1) 1830 Act extends to all the articles enumerated in s. 1, although not within the words of the preamble, "an article of great value in small compass."

(2) To entitle a party to recover for loss or injury to any article of such description, he must give express notice to the carrier of the value & nature of the article.

(3) A looking-glass exceeding the value of £10, was packed up in a case, & sent to a carrier's office, to be conveyed from L. to the house of S., near Y. A notice was fixed up in the office, pursuant to s. 2. The words "plate glass," "looking glass," "keep this edge upwards," were written on the case, but no declaration was made of the nature & value of the article, & no increased rate of carriage paid. The parcel was conveyed from Y. to the place of its ultimate destination, on a brewer's truck, that being the usual mode in which parcels were conveyed in that part of the country. When the glass was unpacked it was found to be broken :—Held : the carrier was not liable for the damage occasioned by the breaking of the glass.

309. —— What is "value."]—Pltf. purchased certain articles of jewellery from the manufacturers of the value of £11 14*s.*, but on the condition that if the price were paid within a month a discount of 15 per cent. would be allowed, reducing the value to £9 19*s.* The price was paid by pltf. within the month. Pltf. consigned these articles to a customer in J. by deft. railway without having declared their value, & they were lost in transit. The price charged to the customer exceeded the sum of £11 14*s.* :—Held : in such cases value means the value to the consignor of the goods, which is the price his consignee has contracted to pay for the goods, & as the price contracted to be paid was over £10 pltf. in the circumstances could not recover.—BLANKENSEE v. LONDON & NORTH WESTERN RY. 341. —— Declaration for customs purposes—Insufficient.]—In 1881 a firm of forwarding agents requested defts. to charge the reduced rate at owner's risk, where such rates existed, for the carriage of their goods, consigned by them or on their account, &, in consideration thereof, agreed that the goods were to be forwarded solely at the risk of the owner, with the exception that the co. should be responsible for any wilful act or wilful default of the co. or their servants, if proved for fraud or theft by their servants. In 1905 one of four bales of furs placed by pltfs.' representatives, the forwarding agents, in defts.' custody for delivery was lost in transit. The forwarding agents had made a declaration of the nature and value for customs purposes & for the purposes of the ship's manifest, under Customs Consolidation Act, 1876 (c. 36), s 64, treating the four bales as one parcel. No other declaration as to value had been made. In an action claiming the return of the bale or its value, and for damages for its detention:—Held: (1) at the time of the loss the goods were still in transit, & the contract of carriage governed the relationship of the parties. If the goods were lost by negligence after the warehousing period had commenced defts. would have been liable. The goods, however, although stolen by some person unknown, were not lost by negligence. Defts. could not of themselves diminish their own liability as carriers by giving a notice to a consignee, who was not in default in taking delivery, & the goods still in transit.

(2) Semble: the receipt of goods by a common carrier under a special contract would not deprive him of the protection of 1830 Act, s. 1, unless the terms of the contract were inconsistent with the goods having been received by him as a common carrier.

(3) Semble: the declaration, for the purpose of fulfilling Custom House Rules, as to the nature & value, treating the four bales as one parcel, was not a sufficient declaration of nature & value within 1830 Act, s. 1. There must be a declaration with regard to the contents of each particular parcel, & made for the purposes of the rate.—HIRSCHEL & MEYER v. GREAT EASTERN RY. CO. (1906), 96 L. T. 147; 22 T. L. R. 661; 50 Sol. Jo. 576; 12 Com. Cas. 11.

342. Time for—On delivery of goods to carrier.]—(1) A person who delivers to a carrier goods of the description mentioned in 1830 Act, must, in order to fix the carrier with the responsibility for their loss, declare to him the nature & value of the goods at the time of their delivery, whether it takes place at his office, or on the road, or elsewhere.

(2) If no such declaration be made, the omission of the carrier to affix in his office the notice required by that statute, will not render him responsible.

(3) The notice to be affixed by the carrier, under s. 2, is required only for the purpose of his making an increased charge for the conveyance of such goods after having received notice of their value & nature from the sender.—HART v. BAXENDALE, BAXENDALE v. HART (1852), 6 Exch. 769; 21 L. 343. Effect of concealment—Estoppel.]—Pltf. delivered to the booking clerk of defts., a railway co., a parcel containing a glass bowl, for carriage to G., & told him that he wished to have it insured, but did not declare the value. The clerk charged him the ordinary rate for glass up to £10 in value carried at co.'s risk. On glass over £10 in value an additional insurance rate ought to have been charged. In the office there was, in compliance with 1830 Act, s. 2, a notice which was headed "Insurance." The bowl was damaged in transit:—Held: (1) as pltf. had concealed the material fact that the parcel was above £10 in value defts. were not estopped from denying the existence of

347. Terms not inconsistent with exemptions claimed—Bill of lading.]—Declaration, that pltfs. delivered on board deft.'s ship certain pictures on terms agreed between them; amongst others, that defts. should carry the pictures on board their ship from R. to H., with liberty to tranship them on any other steamer or railway, & deliver them to pltfs. at the port of L. via H., certain perils excepted, for certain freight to be paid by pltfs. to defts.; that defts. did not deliver the pictures to pltfs., although a reasonable time had elapsed, & they had not been prevented by any of the excepted perils. Plea, that the pictures were goods within s. 1 of the 1830 Act, s. 1, & were delivered to defts., they being common carriers by land for hire between H. & L., to be carried from H. to L. & delivered to pltfs. in L.; that the goods were contained in one package & exceeded £10 in value; that at the time of the delivery to defts.' servants the value & nature of the goods were not declared by the persons delivering them; & that the non-delivery by defts. to pltfs. was by reason of the same being lost out of defts.' possession while being carried from H. to L.

Defts., a railway co., carried on the business of carriers between R. & L. via H., the sea journey being performed by their steamships, & the land portion between H. & L. by their railway. A case of pictures was delivered to defts.' agents in R. for carriage to L., & defts.' agents signed a bill of lading; "Shipped in good order on board the A. . . . one small case pictures . . . with liberty to tranship the same on board any other steamer or railway, & are to be delivered at the port of L. via H., the act of God (& various sea perils), also railway accidents being excepted, to [pltfs.] or assigns . . . weight, contents, & value unknown, & not answerable for leakage, breakage, &c., & for wrong delivery of goods caused by error or by insufficiency in marks or numbers." The case containing the pictures was placed on board defts.' ship A. at R., & unshipped at H., & forwarded by defts.' railway, & was lost in the course of transit between Harwich and London. No declaration of the value, £84, was ever made:—Held: (1) 1830 Act, s. 6 applies only to contracts the provisions of which are inconsistent with the exemption claimed by the carrier under s. 1; (2) the fact of goods being received by a common carrier under a special contract does not deprive him of the protection of the Act, unless the terms of the contract are such as to be inconsistent with the goods having been received by him in his capacity of a common carrier; (3) by the terms of the bill of lading there was a contract to carry by sea from R. touching at H., to L. or to carry by sea from R. to H., & on land by railway from H. to L.; the contract was divisible, & the terms as to the land carriage were not inconsistent with defts. being subject to all the liabilities of common carriers, except those expressly accepted; & defts, were therefore also entitled to the protection given by the Act to common carriers; (4) the plea was therefore good, & proved; (5) defts. could not avail themselves of the proviso in 1854 Act, s. 7, which provides that no special contract between a railway co. & any other party as to the forwarding of goods shall be binding upon such party unless signed by him or by the person delivering the goods.—BAXENDALE v. GREAT EASTERN RY. 348. Exclusion of liability—Contract based on notice—Special agreement.]—Resp. took a horse to a station on the railway of applts., who were common carriers of horses, to be carried to a distance along the line. After paying the charge for carriage he signed a ticket produced by the co.'s clerk which stated that it was issued subject to the owner's undertaking to bear all risk of injury by conveyance &/or contingencies, etc., & that the co. would not be responsible, etc. for any damages however caused to horses, etc. travelling upon their railway or in their vehicles. The horse was injured during the journey:—Held: the ticket was not a mere notice which would be void under 1830 Act, s. 4, but contained the terms of a special agreement between resp. & the co.

a. What is sufficient.]—The notice prescribed by Carriers Act, 1830, s. 2, must be affixed in a part of the office so public & conspicuous that its contents shall be legible to persons resorting to the office for business, & transacting that business in the ordinary way while standing outside the counter.—COLLIS v. MIDLAND GREAT WESTERN RY. 349. —— —— ——.]—Defts. had printed many notices declaring that they would not carry fish except on terms relieving them from all liability, & declaring also that none of their servants had power to vary those terms; a parcel of these notices had been sent to S., & served on the fish merchants there, including pltf.; they generally threw down the notices; pltf. had told defts.' station master at S. that they were not of any use; after which the fish were sent by pltf. by defts.' railway, & were not duly carried. The judge advised the jury, if they were satisfied that pltf. was served with the notice, to infer, as a fact, that he sent the fish on a special contract embodying the terms contained in it, unless pltf., before he sent the fish, unambiguously dissented from the terms, & defts. acquiesced in his dissent :—Held : (1) the direction was, in the circumstances, right; (2) 1830 Act, s. 4, is confined to public notices; (3) the jury might rightly infer, from pltf. having special notice that fish would not be taken except on certain terms & that no one had power to vary the terms, & from his afterwards persisting in sending his fish, that he assented to a special contract to carry on these terms; (4) defts. were in that case protected by this special contract under s. 6.—WALKER v. YORK & NORTH MIDLAND RY. (2) A notice was posted up in a carrier's office referring to 1830 Act, & embodying the terms of that Act, but leaving out the provision in s. 8 with regard to the felony of servants, & containing a list of increased prices at which the carrier consented to carry valuables :—Held : such notice was a good notice under s. 2 of the Act, but not one which, if merely seen by the customer, would support a special contract excluding the operation of the Act, so as to get rid of the exception in s. 8.—DRAYSON v. HORNE (1875), 32 L. The owner signed a consignment note on which was printed the common condition that the co. would not be liable for loss or damage to goods of the kind described in 1830 Act, unless declared & an assurance paid. The owner paid the ordinary charge for the carriage, but did not declare the articles or pay or tender any extra charge. The jewellery having been stolen during the transit by a servant of the co., without any negligence on the part of the co. :—Held : a loss by theft of a co.'s servant without negligence on the part of the co. was not within 1854 Act, s. 7, &, therefore, the co. could at common law protect themselves by a special contract, notwithstanding 1830 Act, s. 8, & although such contract was not reasonable within 1854 Act, s. 7.—SHAW v. GREAT WESTERN RY. H. Loss by Felony of Carrier's Servant.

352. Who is carrier's servant—Servant of agent.]—(1) If a carrier who contracts to deliver goods from A. to B. enters into a sub-contract with another party to convey those goods over a certain portion of the journey, such sub-contractor & every person employed by him in the performance of the contract, is a servant in the employ of the carrier within 1830 Act, s. 8.

(2) A delivery ticket issued by a railway co. as common carriers, in respect of goods they had undertaken to carry, described several persons, amongst others J., as porters in their employ. The pictures were loaded in a van in the defts.' yard ready to be sent to their destination, when a man represented himself to be C., a driver in the employ of M. who carried for defts., & defts.' delivery clerk gave the man a pass which enabled him to drive the van out of the yard, & so to steal the pictures. There was a man named C. in M.'s employ, but he was not the guilty person :—Held : defts. were not estopped from denying that the thief was their servant.—WAY v. GREAT EASTERN RY. Co. one of their stations; while there they were obtained by a person in the employ of the proprietor of the receiving-office, by means of a forged order, & were stolen:—Held: defts. were not protected by 1830 Act, as the loss had arisen from the felonious act of a person who was a servant of defts. within s. 8.—STEPHENS v. LONDON & SOUTH WESTERN RY. 356. Negligence of carrier—Case not within Act.]—Pltfs. declared against defts. as common carriers subject to the terms of a special notice, for the loss of a truss of silk by the gross negligence of defts. & the felonious acts of their servants. Defts. pleaded, except as to the gross negligence & felony, that the goods were such as are excepted in 1830 Act, & that defts. did not declare their value. Pltf. now assigned that he had brought his action for that defts.' servants had feloniously stolen the goods:—Held: (1) the new assignment was bad & pltfs. might amend on payment of costs, & reply that the goods were lost by the felony of defts.' servants through the gross negligence of defts.; (2) the allegation of gross negligence & felony in the declaration was surplusage, & a replication of felony only without an allegation of gross negligence would have been bad.—BUTT v. GREAT WESTERN RY. 357. —— Gross negligence.]—(1) A parcel was delivered to a railway co. to be carried from A. to B.; & there were eleven parcels in the waybill & ten in the guard's book; the parcels, including the one in question, were duly delivered to the guard, & afterwards, in his absence, & without his knowledge, a porter put another parcel in the box, & entered it in the bill, & the guard did not count the parcels till he arrived at B., after stopping at several stations, when the parcel was missing:—Held: there was no evidence that the parcel had been stolen by one of the co.'s servants.

362 ii. —— —— Onus of proof.]—In an action against a ry. co. for the value of silk dresses stolen while in the custody of the co. as carriers:—Held: (1) it was not sufficient for pursuer to prove that there was a greater probability of the theft having been committed by servants of the co. than by strangers; (2) onus lies on the senders of goods stolen in transitu to establish the theft against the servants of the carrier.—CAMPBELLS v. NORTH BRITISH RY. Pltf. having sued to recover the value of the drawings, defts. pleaded 1830 Act, to which pltf. replied felony by defts.' servants:—Held: a direction to the jury that if the facts, in their opinion, were more consistent with the guilt of defts.' servants than with that of any other person not in their employ that was sufficient to call upon defts. for an answer, which not having been given, the inference might well be that a felony had been committed by some of defts.' servants, was a wrong direction, for the greater probability that the goods were stolen by defts.' servants merely arose from their having greater opportunity of committing the theft; & this alone did not make out a primâ facie case that the felony had been committed by one of defts.' servants.—MCQUEEN v. GREAT WESTERN RY. 365. —— —— ——.]—Where 1830 Act is pleaded to an action against carriers for loss of goods, proof that the goods were stolen, & that defts.' servants had greater facility of access than other persons, is not evidence for the jury of a felony by defts.' servants.

A box containing silk was delivered to defts. not declared under 1830 Act, & despatched by goods train on a truck. On the journey, after stopping at two junctions where the train divided, the box was found broken open & the silk gone:—Held: no evidence of felony by defts.' servants.—TURNER v. GREAT WESTERN RY. 366. —— —— ——.]—Pltfs. contracted with defts., a railway co., for the carriage of certain goods, at owners' risk, pltfs. agreeing to relieve the co. from all liability for loss, damage, misdelivery, delay, or detention, except upon proof that such loss, damage, misdelivery, delay, or detention arose from wilful misconduct on the part of the co.'s servants. A parcel consigned to defts. for carriage under the contract was made up of six pairs of boots, each pair put in a separate cardboard box, and then carefully packed with a piece of cardboard at the top & bottom of the parcel, with an inner & an outer covering of paper, the whole being tied securely. Between the time when the parcel was handed to the co., & when it was delivered by the co. to the employees of the consignee, some one unpacked the parcel under conditions which enabled him subsequently to pack it up again, extracted two pairs of boots, replaced the empty boxes, & packed up the parcel again in such a way as to represent that it was in the condition in which it had left pltfs.' premises. The trains accomplishing part of the particular journey were principally composed of corridor stock, but beyond that there was no evidence that the particular train in which the parcel was carried was composed of corridor stock. There was no evidence that any member of the general public had effective access to the parcel:—Held: the inference could properly be drawn that the two pairs of boots in question had been stolen by some person or persons in the railway co.'s employment, & pltfs. had discharged the onus of proving that the loss or damage arose from the wilful misconduct of defts.' servants, & defts. were liable for the loss.—SMITH (H. A. Scope and Effect.

367. Application of 1854 Act, s. 7—Not beyond limit of own lines.]—1854 Act, s. 7, is to be read in connection with s. 2, & applies only to lines belonging to or worked by the cos. who undertake to carry. A railway co. may, therefore, make any stipulations it pleases as to the receiving, forwarding, & delivering of traffic beyond the limits of the lines belonging to or worked by it; & the special contract containing such stipulations need not be signed by the person with whom the co. contracts.

Pltf. took at L. station of the defts.' railway a through ticket from L. to P., the ticket being in three coupons, the first from L. to D., the second from D. to C., & the third from C. to P. On the ticket was printed a notice that defts. would not be responsible for loss, or detention of, or injury to, the luggage of passengers travelling by this through ticket, except whilst travelling by defts.' trains or boats, & would incur no responsibility of any kind beyond what should arise in connection with its own trains & boats, in consequence of passengers being booked to travel over the railways of other companies, such through booking being only for the convenience of the passenger.

The goods were then forwarded by ss. co. to B., to be forwarded to L. 368. —— To passengers' luggage.]—1854 Act, s. 7, by which notices limiting railway cos.' liability for neglect in receiving, forwarding, or delivering articles, goods, or things are void & no special contract respecting such receiving, etc., is binding unless signed, applies to passengers' luggage, & was extended by Regulation of Railways Act, 1868 (c. 119), s. 16 [now repealed as to this], to traffic carried by steamers owned or worked by railway cos.

C. took a through ticket from B. in France by defts.' steamer to F. & rail to L. On the face of the ticket was a condition that defts. were not responsible for luggage of greater value than £6. C. did not sign any special contract. In landing at F. C.'s luggage was damaged to an amount exceeding £6 by the negligence of defts.' servants. By French law the condition on the ticket would be void:—Held: assuming English law governed the case, which it was unnecessary to decide, the condition was void, & defts. were liable.—COHEN v. SOUTH EASTERN RY. 370. —— To whole traffic—On railways & canals only.]—(1) 1854 Act applied to the whole traffic upon railways, and not merely to their passenger traffic, but only applied to traffic on railways or canals.

(2) 1863 Act, s. 31, extends 1854 Act to steam vessels, and the traffic carried on thereby, which vessels railway cos. own or work.

(3) Railways Regulation Act, 1871 (c. 119), s. 12, applies to cases where a railway co. under a contract to carry persons, animals or goods by sea, procures the same to be carried in a vessel not belonging to the co., not worked by the co., & the co. becomes liable for damage in like manner as if the vessel had belonged to the railway co.

(4) 1854 Act, s. 7, did not allow of the limitation of the liabilities of railway cos., except by such conditions as should be held by the ct. to be just or reasonable, & be embodied in a special contract, which should be signed by the owner of the goods.

(5) "Servants" in 1854 Act, s. 7, means not merely servants, properly so called, but also the agents, not strictly servants, employed by railway cos. to do for them work which they are under a contract with others to perform.

(6) A railway co. made contracts to carry animals from a port of I. to a town in E. on "through" tickets. The paper or ticket contained, in substance, the following condition: "that with respect to any animals, etc., booked through, by them or their agents for conveyance partly by railway & partly by sea, or partly by canal & partly by sea, such animals, etc., will only be so conveyed on the condition that the co. shall be exempt from any liability for any loss or damages which may arise during the carriage of such animals, etc., by sea, from the act of God, etc., accidents from machinery, etc., & all & every other damages & accidents of the seas, rivers, & navigation of whatever nature & kind soever, in the same manner as if the co. had signed & delivered to the consignor a bill of lading containing such condition. Nor will the co. be responsible for loss of, or damage to, animals, etc., arising from damages or accidents of the sea, or of steam navigation, the act of God, etc., jettison, barratry, collision, improper, careless, or unskilful navigation, accidents connected with machinery or boilers, or any default or negligence of the master or any of the officers or crews of the co.'s vessels":—Held: the words "master & crew of the co.'s vessels" in the condition applied to all such vessels as the co. should employ, & not merely to vessels owned or worked by the co. itself; & (7) the condition was unreasonable & void.

(8) If a railway co. is guilty of an illegality by working steamboats, not being authorised by law to work them, it cannot set up such illegality as an answer to a claim for damages arising out of the working of such steamboats.—DOOLAN v. MIDLAND RY. 372. —— Delay—No negligence.]—Goods carried at various times by deft. co. for pltfs. arrived too late for market, & pltfs. suffered loss for which they sued. In answer to questions left to them by the judge, the jury found that defts. accepted the goods with the knowledge that they were to be sold in particular markets, that defts. lost those markets, but that they had not, except in one instance, been guilty of negligence.

Two kinds of consignment notes had been used, one of which contained a notice that defts. had two rates for the carriage of the goods thereinunder mentioned, an ordinary rate, when the co. took the ordinary liability of a railway co., & a reduced rate, adopted when the sender agreed to relieve the co. from all liability for loss, damage, misdelivery, delay, or detention, except upon proof that such loss, etc., arose from wilful misconduct on the part of the co.'s servants. Defts. admitted that, as a matter of fact, they had only one rate for the carriage of the class of goods consigned by pltfs. Both kinds of consignment notes contained a condition that the co. would not be liable for any loss of market:—Held: (1) if 1854 Act, s. 7, had been applicable, the condition would have been unreasonable; but (2) as the jury had negatived negligence, defts. were not within s. 7, & at common law, the condition was good as a notice to the consignor; (3) in the circumstances, it was not in the contemplation of the parties that damages should be paid for the loss of the market.—DUCKHAM

373. —— No obligation to carry goods contracted for.]—1854 Act, s. 7, is applicable to a case where a railway co., though under no obligation to carry certain goods, has, nevertheless, made a contract for their carriage.

Deft. co. by their timetables offered to allow commercial travellers to take with them by passenger train, free of charge, a certain amount of luggage, which was not ordinary passengers' luggage, on the condition that the co. were relieved from all liability for loss, damage, misdelivery, or delay. Pltfs., who were commercial travellers, in pursuance of this offer, but without signing any special contract to that effect, took with them on a journey by deft. co.'s line a case of samples, which was lost on the journey by the negligence of the co.'s servants :—Held : as no special contract had been signed by pltfs., 1854 Act, s. 7, applied, & the condition being thereby made null & void, deft. co. were liable for the loss of the samples.—WILKINSON v. LANCASHIRE & YORKSHIRE RY., [1907] 2 K. (3) A special contract for the carriage of goods by sea which exempts the railway co. from all liability for damage due to the negligence of its servants is not just & reasonable where there is no alternative rate offered to the consignor upon which the goods might be carried.—JENKINS v. GREAT CENTRAL RY., [1912] 1 K. 376. —— Or special Railway Acts before 1863.]—(1) 1863 Act, s. 31, does not apply to a railway co. whose special Acts were passed before 1863 Act.

(2) Regulation of Railways Act, 1868 (c. 119), s. 14, does not operate to prevent a railway co. making conditions with a passenger travelling with a free pass which exempt the co. from liability for the loss of such passenger's luggage, although no notice has been posted in the co.'s offices as required by that sect.

A husband & wife were travelling on defts.' steamship on a free pass. The steamship was wrecked & the husband was drowned, & both his & his wife's luggage were lost. Upon the free pass was printed a condition exonerating defts. from any injury, delay, loss, or damage, however caused. Defts. obtained a decree of limitation of liability, & paid the limit of their liability into ct. The wife & children brought a claim under Fatal Accidents Act, 1846 (c. 93), for the loss of their husband & father :—Held : (3) the condition covered negligence, & was applicable both to sea & land transit ; (4) a claim by the wife for the loss of her property, & as his personal representative, for the loss of her husband's property, was likewise barred by the condition.—THE STELLA, [1900] P. 161 ; 69 L. C. Special Contract or Condition.

(a) Must be Signed and Reasonable.

381. By owner or sender of goods.]—All the parts of 1854 Act, s. 7, must be read together, & therefore the conditions there spoken of as capable of being imposed by railway cos. in limitation of their liability as common carriers must not only be, in the opinion of the ct. just & reasonable, but must also be embodied in a special contract in writing, signed by the owner or sender of the goods.

The owner of some marble chimney pieces desired to send them to L. Messages & notes passed between him & the agent of a railway co. on the subject of the terms on which they were to be carried. The agent stated, as a condition, that the co. would not be responsible for damage to the goods sent by the railway, unless their value was declared & they were insured, the rate of insurance being fixed at 10 per cent. on the declared value. After some delay the agent received a note requesting that the marbles might be forthwith sent to L. "not insured" ; they were sent, & suffered damage :—Held : (1) the condition thus sought to be imposed by the co. was not just & reasonable ; (2) there was not any special contract signed by the parties within the meaning of 1854 Act, s. 7 ; (3) the note could not be connected with the other communications so as to constitute the required contract ; (4) the words "not insured" could not be made the

382. By or on behalf of consignor—Agent of consignor & carrier.]—(1) Any condition limiting the liability of a railway co. as carriers must be a condition just & reasonable in the judgment of the ct., & must be set out in a written or printed contract signed by or on behalf of the consignor of the goods.

Certain packages called "empties" were delivered to a railway co. to be carried to a place beyond their line, the person by whom they were delivered signing on the consignor's behalf a printed note containing, among others, conditions that the co. would not be answerable for the loss or detention of, or damage to, wrappers or packages of any description charged by the co. as "empties," nor in respect of goods destined for places beyond the limits of the co.'s railway; &, as respects the co., their responsibility would cease when the goods should have been delivered over to another carrier in the usual course for further conveyance; any money which might be received by the co. as payment for the conveyance of goods beyond their own limits would be so received only for the convenience of the consignors, & for the purpose of being paid to the other carrier; the co. would not be liable for any loss of or injury to articles, except on proof that such loss or injury was occasioned by the neglect or default of the co. or its servants. The goods were carried duly to G., where defts.' line ended, & were there handed over to the M. Co. in further prosecution of the transit, after which the detention & damage of which pltf. complained took place:—Held: (1) the second of the above conditions was just & reasonable within 1854 Act, s. 7, & discharged defts. from liability in respect of the damage & detention complained of; (2) a signature of the special contract by a "railway agent" employed by the consignor to deliver & by the co. to receive the goods for them, is a sufficient signature to satisfy 1854 Act, s. 7.

(3) Semble: the co. were not to be considered as mere gratuitous bailees because the "empties" were carried free of charge, the contract for payment for the same packages when forwarded full including a contract or engagement on their part to make no additional charge for returning them when empty, & that the first condition was, therefore, not just & reasonable.—ALDRIDGE v. GREAT WESTERN RY. (b) What is Sufficient Signature.

386. Signature under mistake—Induced by carrier's servant.]—A declaration against a railway co., for damage to goods entrusted to them to carry, alleged that the goods were delivered to defts. as common carriers, & that they received them as such common carriers. Plea, that the goods were received by defts. to be carried subject to a special contract whereby they were declared not to be answerable for any loss or damage, however caused. In support of the plea, defts. produced a paper, signed by pltf., acknowledging that the goods were to be carried subject to certain conditions, one of which was, that the co. were not to be responsible for any loss or damage, however caused, etc. On the part of pltf., it was proved, that, when asked by a clerk of defts. at the time the goods were delivered at the co.'s warehouse to sign the paper, pltf. expressed his unwillingness to do so, inasmuch as he could not see to read it, whereupon the clerk said that it was of no consequence, & that the signature was a mere matter of form; & that pltf., relying upon that assurance, signed the paper:—Held: upon this evidence, the jury were warranted in finding that the goods were not delivered to the co. to be carried under the special contract.—SIMONS v.

d. Signature not necessary to bind owner—Paying reduced rate—Passenger's bicycle.]—A ry. co. received a bicycle, to be carried at a reduced rate at passenger's risk, accompanied by the passenger, & his ticket had these conditions printed on it, & a statement that the co. accepted no responsibility for loss or damage, & that the ticket was to be taken as conclusive evidence of an agreement to that effect; the passenger left the train & travelled to his destination by another train, & the bicycle was lost: Held:—the co. was not liable although the passenger had not signed the conditions.—DEVERY v. GREAT NORTHERN RY. 384 i. Effect of want of.]—Goods were delivered by A. to D., P. & A. 387. Knowledge of conditions of contract—Conditions not read.]—Pltf. delivered to a railway co. eighteen packages to be carried on their line. He filled up & signed a receiving note describing the goods as "furniture." On the paper under the head "Conditions," were these words:—"No claim for deficiency, damage or detention will be allowed, unless made within three days after the delivery of the goods; nor for loss, unless made within seven days of the time they should have been delivered"; & "the co. will not be answerable for the loss or detention of any goods which may be untruly or incorrectly described in the receiving note." Pltf. said, "he was told to sign the paper & did so. He might have seen the word "Conditions," but he did not read them, & did not know, & was not told what they were." One of the packages consisted of a sack of clothes, which was not delivered, but no claim was made until more than seven days from the time when the same should have been delivered:—Held: (1) there was nothing to rebut the presumption arising from the signature of the paper by pltf. that he understood that the contract was subject to the conditions; (2) the conditions were just & reasonable within 1854 Act, s. 7; & the co. had a defence to an action on the ground that the claim was not made within seven days, & that the bag of clothes was misdescribed.

(3) Qu.: whether, under 1854 Act, s. 7, the decision of a judge at Nisi Prius, as to the reasonableness of the conditions can be reviewed by the ct. above, where leave for that purpose is not reserved.—LEWIS v. GREAT WESTERN RY. CO. (1860), 5 H. & N. 867; 29 L. J. Ex. 425; 157 E. R. 1427.

388. Signature of agent—Binding on principal.]—Held: (1) a set of conditions in a consignment note is unreasonable & void under 1854 Act, s. 7, if any part of it is unreasonable; (2) a condition not to be liable for delay, however caused, is unreasonable; (3) where an agent who is employed to deliver cattle to be sent by a railway co., signs the consignment note, he must be taken to have known the contents, & to bind his principal.

(4) An agent for a railway co., who is employed to obtain custom for them, does not bind them by his representations as to the railway accommodation.

389. —— ——.]—(1) The servant of pltf., the sender of goods, signed a consignment note on which there was a notice that deft. railway co. charged alternative rates, lower or higher according as the goods were carried at owner's or at co.'s risk; it was in evidence that the higher rate which was within the Parliamentary limit was posted up in the office of the co.; that if the sender had declined to send on the conditions contained in the consignment note at the lower rate a general consignment note would have been offered him for carriage of the goods at the higher rate; & that the consignment note signed on behalf of pltf. had been in general use for a long time & had been adopted by pltf.:—Held: in the circumstances there was a sufficient offer of an option to render the contract contained in the consignment note reasonable within 1854 Act.

(2) Where a railway co. charge alternative rates for conveyance of cattle or goods, the lower rate being at owner's risk, a priori the higher rate, if within the Parliamentary limit, is not necessarily reasonable or prohibitory.

(3) It is a question for the jury whether the higher rate is unreasonable in the sense that it is so high as to be prohibitory; the mere fact that the lower rate is so low that cattle dealers invariably avail themselves of it is not, standing alone, evidence that the higher rate is unreasonable or prohibitory.

(4) A man, who can read, who sends an agent who cannot read, to sign a document or to enter into a contract in which a document must to his knowledge be signed, cannot dispute his liability on the document so signed, on the ground that his agent could not read its contents; in such a case the principal must be taken to be in the same position as though he had signed it himself without reading it.—FOREMAN v. GREAT WESTERN RY. CO. (1878), 38 L. T. 851; 42 J. P. 648.

390. Printed signature.]—Pltfs. asked defts. to send to their works a 5-ton waggon for machinery which they desired delivered from L. to R. A waggon of 3 tons capacity was sent, which broke down & the machinery was rendered useless. Pltfs. used a printed consignment form of their own, in the middle of which, after the words "goods specified below as received from," the name of their firm was printed; at the bottom, after the words "carriage paid by," their forwarding clerk wrote "B. & Co." & "pieces over 2 tons owner's risk," & defts.' carman signed pltfs.' delivery book. The ordinary rate charged for carriage from L. to R. was 22*s.* 2*d.* per ton, & the reduced rate for owner's risk 19*s.* 2*d.* Defts. in 1903 sent out notices to traders, including, as they alleged, pltfs., that though they used their own forms with owner's risk put on them defts. would only carry at owner's risk on the conditions set out in their standard consignment forms enclosing copies under which they were only to be liable for wilful misconduct. The clerk who wrote in "B. & Co." understood that pltfs. by owner's risk got the reduced rate, & that defts. claimed only to be liable for wilful misconduct. On an action to render defts. liable as common carriers:—Held: (1) there was a special contract within 1854 Act, s. 7, the printed name of the firm being in the circumstances a signature within that sect.; (2) the terms of the conditions were that defts. were only liable for wilful misconduct, which was understood by pltfs.; (3) those conditions were just & reasonable within the sect., as a fair alternative was open to pltfs., who preferred to it the owner's risk conditions, & none the less because all liability except for wilful misconduct was excluded as a part of such conditions; (4) there being no will on the part of defts.' servants to do any act which they knew to be wrong, there was no wilful misconduct, & therefore defts. were not liable for the damage caused.—BUCKTON (JOSHUA), & Co., LTD. v. LONDON & NORTH WESTERN RY. risk." Defts. had some time previously sent to their customers, including pltfs., notices referring to defts.' two forms of consignment note—namely, "Owner's risk" consignment note, & "Company's risk" consignment note. One of the conditions on defts.' "Owner's risk" note was that the co. should not be liable for the loss of goods unless a claim was made in writing within fourteen days. The goods were not delivered to the consignees, but no claim was made within the time specified :—Held : (1) the condition was just & reasonable ; (2) the effect of the words "at owner's risk" was to incorporate the co.'s "owner's risk" consignment note, & the condition as to notice of claim formed part of the special contract & was binding upon pltfs. ; (3) as the evidence showed that pltfs.' signature appeared on the consignment note in order to authenticate it, it was immaterial that it was printed at the top & not at the foot of the document.—WADE & Co. v. LONDON & NORTH WESTERN RY. i. In General.

392. Question of law.]—(1) 1854 Act, s. 7, does not prevent a railway co. from making a special contract as to the terms upon which they will carry goods, provided such contract be just & reasonable, & signed by the party sending the goods ; it is for the ct. to say, upon the whole matters brought before them, whether or not the condition or special contract is just & reasonable.

(2) A condition, that the co. will not be accountable for the loss, detention, or damage of any package insufficiently or improperly packed :—Held : unjust & unreasonable.

(3) Semble : a condition that no claim for damage will be allowed, unless made within three days after the delivery of the goods, nor for loss, unless made within three days of the time that they should be delivered, is just & reasonable.

(4) A condition, that, in the case of goods conveyed at special or mileage rate, the co. will not be responsible for any loss or damage, however caused, is just & reasonable.—SIMONS v. GREAT WESTERN RY. arising in the loading or unloading, from suffocation, or from being trampled on, bruised, or otherwise injured in transit, from fire, or from any other cause whatsoever, is a reasonable condition within 1854 Act, s. 7.

(2) Held: a request note, filled up & signed by the sender, requesting trucks to be provided for the conveyance of cattle on the above condition, protected the co. from responsibility for the loss of cattle by suffocation during the journey, occasioned by the negligence of the co.'s servants.

(3) The railway co. conveyed pltf.'s cattle from N. to G. in a close van intended for salt, but to the use of which pltf.'s agent did not object. Pltf.'s drover, who had a free pass, to travel with the cattle, was permitted to travel in the guard's break; & on arriving at G. it was found that the lid of the van had, by some unexplained means, closed during the journey, by which the cattle were suffocated:—Semble: independently of the condition, there was no evidence of negligence on the part of the co.—PARDINGTON v. SOUTH WALES RY. Pltf. brought three horses to the cattle station of defts.' railway at L., to be forwarded by a cattle truck to Y. Defts.' servant provided a truck for the purpose, which to all external appearance, & so far as the servant knew, was sufficient for the purpose. Pltf. signed a ticket which contained the following memorandum:—"This ticket is issued subject to the owners undertaking all risks of conveyance, loading & unloading whatsoever, as the co. will not be responsible for an injury or damage, howsoever caused, occurring to livestock of any description travelling upon the railway or in their vehicles." Twopence per mile was charged for horses laden at the cattle station. Horses so laden were forwarded in open trucks by a cattle or luggage train. At the passenger station horses were taken at the rate of fourpence a horse per mile. Horses laden at that station were forwarded in horse boxes by the trains departing from the passenger station, usually passenger trains. The tickets issued by the co. for horses forwarded by the passenger trains were similar to that signed by pltf. The truck proved to be insufficient for the carriage of the horses, & a hole was made in it on the journey, by which the horses were injured:—Held: (2) the condition that the co. "would not be responsible for any injury or damage, howsoever caused," was not just & reasonable, & was void; (3) it did not protect defts. from liability in respect of the defect in the truck.—M'MANUS v. LANCASHIRE & YORKSHIRE RY. Pltf. had delivered a quantity of cheese at a station of defts. railway, to be carried to B. for the purpose of being sold at a certain market, & signed a note containing a condition that the co. should not be liable for loss of market or other delay arising from detention:—Held: (1) defts. had not received the cheese to be carried by them as common carriers; (2) the condition was reasonable within 1854 Act, s. 7.—WHITE v. GREAT WESTERN RY. 416. ——.]—Pltf. had for many years consigned to defts. for carriage wooden cisterns lined with lead, which were fitted with a crossbar, & had attached a lever which projected above the edge of the cistern; they were carried by defts. unpacked at the ordinary rate of carriage & at co.'s risk. Many of the crossbars & levers having been broken in transit, owing, as defts. alleged, to their brittle nature & to their not being protected by packing, the defts. gave notice in 1907 that they were not, & would not be carriers of certain specified damageable goods, including cisterns, except when they were properly protected by packing. After the notice pltf. continued to consign cisterns for carriage by defts., but defts. required him to sign at the time of sending a special consignment note for damageable goods when not protected by packing. The note contained in substance a notice that defts. would not carry the specified damageable goods, a list of which was given, at co.'s risk except when properly protected by packing, but that the sender might consign them not so protected if he agreed to relieve defts. from liability for loss or injury, except on proof that it arose from wilful misconduct on the part of their servants. Then followed a form of agreement by which the sender agreed to the above terms & also to the conditions on the back of the consignment note, one of which conditions was that the co. would not be liable for any loss of, or damage to, or delay of goods resulting from their not being properly protected by packing. There was no alternative rate of carriage. Pltf. having sued to recover damages for injury done to cisterns in course of transit:—Held: (1) the goods were carried by defts. by virtue of their statutory obligation under 1854 Act, s. 2, to afford reasonable facilities for the carriage of traffic; (2) the requirement of packing was not a refusal of reasonable facilities; (3) the condition imposed on the carriage of unpacked articles in the signed consignment note was a just & reasonable condition within s. 7 of the Act.—SUTCLIFFE v. GREAT WESTERN RY. One of such regulations was that defts. would not be responsible for any passenger's luggage unless fully & properly addressed with the name & destination of the owner. Pltf. having with him at B. a bag which was not so addressed saw it labelled for K. by one of defts.' servants; he left the train at C. an intermediate station, & proceeded to K. by a subsequent train; on his arrival at K. his bag was missing. There was no evidence that the bag ever reached K.:—Held: (1) the regulation was not a just & reasonable condition within 1854 Act, s. 7, & could not be enforced against pltf.; (2) there was evidence of negligence on the part of defts. to go to the jury.

424. Makes risk condition reasonable.]—Horses sent from S. by defts.' railway to W., to be delivered there, were sent to a station called H. station; if booked through to M., as they might be, they were sent to B., a mile beyond W., to meet a train on another railway, to be carried to M. Horses might be sent either by horse-boxes & passenger train, when the co. charged more money & took more risk, or by cattle-trucks & goods train, when they charged less & took less risk.

Pltf. went to the station-master at S., & required twelve horses to be carried to M., by the latter method; the station-master told him he could not book through, but would telegraph to W. to have the horses sent on to meet the train on the other railway. Pltf. paid the fare to W., & signed a contract, on which was the direction, "S. to W.," & a declaration that the horses were carried at owner's risk. The trucks were directed to W.; the horses were taken to H. station, & it was clear that if they ought, under the contract, to have been carried to B., there was a delay of twenty-four hours, & consequent injury to the horses:—Held: (1) there was some evidence that W. meant B.; (2) as there was an alternative method of carriage, the condition as to risk was reasonable; (3) the condition did not apply to a failure to carry in a reasonable time.

(4) Pltf., in order to prove a contract to carry six horses from S. to M., relied on a conversation at M. with the station-master there, in which he, pltf., said he was going to send the horses, & the station-master said he would telegraph about them; on the fact of the arrival of the horses; & on the station-master conducting himself as if there was such a contract; but pltf. did not put in any written contract, though it was clear there was one:—Held: there was no evidence to go to the jury of a contract to carry the horses.—ROBINSON v. GREAT WESTERN RY. 425. —— Liability limited to negligence.]—A railway co. entered into a special contract by which they agreed to carry cattle at a lower rate on condition that they should be liable for negligence only:—Held: (1) this was not an unreasonable condition within 1854 Act, s. 7; (2) the condition took the co. out of the category of common law carriers & accordingly in an action against the co. for damage to the cattle during the journey, the onus of proving negligence was on pltf.—HARRIS v. MIDLAND RY. 426. ——.]—Pltf., under a contract in writing signed by his agent, delivered to defts. certain cheeses to be carried from L. to S. at owner's risk. As pltf. knew, defts. had two rates of carriage; a higher rate, when they took the ordinary liability of carriers, & a lower, when they were relieved of all liability except that arising from the wilful misconduct of their servants. In using the words owner's risk pltf. intended that the cheeses should be carried at the lower rate, & subject to the conditions restricting defts.' liability. Defts.' servants packed the cheeses in such a manner that during their transit upon defts.' railway they were damaged but defts.' servants did not know that damage would result from the mode in which the cheeses were packed:—Held: (1) as defts. carried at alternative rates, the condition excepting them from liability when carrying at the lower rate was just & reasonable; (2) the injury to the cheeses had not arisen from the wilful misconduct of their servants.—LEWIS v. GREAT WESTERN RY. The servants of the co. accepted the fish although from pressure of business they could not carry it in time for the intended market, & the fish lost the market:—Held: (1) upon the facts the merchant had a bonâ fide option to send fish at a reasonable rate with liability on the co. as common carriers or at the lower rate upon the terms of the contract; (2) the contract was in point of fact just & reasonable within 1854 Act, s. 7, & covered the delay; (3) the co. were not liable for the loss.—MANCHESTER, SHEFFIELD, & LINCOLNSHIRE RY. which was 10 per cent. above the owner's risk rate, at which the co. undertook the ordinary risk of carriers in respect of rail transit, limited for neat cattle to £15, for pigs & sheep to £2, but did not admit liability for any animals dying of disease or arriving at destination in such condition as to be able to walk from the truck. The consignor had never seen any rate but the owner's risk rate. After two trials cattle had ceased to go at the higher rate. The higher rate was less than the maximum allowed by the co.'s Acts. No list of rates was exhibited.—The cattle having been injured through the negligence, but not the wilful misconduct, of the co.'s servants :—Held : (1) the notice of the higher rate was not invalidated by the limitation as to value, nor by the fact that it did not mention the terms upon which cattle could be carried without limitation of value as provided by 1854 Act, s. 7 ; (2) the clause as to not admitting liability meant only that the liability must be established by proof, & so construed the condition was just & reasonable within s. 7 ; (3) the consignor might have known & must be taken to have known the terms of the higher rate, and had the offer of a just & reasonable alternative ; (4) the co. were therefore protected by the special contract.—GREAT WESTERN RY. 432. Transit partly by sea—No alternative rate for sea transit—Liability for negligence.]—Defts. owned steamers trading between A. & H. ; they also owned a line of railway from H. to W. Their special Act, which empowered them to maintain & work the steamers, applied 1854 Act to the steamers & traffic carried thereon. Pltfs. were in the habit of having goods consigned to them from A. to W. via H. by defts.' steamers & railway, & had signed an agreement requesting that all goods for which there were alternative rates delivered by them on their account at any of defts.' stations for carriage by railway might be carried at the reduced rates, & in consideration thereof pltfs. agreed to relieve defts. from all liability from loss, damages, misdelivery, delay, or detention except upon proof that such loss, etc., arose from wilful misconduct on the part of defts.' servants. Goods of pltfs. were shipped on defts.' steamer at A. for delivery at W. via H. at the reduced rate under a bill of lading which had "owner's risk" upon it, & which exempted defts. from liability for (inter alia) all accidents, loss, & damage whatsoever from any act, neglect, or default of the pilot, master, officers, engineers, or crew in the management of navigation of the ship or otherwise. The goods were damaged during the land journey between H. & W. owing to the negligence of defts.' servants. There was a higher rate for goods of the same class from A. to W. under which the goods would have been carried so far as the land portion of the journey was concerned, at defts.' risk as common carriers, but pltfs. would have to accept a bill of lading for the sea portion of the journey containing the same negligence clause as that in the bill of lading under which the goods were actually carried :—Held : there was evidence to support a finding that, as it was one journey from A. to W., & as during the sea portion of that journey there was no alternative rate under which pltfs. could have had the goods carried at defts.' risk as common carriers, the condition relieving defts. from liability for negligence was not just & reasonable within 1854 Act, s. 7, & defts. were liable for the damage to the goods.—WESTERN ELECTRIC CO., LTD. v. GREAT EASTERN RY. The carman requested pltfs.' servant to write "O. R." (owner's risk) upon the note tendered by him & to sign his initials. This he did. The machine was then taken away in defts.' van, & was afterwards found damaged at the station, the base being cracked. The evidence was that this must have been caused by a blow while the machine was in defts.' custody:—Held: though pltfs. took the ordinary risks of transit, defts. remained liable for negligence, &, as there was primâ facie evidence of negligence, the onus lay on defts. to prove that there was no negligence, & pltfs. were entitled to damages.—UNITED MACHINE TOOL CO. v. GREAT WESTERN RY. 442. General rule.]—A parcel of sheepskins which had been delivered by pltf. to defts. for carriage from P. to W. arrived at their destination in a damaged condition owing to their having been packed in a truck with wood chips, which had become entangled in the wool. Pltf. wrote to the station-master at W. complaining of the damage, & asking him to communicate with the authorities at P. to prevent a recurrence of the injury, as further consignments of sheepskins were expected to be sent off thence shortly. He received a reply saying, "I have asked our P. people not to use the kind of litter you object to in the future." Subsequently, pltf. sent a second parcel of sheepskins from P. to W. on the terms of an "owner's risk" note, whereby he relieved defts. from liability for damage except upon proof that it arose from wilful misconduct on the part of defts.' servants. This parcel, like the first, arrived damaged from being put into trucks containing wood chips. In an action to recover for the damage to the second parcel:—Held: (1) in the absence of proof that the persons who actually loaded the goods in the trucks or who superintended their loading had notice that the mode of packing employed was likely to be injurious to the goods, there was no evidence of wilful misconduct on the part of the defts.' servants: the mere fact that some other official of defts. had that notice was not sufficient; (2) wilful misconduct in such a special condition means misconduct to which the will is party as contra-distinguished from accidents, & is far beyond any negligence, even gross or culpable negligence, & involves that a person wilfully misconducts himself who knows & appreciates that it is wrong conduct on his part in the existing circumstances to do, or fail, or omit to do, as the case may be, a particular thing, & yet intentionally does, or fails, or omits to do it, or persists in the act, failure, or omission regardless of consequences.—FORDER v. GREAT WESTERN RY. 443. Loss due to stray cattle derailing train—Cattle under company's control.]—Pltf. consigned goods by defts.' railway at a reduced rate, below the ordinary rate, upon an undertaking to relieve defts. from all liability in case of damage or delay, except upon proof that such loss, detention, or injury, arose from wilful misconduct on the part of the defts.' servants. The goods were placed in a truck to be attached to a train passing the station late at night. That train brought some cattle to the station, & defts.' servants, in order to prevent the cattle from being kept in their trucks till the next day, drove them into a yard, from which they strayed upon the railway, & upset the train, thereby injuring pltf.'s goods:—Held: (1) the contract of carriage was reasonable; & (2) the facts proved did not constitute evidence for a jury of defts.' liability.—GLENISTER v. GREAT WESTERN RY. The van was to be delivered at a station outside defts.' system & on the line of another co. A delay having been occasioned by the van's having been loaded on a truck which was too high to allow of its passing under the other co.'s gauge, although it passed under that of defts.:—Held: there was not sufficient evidence of wilful misconduct on the part of defts.' servants to go to a jury, inasmuch as it was not proved that they knew that the truck was too high to carry the van under the other co.'s gauge.—WEBB v. GREAT WESTERN RY. The goods were misdelivered to another firm, & on being found were tendered to the consignees, who refused to accept them:—Held: in the absence of evidence on the part of pltfs. as to the cause of the misdelivery, such misdelivery did not amount to wilful misconduct so as to render defts. liable.—STEVENS v. GREAT WESTERN RY. 449. Delay in delivery—Refusal to pay charges already paid.]—Defts. charge two rates for the conveyance of goods—one where they take the ordinary liability of the carrier, & the other a reduced rate known as the "owners' risk rate," in which they make it a condition of carriage that they shall not be liable in respect of loss or detention of or injury to the goods in the receiving, forwarding, or delivery thereof, except upon proof that such loss or damage arose from wilful misconduct on the part of the co.'s servants. Pltf. delivered to defts. at W. some cattle to be carried to G. & there delivered to his agents. The cattle were consigned & the carriage prepaid at "owners' risk rate." On their arrival at G. they were unloaded & placed in cattle-pens by the defts.' servants, but in consequence of the clerk at W. having negligently omitted to enter the cattle on the consignment note as "carriage paid," defts. refused to deliver the cattle to pltf. until two days afterwards, alleging that the carriage had not been paid. In an action brought by pltf. to recover damages for the wrongful detention of the cattle:—Held: (1) defts. were liable, inasmuch as the condition as to "detention" did not include the case of an intentional refusal to deliver by reason of a supposed claim or lien which turned out to be unfounded.

453. ——.]—Pltf. delivered to defts. fruit to be carried to its destination by passenger train upon the terms of a consignment note which provided that pltf., in consideration of his being charged a reduced rate below defts.' ordinary rate for the carriage of fruit by passenger train, relieved the defts. "from all liability for" (inter alia) "delay . . . except upon proof that such . . . delay . . . arose from wilful misconduct on the part of" defts.' servants. The fruit was sent from the departure station in a passenger train, but in the course of transit it was transferred to a goods train, in which it was carried for the rest of the journey. In consequence of this, the arrival of the fruit at its destination was delayed, & pltf. suffered damage:—Held: the carriage of the fruit by passenger train was of the essence of the contract, & after the fruit had been transferred to the goods train the contract was no longer being performed & the fruit was not being carried at owner's risk, & defts. were not relieved from liability by the conditions in the consignment note.—GUNYON v. SOUTH EASTERN & CHATHAM RY. 454. ——.]—Pltf. delivered a number of packages to defts. for carriage from L. to B. viâ M. on the terms of an owner's risk note, which provided that defts. were not to be liable to pay for "delay during any portion of the transit except upon proof that such delay arose from the wilful misconduct of the co.'s servants." By the contract pltf. was entitled to the exclusive use of a truck for the carriage of his goods to B. The packages as delivered to defts. were not addressed or labelled to B., but had on them old labels bearing the names of various stations in different parts of the country. The packages were put in the truck reserved for pltf. & despatched from L., there being attached to the truck some labels indicating B. as the destination. By the time the truck arrived at M. the labels had become detached,

m. Delay in delivery — Perishable goods — Onus of proof.] —G. delivered to a ry. co. goods, which they knew to be perishable, to be delivered at a town in time for market. They failed to despatch the goods by either of two trains, which would have ensured their arrival in time; the goods on arrival had deteriorated in value. The consignee refused to take delivery, & G. sued the co. for the loss occasioned by their wilful misconduct in delaying the goods:—Held: unreasonable delay, even though entirely unexplained, did not amount to wilful misconduct, & it lay upon pltf. to prove that defts. intentionally delayed the goods.—GRAHAM v. BELFAST & NORTHERN COUNTIES RY. Co., [1901] 2 I. R. 13.—IR.

n. —— —— ——.]—A fish curer had his goods carried by a ry. co. at a reduced rate, he by special contract undertaking to relieve the co. & all other cos. over whose lines his goods might pass from all liability in case of loss, damage, or delay, except upon proof of wilful fault or negligence on the part of the co.'s servants. The co. undertook to deliver the goods within a reasonable time. In consequence of a block on the line, certain barrels of fish sent by him were delayed on their way to market & spoiled. In an action for damages & defts.' official at that station, who had been advised that the truck was on the train, but had forgotten all about it, negligently took the truck off, & not knowing that pltf.'s packages were destined for B., sent them to the places respectively specified on the old labels which they bore, with the result that their delivery was delayed :—Held : as defts.' servant intentionally sent the goods to places which were in fact not upon the contract route, the delay did not occur " during any portion of the transit " within the consignment note, & it made no difference in that respect that his intention in so sending them was the result of an honest mistake, & defts. were not relieved from liability by the terms of the contract.—NEILSON v. LONDON & NORTH WESTERN RY. Co. (1921), 38 T. L. R. 75 ; 66 Sol. Jo. (W. R.) 13, C. A.

455. Negligence—Goods exposed to weather.]—Pltf. delivered to deft. co. certain scenery & theatrical properties for carriage from R. to S. on the terms of an " owner's risk " note, whereby in consideration of the co. carrying the goods at a reduced rate pltf. agreed to relieve the co. from all liability for damage or loss except upon proof that it arose from the wilful misconduct of the co.'s servants. On arrival at S. it was found that the scenery had been damaged by rain & snow. Pltf. contended that the co.'s servants, whose duty it was to cover the scenery with a tarpaulin, had been guilty of wilful misconduct in leaving the scenery uncovered for a considerable time, or in improperly covering it :—Held : as the evidence was consistent with ordinary negligence or forgetfulness on the part of the co.'s servants, it was not sufficient to establish wilful misconduct. —NORRIS v. GREAT CENTRAL RY. Co. (1915), 114 L. T. 183 ; 32 T. L. R. 120, D. C.

456. Servant unable to support package.]—Pltfs. sued defts. for damages for gross negligence in dealing with a consignment of glass, & in the alternative for breach of contract. The goods were carried under an owner's risk note, whereby pltfs. agreed to relieve defts. from all liability for loss or injury, except upon proof that such loss or injury arose from wilful misconduct on the part of the co.'s servants. Defts.' servant was engaged in unloading the crates containing the glass from a lorry outside pltfs.' premises when a tramcar came along. In order to allow it to pass the lorry had to be moved. At that time only one crate was left upon the lorry, & defts.' servant, before moving the lorry, told another man who was assisting him to get on to the lorry & to hold the crate, which was standing on its edge. When the lorry moved, the man was unable to hold the crate & it fell flat on the lorry, damaging some of the glass :—Held : the conduct of defts.' servant was completely inconsistent with wilful misconduct.—SHEPPARD & SON v. MIDLAND RY. (1915), 85 L. J. K. B. 283 ; 114 L. T. 515, D. C.

458. When inferred.]—Pltf. delivered certain horse rakes to a railway co. for carriage, upon the special terms that he was, in consideration of a reduced rate, to relieve the co. from all liability for loss, damage, or delay, except upon proof that such loss, damage, or delay arose from wilful misconduct of the co.'s servants. The rakes were in sound condition when delivered to the co., & were greatly damaged & broken upon arrival ; they had been placed upon a truck shorter than the rakes themselves, without any covering to conceal their structure, & had been conveyed under the sole control of the co., without any attendant on the part of pltf. :—Held : (1) these facts did not amount to evidence from which wilful misconduct of the co.'s servants could be inferred.

(2) Evidence to support such an inference must not only be consistent with wilful misconduct, but reasonably inconsistent with its absence.—HAYNES v. GREAT WESTERN RY. Co. (1879), 41 L. T. 436, D. C.

460. ——.]—Certain traders delivered to a railway co. a parcel containing six pairs of boots of the value of £10 11*s.* 6*d.* & weighing 19 lbs. for carriage by the co. from B. to W., on the terms that the co. should not be liable for loss, damage, misconveyance, misdelivery, delay or detention except upon proof that the loss, damage, etc., arose from the wilful misconduct of the co.'s servants. The parcel was never delivered to the consignee. When nineteen days had passed the traders wrote to the co. to complain & were told that their complaint would have immediate attention. They heard no more for three months. Then in answer to a letter from their solr. asking by whom & when the parcel was or should have been handled & what had become of it, they were told that the matter should receive immediate attention. A fortnight later the solr. wrote threatening proceedings unless he received by return of post some account of what had happened to the parcel, & the co. replied that the reason of the delay in the case was that the whole of the papers had been lost in transit, & that as soon as possible a definite reply would be given. A week later the traders brought an action in the county ct. In answer to interrogatories defts. stated that inquiries had been made but that they had no knowledge as to whether the parcel had been despatched from B. or received by their servants at W. ; that there was no record of its having been so received ; & that they believed that it was lost, that it never arrived at W., & was never delivered or tendered to the consignee :—Held : pltfs. had failed to prove that the loss of the parcel arose from the wilful misconduct of defts.' servants.—SMITH, LTD. v. GREAT WESTERN RY. against the co. :—Held : (1) the special contract had the effect of laying the burden of proof on the consignor ; (2) on the facts, the co. were liable in respect that they had neither taken proper measures to guard against the occurrence of the block, nor warned the consignor that there was a risk of delay. o. Goods sent over other systems—Goods too high for other company's gauge.]—A ry. co. contracted to convey the plant of a switchback railway at a special reduced rate, one of the conditions of the contract being that the proprietor of the goods should relieve the co. of all liability except for damage arising from the " wilful misconduct " of the co.'s servants. One of the co.'s regulations directed that all loads must be gauged when there was any reason to doubt that they are not within the dimensions specified for the lines over which they had to travel. The stationmaster at the station of departure did not gauge the load, but merely judged the height of it with his eye & concluded that it did not exceed the dimensions. Part of the load, in the course of transit, came in contact with the smokeboard of a bridge beneath which the train was passing, & was damaged : Held : the damage was due to " wilful misconduct " of the stationmaster, for which the co. was liable.—BASTABLE v. NORTH BRITISH RY. When the consignment arrived at its destination a few of the carcases were missing, & the owner made a claim against the co. within fourteen days after the despatch of the consignment:—Held: non-delivery of a consignment meant non-delivery of the consignment as a whole, as contrasted with short delivery, & the claim failed.—GREAT WESTERN RY. t. —— Effect of non-payment—Railways Act, 1879, s. 11.]—A box containing rupees was delivered by pltfs. to deft. co. in B. to be carried to S. Pltfs. did not intend to insure the box, which was taken to the booking office at the station; the parcel clerk asked what it contained, & was told that it contained coin, & he learned casually that the amount was R6,000. The clerk charged the "treasure rate" for carriage. This sum was paid, & the box was duly dispatched, but was lost or stolen in the course of transit. Pltfs. sued to recover the R6,000:—Held: deft. co. was not liable because the sum paid by pltfs. for carriage of the box was the ordinary charge for treasure, & not the increased charge which under above sect. should have been paid in order to make the co. liable.—GREAT INDIAN PENINSULA RY. The oil was forwarded in open cars & delayed in different places & in consequence a large quantity was lost. The bill of lading said nothing about covered cars, & stated that the oil was carried at the owner's risk :—Held : the loss did not result from risks imposed on the owners, but from the wrongful act of the carriers in placing the oil on open cars, which was inconsistent with the contract, & in contravention of their duty to provide fit & proper transport.—GRAND TRUNK RY. "received pltf. as such passenger." Plea, that pltf. did not become a passenger, & that deft. did not receive him as such. It appeared that pltf. held up his finger to the driver of the omnibus, who stopped to take him up, & that just as pltf. was putting his foot on the step of the omnibus, the driver drove on, & pltf. fell on his face on the ground:—Held: evidence to go to the jury in support of the declaration, as the stopping of the omnibus implied a consent to take pltf. as a passenger.—BRIEN v. BENNETT (1839), 8 C. & P. 724, N. 469. —— For whole journey—Right of passenger to join at any stage.]—A person paying the whole fare of a stage coach, may take his place at any stage of the journey; aliter if he pays only a deposit.—KER v. MOUNTAIN (1793), 1 Esp. 27, N. P.

470. —— Seats booked in coach—"Together"—Statutory number of passengers exceeded.]—(1) A declaration stated that deft., being owner of a stage-coach, undertook to carry pltf., her children, & servants, together, in & by a certain stage-coach:—Held: evidence that the whole inside of the coach was taken for pltf. & her three daughters, & two outside places for her servants, supported the declaration.

(2) Deft. sent a double-bodied coach, & refused to take them, unless one of them would travel in one body & the other in the other body:—Held: a breach of the agreement.

(3) Stage Coaches Act, 1810 (c. 48), enacting that double-bodied coaches should only carry eight outside passengers:—Held: a breach of the agreement that there were eight other outside passengers permitted to go by the coach, if pltf.'s servants refused to go by it on that account.—LONG v. HORNE (1825), 1 C. & P. 610, N. 471. —— Coach overcrowded—Passenger's right to rescind contract.]—If more than the number of passengers for which the coach is licensed are allowed to go by it, the other passengers are entitled to rescind the contract, & may leave the coach without payment of any part of the fare.—PICKFORD v. LACON (1847), 8 L. T. O. S. 139, 389.

472. —— By advertised train—Lack of accommodation.]—Pltf., intending to go to L. & back by defts.' railway, paid for & received from them the following ticket at B., & went to L. with it: "B. to L. & back. Excursion ticket. To return by the trains advertised for that purpose on any day not beyond fourteen days after date hereof." Morning & evening return excursion trains were advertised on the Saturdays, but they were not advertised to go to B. On a Saturday morning within the fourteen days pltf. presented himself at L. station in time for the morning return train. It became full so that pltf. could not find room in it, & it would have been dangerous to have added other carriages to it. The co. refused to let him go by an ordinary train, but kept him waiting until the evening return train, in which he found a place. That train took him only to D., where it arrived on Sunday morning. No trains ran from D. to B. on Sundays. The line from D. to B. belonged not to defts., but to another co. Pltf. hired a carriage to take him from D. to B., and brought an action to recover the expense from the defts.:—Held: (1) he was entitled to recover; (2) by the terms of the excursion ticket & advertisements defts. contracted to carry pltf. back to B. on any day within the fourteen days, that he might choose, & by any of the advertised trains that he might select; (2) not sending him by the morning train was a breach of contract; (3) taking him only to D. instead of to B. without previous notice

s. As common carriers — Steamship company.]—Defts. advertised that they ran a regular steamer from L. to B. at definite dates & hours:—Held: they were common carriers of passengers by sea, & as such there was an obligation on their part to receive & carry any person as a passenger who was willing to pay the usual fare, provided there was sufficient room on board, & the intending passenger was a proper person to be carried.—PITCAITHLY v. THACKER (1903), 23 N. Z. L. R. 783.—N Z.

t. Contract to carry — Right to travel in particular car.]—Defts. had placed a number of extra cars on a portion of their line to carry persons who had assembled to view a regatta. The cars in question were to run from the suburbs, where the regatta was held, to the centre of the city, & were to discharge their passengers there, those passengers desiring it being given transfers entitling them to carriage on other cars to their destinations in other parts of the city. Pltf., who had been attending the regatta, entered a car expecting to be carried to a point on the line near his residence, but was informed at the central point that the car in which he was went no further, & that he would have to transfer:—Held: (1) outside of the cars performing the regular service, there was no obligation on part of defts. to carry pltf. through to his destination in any particular car; (2) the only contract was to carry passengers in accordance with the usual methods of running defts.' cars.—O'CONNOR v. HALIFAX TRAMWAY CO., LTD. v. —— Right to travel in particular seat.]—Pltf. entering the train at a station took a seat which appeared to be vacant but which he was told was occupied by some one who was temporarily elsewhere. On the return of the passenger in question pltf. refused to make way & the conductor being summoned took pltf. by the lapels of the coat & placed him in the passage way, pointing out to him other seats:—Held: pltf. had no right to any particular seat & the conductor was entitled to determine what seat he might occupy.—BRAZEAU v. CANADIAN PACIFIC RY. CO. (1908), 11 O. W. R. 136.—CAN.

w. —— ——.]—A ry. co. gave orders that holders of third class composition season tickets should be restricted to particular compartments. One of these ticket holders, after having taken his seat unnoticed in the compartment in which he had usually travelled previously, was ordered by an official of the co. to move. He complied under protest, but, being unwilling to occupy the compartment assigned to him, did not travel by the train, & brought an action of damages for breach of contract against the ry. co.:—Held: (1) a ry. co. had a right to assign the compartments & seats which passengers should occupy; (2) defenders were not barred from exercising this right, as they had not acquiesced in pursuer choosing a seat for himself.—SCOTT v. GREAT NORTH was a second breach, & consequently the action was maintainable.

(4) Semble: a railway co. are not excused from carrying passengers according to their contract, upon the ground that there is no room for them in the train; but, in order to avail themselves of this answer, they should make their contract conditional upon there being room.—GREAT NORTHERN RY. 474. Refusal to carry—After tender of fare—Postmaster.]—Though a postmaster cannot be compelled to hire a chaise, if he does hire it, & the passenger takes his seat in it, the postmaster must proceed if his fare is tendered.—MASSITER v. COOPER (1803), 4 Esp. 260, N. P.

475. —— No other passengers—Contract made on Sunday.]—Pltf. booked a place & paid half the fare to go by a common stage coach from C. to L. on a Sunday; the coach proprietor refused to carry him because there were no other passengers, whereupon pltf. hired a post-chaise to go to his destination:—Held: the coach proprietor was liable for the chaise hire, notwithstanding the contract was made on a Sunday.—SANDIMAN v. BREACH (1827), 7 B. & C. 96; 9 Dow. & Ry. (2) An allegation in a declaration that an omnibus plies between D. & C. will not be supported by evidence which shows that the omnibus, although running from D. to C., yet starts from a point beyond D. & runs to a point beyond C.—MARSHALL v. MATSON (1867), 15 L. T. 514.

SECT. 2.—DUTY TO TAKE CARE.

SUB-SECT. 1.—IN GENERAL.

479. Due care—Whether carrier insurer.]—If the declaration, in an action on the case against coach-proprietors, for an injury received by the over-turning of a coach, states that it was their duty to carry pltf. safely, for a certain hire, it does not mean to carry safely at all events, but will be sufficiently supported by proof of the want of due care.—HARRIS v. COSTAR (1825), 1 C. & P. 636, N. PART V. SECT. 2, SUB-SECT. 1.

a. General rule.]—Where a ry. co. is charged with a statutory duty to take precautions for the safety of persons lawfully travelling in its carriages, crossing its line, or frequenting its premises, the co. is responsible in damages to any member of any one of these classes who is injured by the neglect of the co. or its servants to discharge such statutory duty. On the other hand, even where there is a breach by the co. of its statutory duty, if the injury is the result of pltf.'s own folly & recklessness & not of the co.'s breach of its statutory duty, then pltf. cannot recover.—GRAND TRUNK RY. 481. ——.]—The male pltf. hired from deft., a livery stable keeper, a landau with a horse & driver for the purpose of taking a drive. His wife accompanied him in the carriage. The horse showed considerable signs of restiveness when meeting motor cars, & when passing a traction engine shied & became unmanageable, & the carriage was upset, & both husband & wife were injured. In an action by the husband & wife to recover damages for the injuries the jury found that deft. ought to have known, if he had used proper care, that the horse was unsafe to be sent out with the carriage, but that the driver was not negligent. Deft. upon these findings, while admitting liability to the husband, contended that he was not liable to the wife:—Held: deft. was liable to the wife upon the ground that, as he kept control of the carriage & accepted her as a passenger therein, he was under a duty to use reasonable care to carry her safely & for that purpose to provide a proper horse.—WHITE v. STEADMAN, [1913] 3 K. The cause of the accident was the removal, since the coach had passed, of one of two cottages that had previously stood on an angle of the road, by which means the driver was deceived as to the course of the road, it being night, though moonlight:—Held: it should have been left to the jury to say whether or not the driver had been guilty of negligence.—CROFTS v. WATERHOUSE (1825), 3 Bing. 319; 11 Moore, C. 487. —— —— Starting signal given by passenger on tram.]—The mere fact that a tramway car has been started from an optional stopping place through the bell being pulled by a passenger in the absence of the conductor does not render the tramway owners responsible for injury thereby occasioned, unless it is shown that in the circumstances the non-control of the bell by the conductor amounted to negligence.—WAGNER v. WEST HAM CORPN. 488. —— Caused by act of stranger.]—Assuming it is primâ facie evidence of negligence in a railway co. that a train has got off the line, such evidence is entirely rebutted by proof that the accident arose from the wilful & wrongful act of a stranger.—LATCH v. RUMNER RY. Co. (1858), 27 L. J. Ex. 155.

489. —— ——.]—(1) Where works are going on over a line of railway, with which works the railway co. has nothing to do, & the execution of such works is entrusted to contractors who are entirely independent of the railway co., it is not the duty of the railway directors to assume that such works will be negligently conducted by those who have contracted for their execution, & to take precautions against possible negligence on the part of persons who are not in their employment nor under their control.

The City of London Corpn. was authorised by an Act of Parliament to execute certain works over the line of the Metropolitan Ry. Co. These works consisted partly in placing heavy iron girders upon the walls running along the line of railway, & were therefore works in the execution of which danger was involved, but which were often executed elsewhere without mischief. The railway co. had no control over these works, which were executed by contractors engaged by the corpn. Several girders had been safely put in their places by manual labour, but, on this occasion, the contractors brought into use for one of the girders a monkey steam-engine which moved the girder with a jerk, & so caused it to overbalance & fall. It fell on a passing train, & injured pltf. :—Held : this was not a mischief the occurrence of which the railway co. was bound to anticipate, & against which it was bound to take precautions, & the railway co. was not liable in damages.

(2) If the operation which the contractors were performing was one which, according to previous knowledge & experience, was, however carefully performed, likely to lead to mischief, it would be incumbent on the railway co. to foresee & take precautions against it (LORD COLONSAY).

(3) If railway directors undertake to carry passengers over their own line, & also over another line, they would be bound to see that their own was in perfect order, & would be responsible for any negligence occurring on the other line, over which they had contracted to carry passengers, whether under their control or not, but would not be responsible for matters altogether extraneous to the work in which they were engaged, unless there was reasonable ground for apprehending that extraordinary precautions were required (LORD HATHERLEY, C.).—DANIEL v. METROPOLITAN RY. 492. —— Electric tramway.]—(1) Pltf. was a passenger on the outside of an uncovered tramway car belonging to defts. which was propelled by means of overhead electric traction. The wheel at the head of the trolly arm was detached from the electric wire & the trolly arm was plucked away from the standard at its socket & fell upon pltf.'s head. Such an occurrence was extremely rare, & no contrivance had been discovered to prevent it. The system of electric traction adopted by defts. was the best & most widely used ; the apparatus on that particular car on which the accident occurred was in perfect order ; & there was no negligence on the part of defts.' servants. An action was brought by pltf. against defts. claiming damages in respect of the injuries sustained by him. The jury having been directed that pltf. could only be entitled to recover damages if there was negligence on the part of defts. in carrying him as a passenger ; that the defts. were not insurers ; & that they were bound to take every reasonable precaution that could be taken to secure the safety of their passengers, but not as insurers, found for pltf., but stated that no one of the alleged acts of negligence of defts. was established to their satisfaction :—Held : the verdict of the jury showed that defts. discharged the burden which rested upon them ; & the only negligence alleged was disproved notwithstanding pltf.'s primâ facie case.

(2) As to the standard of care required in the case of a carrier of passengers, it is sufficient that the carrier should adopt the best known apparatus, kept in perfect order, & worked without negligence by the servants he employed. If, however, there is a want of such reasonable care, then there is a breach of the contract of carriage, & if any person, whatever his condition of health, suffers through such breach of contract, he is entitled to recover the damages he has suffered by the breach, though a person in ordinary health might have suffered little or nothing.—LINKLATER v. THE MINISTER FOR RAILWAYS (1900), 18 N. The driver of the omnibus, in turning out of one street into another, drove the omnibus close to the kerb to avoid an electric tramcar which was passing in the same direction, & while passing an electric light standard, which was on the pavement, the jolt of the omnibus grating round the kerb caused pltf.'s arm to come in contact with a fire alarm finger-post fixed to & standing out from the electric standard. Pltf.'s arm was at the time projecting from the omnibus, but the fire alarm finger-post did not project over but came flush with the kerb. There was no evidence that the driver either saw or knew of the fire alarm finger-post:—Held: as it was not shown that there was an obstruction of such a nature that with reasonable care the driver ought to have seen it & ought to have realised the fact that it would or might hit a passenger on the omnibus, there was no evidence of negligence.—SIMON v. LONDON GENERAL OMNIBUS CO., LTD. A street lamp stood at the corner with a small iron arm projecting from it, but not sufficiently far to extend over the roadway. While the omnibus was being driven round the corner the iron arm struck pltf. on the chest & injured him. There was no traffic which prevented the omnibus from being driven further away from the kerb:—Held: there was evidence to support a finding that the driver did not see the projecting arm, & that he was not guilty of negligence in not having seen it & in having driven close to the kerb.—HASE v. LONDON GENERAL OMNIBUS CO., LTD. 522. —— —— —— ——.]—It is the duty of a railway co. to see that trucks coming on their line to be forwarded are in such a state as to travel safely; but a minute examination of such trucks would defeat the purposes of through traffic, &, therefore, cannot be required. Nor does it become the duty of the co. to make a minute examination of the whole of a truck merely because a defect has been discovered in it.

A co. discovered two defects in a truck, & caused the only one which was of any importance to be remedied by the owners, & examined the truck in the usual way after the owners had sent it back. An accident was caused by another defect, in no way connected with or to be expected from either of the two discovered defects, & which could only have been found out by a minute examination:—Held: (1) the co. were not liable for negligence to a passenger injured by the accident.

At the trial the jury found that the co., on receiving the truck from the owners after it had been repaired, should have required from them some distinct assurance that it had been thoroughly examined and repaired:—Held: (2) no such duty was incumbent on the co.—RICHARDSON v. GREAT EASTERN RY. 523. —— —— ——.]—From an imperfect weld in the formation of a driving-wheel used to one of the carriages on defts.' line of railway, the wheel gave way & caused serious injury to pltf., a passenger. When that wheel was new, & before using it, it had been properly & regularly tested by hammering it all round & all over, & although this was a test not absolutely fixed & certain to discover defect, yet it was the best known & usual course pursued; no defect was then discoverable. The wheel was afterwards much used, & by it reduced in thickness & considerably worn; after this, & after the tire had been returned, it was not again tested or hammered all round; if it had been after it had been so worn, according to the evidence the defect which in fact existed in the wheel would in all probability have been discovered. The jury by their verdict found that the co. should have again tested the wheel after it had been so worn & re-turned, & were, in the circumstances, guilty of negligence & liable for not doing so:—Held: (1) the question of the co.'s liability was properly left to the jury upon the evidence given; (2) there was evidence to go to the jury in favour of pltf.'s case, & a rule for a new trial was refused.—MANSER v. EASTERN COUNTIES RY. The flange broke because of an inherent defect in the shape of an air hole at the time of the manufacture of the wheel. Defts. did not show what tests had been applied by the manufacturers of the wheel, or what could be done to detect the flaw; neither did they show that they themselves made any proper examination of the wheel before using it:—Held: defts. had failed adequately to discharge their duty of examining thoroughly & skilfully the equipment furnished them & were liable.—GAISER v. NIAGARA ST. 526. —— Duty to provide communication cord—Regulation of Railways Act, 1868 (c. 119).]—Held: (1) Regulation of Railways Act, 1868, s. 22, applies to every passenger train which is intended to travel more than twenty miles without stopping.

In an action for personal injuries, brought against a railway co. by a passenger in a train which was within the Act, it appeared that there were no such means of communication as were prescribed by the Act; that the adoption of such means of communication had been recommended by the Board of Trade, & that they were in fact adopted & used by other railway cos., & also by defts. themselves in other trains. Some evidence was also given that if such means of communication had existed, the accident might have been prevented:—Held: (2) in determining whether, in the case of a passenger train intended to run more than twenty miles without stopping, the co. was guilty of negligence in not providing means of communication between the passengers & the co.'s servants, the provision contained in s. 22 was to be taken into account.

On Nov. 30, 1917, the train was crowded, as was often the case, & the boy was told to get into the guard's van, where there were already some thirty men & boys standing. There was, however, room for a few more. It was the practice for men to travel in the guard's van when the train was full. 534. —— ——.]—The fact of the door of a railway carriage being imperfectly fastened, is evidence of negligence on the part of the co., even when the train was not in a state of motion at the time when the accident happened.

Pltf.'s wife, on arriving at a station at which it was her intention to alight, left her seat for the purpose of taking up her child, which was sitting on the seat opposite to her. In turning round to sit down again & wait till the porter should open the door, she "touched" the door which flew open, & she fell out & injured herself:—Held: evidence of negligence on the part of the railway co., proper for the consideration of the jury.—RICHARDS v. GREAT EASTERN RY. 535. —— ——.]—Pltf. had got into one of defts.' trains at A., where he was put into a second class carriage which was hastily attached to the back of a cattle train. On the arrival of the train at the next station the carriage door was found open & pltf. was picked up on the line between the two stations, dreadfully injured. He was taken to a hospital where, on account of the injuries he had received, morphia was given to him, & he was for two or three days insensible. Pltf. had told two of defts.' servants who sat up with him on the same night as the accident, that he had gone to sleep in the train, & that he woke up suddenly, & finding the train oscillating very much, & thinking the train was running back again, he opened the door & jumped out. The medical man who attended him heard the words, but thought that he could not have been in a state to have understood what he said. At the trial pltf. stated that he could not recollect what he said, & his account of the accident was that, finding the train oscillating very greatly, he looked out of the window & his hat was blown off, & then leaning out a little the door flew open & he fell out. The porter who put pltf. in the carriage said the door was in good condition as far as he knew, & several of defts.' servants said the lock was in good order & that it could be & was locked & fastened when found open at the next station. Pltf. having brought an action for negligence against defts., the jury found for pltf. for £300:—Held: the case was entirely one for a jury to decide, & the verdict could not be disturbed.—HAMER v. CAMBRIAN RY. There was room in the carriage for pltf. to sit away from the door, & the train would have stopped at a station in three minutes. Pltf. shut the door three times. The door opened a fourth time, & in endeavouring to shut it again pltf. fell out & was hurt. The train stopped at three stations between the time when the door first opened & the occurrence of the whether, at the time of the accident, he was holding on to the iron rail on the platform or not:—Held: the fact of pltf. not proving affirmatively that he was so holding on was not a ground for nonsuit.—CORNISH v. TORONTO STREET RY. (2) J. was a passenger by a railway; the carriage in which he rode was full. At G. three persons forced themselves in, & were obliged to stand. There was no evidence that a complaint on this matter had been made to the railway officials, or that they knew of the fact. At P. some other persons opened the door of the carriage, shut it again, & went away. There was, afterwards, a rush on the platform, & other persons opened the door of the carriage. J. stood up to prevent their entering, the train moved, & J., to save himself from falling, put his hand upon the edge of the door of the carriage; at that moment a railway porter came up, pushed away the persons trying to get in, & slammed the door to, in doing which J.'s thumb was caught & crushed:—Held: this evidence did not establish such negligence on the part of the co. as could be said to have occasioned the mischief.—METROPOLITAN RY. 554 i. Duty to stop—To allow passenger to alight.]—A ry. co. which has undertaken to carry a passenger to a station on its line must stop its train at that station long enough to give the passenger a reasonable opportunity of getting off. If the train stops, & the passenger, after making reasonable efforts is unable to get off before it starts again, jumps off & is injured, the co. is liable in damages; provided, however, that, when the passenger jumps off, the train is not moving at such rate of speed as to make the danger of jumping obvious to a person of reasonable intelligence.—KEITH v. OTTAWA & NEW YORK RY. 557. Train stopping short of platform—Invitation to alight—Passenger told to alight.]—On the arrival of a train at the railway terminus, there not being room for all the carriages to be drawn up to the platform, some of the passengers were required to alight upon the line beyond it, the depth from the carriage to the ground being about three feet. In so alighting, a lady, instead of availing herself of the two steps, with the assistance of a gentleman jumped from the first step to the ground, & sustained a spinal injury from the concussion :—Held : (1) there was evidence to warrant a finding that the co. were guilty of negligence in not providing reasonable means of alighting, & that the lady had not by any misconduct on her part contributed to the injury; (2) the jury having awarded her £500, the ct. declined to interfere with the amount of damages.—FOY v. LONDON, BRIGHTON & SOUTH COAST RY. 559. —— —— ——.]—Pltf., who had for many years been a frequent traveller on defts.' line of railway, on arriving, on a winter evening, at the station at which he was to alight, heard the name of the station called out two or three times, by one of the railway porters. The part of the train, in which pltf. was, was drawn up at a place about 35 ft. from the end of the platform. There were no lights there, & pltf. in stepping out fell upon his head & was injured :—Held : there was evidence of negligence on the part of defts. to go to the jury.—GILL v. GREAT EASTERN RY. CO. (1872), 26 L. T. 945, Ex. Ch.

560. —— —— ——.]—B. was in the last carriage of a railway train. Before reaching the station at which he was to alight the train had to pass through a tunnel. In that tunnel there was, first, a heap of hard rubbish lying by the side of the rails, irregular in form & height, then a short sloping piece of ground, then a piece of flat platform, like the main platform, but narrower & within the tunnel. Beyond these was the main platform itself. The train only partially went up to the main platform, leaving the last two carriages within the tunnel, which had no light within it, & on the occasion in question was filled with steam. The last carriage but one came opposite the narrow platform, the last carriage was opposite the hard rubbish. A passenger in the last carriage but one, who was called as a witness at the trial, heard the name of the station called out in the usual way & got out upon the narrow platform. He then heard a groaning, & proceeding farther back into the tunnel found B. lying on the rubbish with his legs between the wheels of the last carriage, but neither of them had touched him. B.'s leg was broken, & he had received other injuries, from the effects of all of which he died. The witness heard the warning, " Keep your seats," & shortly afterwards the train moved on :—Held : (1) the evidence furnished matter on which it was necessary to take the opinion of a jury.

557 ii. —— —— From moving train.]—Pltf. travelled by defts.' line to E. When the train stopped at E. the baggage car was at the station platform. The rear passenger car, in which pltf. travelled, was some distance from the end of the platform. Defts.' conductor in charge of the train, who was standing on the ground, put up his hand to assist pltf. to get off ; she took his hand & jumped down from the lowest step of the car to the ground ; the distance was too great for her to step down. The train began to move either as she jumped or just before. Immediately after jumping down, pltf., who was pregnant, felt great pain & had a miscarriage :—Held : defts. were bound to bring their passenger cars up to the platform to permit a passenger to step down on it in alighting. The conductor's act was an invitation to pltf. to get off when she did.—GUAY v. CANADIAN NORTHERN RY. CO. (1904), 24 C. L. T. 277 ; 15 Man. L. R. 275.—CAN.

The ry. co. were in the habit of leaving the station unlit, & at the point where the train stopped there was a parapet wall in a line with & abutting the coping of the platform, the top of which in the darkness resembled the platform : on discovering his mistake he was about to re-enter the train when it started again without warning, with the result that he was precipitated over the parapet, & sustained injuries :—Held : these averments were irrelevant, nothing being alleged which could be reasonably construed as an invitation to alight.—MCAULAY v. GLASGOW & SOUTH WESTERN RY. She averred further that the stationmaster was on the platform & saw the passengers alighting but gave no instructions :—Held : the action was irrelevant.—ABBOT v. NORTH BRITISH RY. CO. Train overshooting platform.] — Upon a train on defts.' line of railway arriving at a station, the two or three foremost carriages, in one of which pltf. was a passenger, overshot the platform of the station, & where the carriages stopped the line of railway was on an embankment some height above a roadway. The night was rather dark & there was no light in the carriage, & no stationary light on the platform, nor was there any fence on the top of the embankment between it & the roadway beneath. Upon the train stopping, pltf., knowing that the carriage had overshot the platform & without waiting to see whether it would be backed to the platform, got out of the carriage in the dark, & in doing so missed his footing & fell forward over the embankment into the roadway beneath:—Held: on the facts stated the co. were not guilty of negligence, & were not liable.

There is no duty in a railway co. to fence their line of railway as towards passengers or persons already on the line. The duty in them to fence is towards persons off the line, to prevent the latter from getting or straying upon it (BRAMWELL, B.).—HARROLD v. GREAT WESTERN RY. CO. (1866), 14 L. T. 440.

562. ——.]—An excursion train, in which the pltfs., husband & wife, were passengers to R., arrived at R. station, &, the train being a long one, the carriage in which they were overshot the platform. It was then daylight. The passengers were not warned to keep their seats, nor was any offer made to back the train to the platform, nor was it, in fact, ever so backed, nor did it move until it started for B. After waiting a short time, the husband, following the example of other passengers, alighted, without any request to the co.'s servants to back the train, or any communication with them. The wife, standing on the iron step of the carriage, took both his hands & jumped down, & in so doing strained her knee. There was a footboard between the iron step & the ground, which she did not use, but there was no evidence of any carelessness or awkwardness in the manner of descent, except such as might be inferred from the above facts:—Held: there was no evidence for the jury of negligence in defts.; the accident was entirely the result of pltfs.' own acts.—SINER v. GREAT WESTERN RY. 571. —— ——.]—Pltf., a lady, was a passenger y one of defts.' trains to S. The train arrived at station, which is a terminus, & stopped in such position that pltf.'s carriage had gone beyond e level part of the platform. Pltf. did not notice is, & she got out supposing that she would alight n the platform in the ordinary way, but the result as that she was thrown down & injured. She dmitted in cross-examination that she did not look where she was stepping to. The jury found (1) defts. were guilty of negligence; (2) pltf. could have avoided the accident by looking before she stepped down: (3) it was not negligent for pltf. to step down without looking:—Held: there was evidence on which the jury might come to the conclusion at which they arrived.—LONDON, TILBURY, & SOUTHEND RY. (a terminus), & was stopped fifteen or twenty feet short of the fixed buffers placed at the extreme limit to which it might have gone. The platform of the station, at the end which would be first reached by an arriving train, instead of having its edge parallel with the line of rails used by the arriving trains, was bevelled off into a curve so as to allow space for a siding which there joined that line of rails. Pltf. sat in the last compartment of the last carriage, which was drawn up opposite the curved part of the platform, so that a space of eighteen inches or two feet was left between the carriage & the platform. A guard opened the door but said nothing. It was a dark evening, & the station was dimly lighted. Pltf. stepped out, expecting to alight on the platform, & fell between the carriage & the platform, thereby sustaining injuries, in respect of which he brought his action against the co.:—Held: there was evidence to go to the jury of negligence on the part of defts., inasmuch as there was a clear invitation to pltf. to alight, & no warning given, although in consequence of the insufficiency of light the danger was not apparent.—PRAEGER v. BRISTOL & EXETER RY. 573. —— —— ——.]—(1) An invitation by a railway co. to a passenger to alight on the stopping of a train at a place of danger, the danger not being visible & apparent, without any warning, amounts to negligence.

Pltf. opened the door of a railway carriage in which she was travelling for herself, & stepping out in the dark upon what she thought was the platform fell in a space intervening between the carriage & the platform where the platform receded from the rails, & was injured. The rest of the train had been properly drawn up to the lighted part of the platform, & the train had stopped once for all to put down passengers there; but the name of the station had not been called out. Pltf. was not warned of the danger of alighting where she did:—Held: there was evidence for the jury of negligence on the part of the railway co.

577. Train suddenly accelerating speed—Invitation to alight—Name of station called out—Doors opened.]—Pltf. was a passenger by applts.' railway from M. to H. Upon arrival at H., several porters who were servants of the co., ran up to the train before it stopped & unlocked & threw open the doors of the carriages & called out, "All out for H." Pltf., supposing that the train had come to a stand, began to get out, & had placed her left foot on the first step for that purpose, when the brake which had been applied to stop the train was suddenly taken off, which caused an increase of speed, whereby she fell on the platform of the station & broke her leg:—Held: these facts constituted actionable negligence on the part of applts.—LONDON & NORTH WESTERN RY. Upon the car from which pltf. alighted, the step was 21 inches above the platform at which the car purported to stop & 33 inches above the ground at the place where the car over-shot the platform where pltf. alighted:—Held: (1) it was the duty of defts. to see that the proper facilities for passengers to alight were provided—not a platform, but a step upon the car of the prescribed distance above the ground & they did not provide such steps; (2) defts. were liable.—DOWSON v. TORONTO & YORK RADIAL RY. f. Defective lighting.]—A passenger sustained injuries by leaving a railway carriage while the train was entering a station at night. In an action of damages against the ry. co. he averred that defenders had not provided a sufficient number of lamps upon the platform, whereby he was unable to distinguish fixed objects & believed that the train had stopped:—Held: the action was relevant.—ROE v. GLASGOW & SOUTH WESTERN RY. 588. —— —— ——.]—Pltf. being in the waiting room at a railway station at night, & being told by a porter that her train had just drawn up at the station, left the room with a great number of other passengers, &, as she went in the direction of the train which had drawn up past the door, she caught her foot against the edge of a weighing machine, the base of which was raised a few inches above the level of the platform, fell, & injured herself. The weighing machine was of the ordinary description for weighing luggage, & stood with its back to the ticket-office window, through which a light was thrown on the top of it. The machine was placed between two lamps, ten yards apart, which were suspended from the roof of the platform:—Held: there was no evidence of negligence to go to the jury.—BLACKMAN v. LONDON, BRIGHTON & SOUTH COAST RY. 589. —— —— Signal levers box.]—Pltf. was a passenger by an excursion train on defts.' line, & had to pass over a platform with a crowd of other passengers. In doing so she stumbled against a box containing signal levers, which projected about two inches above the level of the platform, & received injuries:—Held: there was evidence of negligence, upon which a jury might reasonably act.—STURGES v. GREAT WESTERN RY. 590. —— Use in unreasonable manner.]—A., a passenger, was running arm-in-arm with another man along a platform belonging to a railway co., & used as a footpath from the station to a steamboat pier. The platform was 4 ft. 3 in. broad, with a fence at the back, & a curb 9 in. high between it & the rails. A. fell on the rails & was run over by a train:—Held: there was no evidence of negligence on the part of the railway co. to go to the jury, inasmuch as the platform was reasonably safe for persons using it in a reasonable manner; the mere opinion of witnesses that it was dangerous, unsupported by any reasons, should not be left to the jury.—RIGG v. MANCHESTER, SHEFFIELD & LINCOLNSHIRE RY. 592. —— Defective lighting — Fog.] — Pltf. sued deft. co. to recover damages for personal injuries sustained by her at one of their railway stations. She intended travelling from that station. The night was very foggy, & the lamps on the platform did not show through the fog. While walking along the platform pltf. fell on the rails and was injured. Several other people had fallen off the platform earlier on the same evening. The jury found that the accident was due to the negligence of the defts.:—Held: pltf. was entitled to recover as the circumstances imposed upon defts. a duty to take all reasonable precautions to protect pltf. effectively from the dangers besetting all movement on the platform on the night in question, & there was evidence which entitled the jury to find defts. had failed to discharge the duty that rested upon them.—LONDON, TILBURY & SOUTHEND RY. The presence of the ice was unexplained:—Held: there was evidence for the jury of negligence on the part of defts.—SHEPHERD v. MIDLAND RY. CO. (1872), 25 L. T. 879; 20 W. R. 705.

594 i. Platform overcrowded—Passenger forced on to rails.]—A ry. co. is not bound to provide at a station, even when an unusually large number of passengers by a special & cheap train is expected, a staff of servants sufficient not merely for the guidance & assistance of passengers & the preservation of order amongst them, but adequate to control the violence of persons entering the station without permission & overcrowding the platform. In such case the co. is not liable if a passenger standing on the platform is pushed on to the line.—CANNON v. MIDLAND GREAT WESTERN RY. CO. (1879), 6 L. R. Ir. 199.—IR.

594 ii. —— ——.]—Pltf., endeavouring to pass from the platform of the railway station after leaving the train, was met by a crowd of ticket holders rushing to take their seats, & was unable to make progress, there being only one door; as a result of the conduct of the porter in attempting to push the crowd back from the edge of the platform, pltf. was knocked down between the carriages & injured:—Held: the ry. co. were not liable.—PLUNKETT v. DUBLIN, WICKLOW & WEXFORD RY. CO. (1894), 29 I. L. T. Jo. 153.—IR.

594 iii. —— ——.]—In an action for damages for personal injury against a ry. co. pursuer averred that defenders had, knowingly, & without taking any steps to prevent it, permitted a greater crowd of intending passengers, of whom pursuer was one, to congregate in a station than its platforms could accommodate, & had failed to provide a sufficient staff of servants to cope with the crowd, & that, by the pressure of the crowd, pursuer had been carried along & hurled from the platform on to the railroad & injured:—Held: pursuer had stated a relevant case.—FRASER v. CALEDONIAN RY. CO. (1902), 5 F. (Ct. of Sess.) 41.—SCOT.

594 iv. —— ——.]—Pltf. was standing at a station, waiting for additional carriages to be added to a train which was to leave a quarter of an hour later. Before the carriages were in position a crowd of passengers collected behind pltf., & as it pressed forward on the arrival of the carriages pltf. was pushed off the platform & injured. In an action for damages:—Held: the injuries were not due to negligence on the part of the ry. co. & defenders were entitled to judgment.—M'CALLUM v. NORTH BRITISH RY. CO., [1908] S. platform. As the train approached the crowd pressed towards the spot, & carried pltf. along with them, & thrust her off the platform on to the line, whereby she was injured. The passengers had been allowed to pass through the station gates without any precautions, & a greater number of excursionists had thereby collected than was consistent with the size of the platform. The consequence was a rush to secure seats when the train drew up:—Held: in the circumstances the case should have been left to the jury, as it was for them to say whether there was or was not negligence on the part of defts. in not taking precautions to prevent accidents.—HOGAN v. SOUTH EASTERN RY. 595. Stairs—Proof that stairs dangerous—& cause of accident.]—In an action against a railway co. for an injury sustained through falling down some stairs at their station:—Held: it was not enough to show that the stairs were of improper condition or construction unless the fall was caused thereby.—DAVIS v. LONDON & BRIGHTON RY. CO. (1861), 2 F. & F. 588, N. P.

596. —— ——.]—The staircase leading from a railway station to a highway, had at the edge of each step a strip of brass which originally had been roughened, but had from constant use become worn & slippery. The staircase, which was otherwise unobjectionable, was about six feet wide, & had a wall on each side, but no handrail. Pltf. a passenger by the railway, & a frequent traveller by the line, in ascending from the station slipped & fell upon the stairs, & was much hurt. In an action charging the co. with negligence in not providing a reasonable safe & convenient staircase, two witnesses for pltf. stated that in their opinion the staircase was unsafe, one of them, a builder, suggesting that brass nosings on the steps was improper, & that lead would have been better, because less slippery, & that there should have been a handrail:—Held: no evidence of negligence to go to the jury.—CRAFTER v. METROPOLITAN RY. CO. (1866), L. R. 1 C. P. 300; Har. & Ruth. 164; 35 L. J. C. P. 132; 14 W. R. 334; 12 Jur. N. S. 272.

597. —— Whether risk voluntarily incurred—Alternative stairway.]—Pltf., a season-ticket holder & intending passenger, was injured by falling on steps leading to the defts.' railway station, which defts. had allowed to be slippery & dangerous. There was no contributory negligence on the part of pltf., but there were other steps which he might have used, & he admitted that he knew that the steps were dangerous, & went down carefully holding the handrail:—Held: defts. had not shown that pltf. with a full knowledge of the nature & extent of the danger had voluntarily agreed to incur it, so as to make the maxim "Volenti non fit injuria" applicable, & therefore he was entitled to recover.—OSBORNE v. LONDON & NORTH WESTERN RY. 598. —— —— Invitee.]—Near a station on defts.' line of railway & passing over the line there was a level crossing, with gates for carriage traffic, which formed part of the highway, but which defts. were bound by statute to maintain. Defts. had voluntarily constructed close to the station & to the level crossing & parallel to the latter a footbridge, with staircases. The bridge stood entirely on defts.' land, & had been maintained by them, but the footway over it at each end communicated directly with the highway, & only indirectly by means of the highway with defts.' station premises. Defts. had never closed the footway or taken any steps to prevent the public from using it, & the public in fact used it without hindrance. Pltf. was crossing over the bridge with a view to catching a train at the further platform of defts.' station. On the morning of that day there had been a blizzard, & snow had fallen on the footway of the bridge, which in consequence of the traffic had become caked on the steps, rendering them slippery. As pltf. was descending the stair on the further side she warned her young daughter who accompanied her to be careful, & she herself made use of the handrail. She nevertheless slipped on a mass of frozen snow & fell, & was hurt. Pltf. brought an action against defts. for damages for personal injuries. It was found that there had been no contributory negligence on her part:—Held: if defts. owed any duty to persons using the footway [which was, in fact, held to have been dedicated to the public], it could not be higher than that of an inviter towards an invitee, which arises only in respect of dangers of which the invitee has no knowledge or notice; the facts showed that pltf. had knowledge of the danger; &, even on that view, defts. were not liable to pltf.—BRACKLEY v. MIDLAND RY. action against a railway co., for compensation for injury received by pltf. by the breaking down of a bridge, over which he was passing in a passenger train:—Held: it was a proper question for the jury, whether defts. had engaged the services of competent engineers, who had adopted the best method & had used the best materials; if defts. had done so, they would not be liable; the mere fact of their having engaged the services of such a person would not relieve them from the consequence of an accident arising from a deficiency in the work.—GROTE v. CHESTER & HOLYHEAD RY. 601. Embankment — Giving way — Flood — Knowledge of state of line.]—In an action against a railway co. complaining that pltf. became a passenger by their line, & that they so carelessly conducted themselves "in the premises," that by their carelessness & improper conduct in that behalf, the carriage wherein pltf. was carried was thrown off the rails & broken, whereby pltf. was injured. By reason of an extraordinary flood, an embankment over which the line passed had been overrun with water, which had worn away the soil & left the sleepers unsupported, so that the rails gave way; there was conflicting evidence as to whether the drivers of the train, an express, could have seen that the water was over the line; they had driven the train at the ordinary express rate:—Held: the defts. would not be liable if the accident arose necessarily & entirely by reason of the suddenness & extraordinary violence of the flood; it was for the jury to consider whether there had not been negligence in not keeping a good look out, or in driving at such a speed in such circumstances.—WYBORN v. GREAT NORTHERN RY. 602. —— —— —— ——.]—In an action by a passenger against a railway co., for an injury sustained while travelling on their line, the declaration complaining that they kept & maintained their line in an insecure state, the evidence being, that the embankment ran through a country subject to floods, & had five years ago been constructed of sandy soil, with insufficient culverts to carry off water; that an extraordinary fall of rain had caused a flood, which had washed away the soil, or part of the embankment, leaving the sleepers unsupported, so that the earth gave way, & the train, an express, passing over it at night, at the ordinary express rate, went off the line; there being no evidence that the water was seen on the line, or that there had been anything to indicate danger, & no engineer or skilled witness having been called to prove that the nature of the soil of the embankment was such that water would wash it away in ordinary floods:—Held: although the evidence as to the construction & condition of the line, at the time of the accident, & of the rate of speed at which the trains had been going had been properly admitted, as these were circumstances which might have shown negligence, if it had been proved that the line was known or ought to have been known to be in an insecure state, yet that as there was nothing to show that it was so known, there was no evidence of negligence, or so little that the verdict was against the weight of evidence. —WITHERS v. NORTH KENT RY. 603. —— —— Storm—Evidence of sufficiency of structure.]—A railway embankment fell & caused the death of passengers whose representatives sued the railway co. for negligence; the defence was that the railway was properly constructed & was daily inspected, but that it was owing to the violence of a storm that the embankment gave way:—Held: (1) where an injury is alleged to have arisen from the improper construction of a railway the fact of its having given way will amount to primâ facie evidence of its insufficiency, & this evidence may become conclusive from the absence of any proof on the part of the railway co. to rebut it; (2) the judge ought to have called the attention of the jury to the evidence as to the extraordinary state of the weather, & asked them whether they were satisfied that the storm was so extraordinary that no experience could have anticipated its occurrence. If, owing to this non-direction, the jury had given a verdict against the evidence, the ct. would have ordered a new trial, but otherwise if, even without such direction, the verdict ought to have been the same.

(3) In judging of the sufficiency of a railway structure, the amount of precaution, which ought to be taken to guard against any external violence to which it may be exposed, cannot be the subject of a precise rule, but must necessarily vary according to the varying local circumstances of each case; but in such cases the railway co. ought to construct their works in such a manner as to be capable of resisting all the violence of weather which in the climate might be expected, though perhaps rarely, to occur.—GREAT WESTERN RY. 604. Whether passenger guilty of negligence—Fall over switch-handle.]—In an action against a railway co. for negligence in the management of their railway at one of their stations, whereby pltf., a passenger, was injured, the defence was that the accident arose entirely from pltf.'s own want of caution, & that the co. were wholly blameless. Pltf. had arrived at the station about two minutes or less before the time of departure of the train, &, in running along the line, at a place where he ought not to have gone, in order to reach the train, which was some distance ahead on the opposite side of the railway, had fallen over a switch-handle, & was considerably hurt. The judge left it to the jury to say whether the injury to pltf. was occasioned by the negligence

& want of proper care of defts., or resulted entirely from pltf.'s own carelessness, as the co. contended. The jury having found for pltf. :—Held : the judge was, in the circumstances, warranted in leaving the case to the jury upon the only points raised by the parties ; the omission to call their attention to the intermediate case of the negligence of both parties being contributory to the accident, was no misdirection.

607. —— Whether invitation by company—Breach of statutory provisions as to carriage traffic.]—Defts.' line crossed a highway on a level ; the railway was guarded from the road by carriage gates, which, by statute & by defts.' rules, ought to have been kept locked, except while being used for the passage of vehicles across the line, & a turnstile for foot passengers. A gateman was accustomed to attend to the carriage gates, & warn passengers along the highway of the approach of trains. On a certain day the gateman was employed on other duties & one of the carriage gates was left open. Deceased, wishing to go to the station, had passed through one of the gates on the side on which the carriage gate was open, & was crossing the line when a train knocked him down & killed him :—Held : there was evidence of negligence to go to the jury.—STAPLEY v. LONDON, BRIGHTON & SOUTH COAST RY. 608. —— —— Notices forbidding crossing disregarded.]—M., a married woman, was a passenger by defts.' line. After arriving at a station of defts., she was crossing the line in order to go by another co.'s railway, & was killed by the train backing upon her. Passengers had been allowed to cross at the spot where M. was run over, but notices had been put up forbidding passengers to cross, &, by a bridge at some distance, M. might have gone over in safety. No servant of defts. was at the tail of the train when it backed :—Held : defts. were guilty of negligence, & were liable to compensate the husband of M. for her death.—ROGERS v. RHYMNEY RY. Co. (1872), 26 L. T. 879 ; 21 W. R. 21.

609. —— —— ——.]—(1) Where there is conflicting evidence on a question of fact, whatever may be the opinon of the judge who tries the cause as to the value of that evidence, he must leave the consideration of it for the decision of the jury.

S. went to the station to accompany a relative who was going by the up train to D. It was necessary to cross the line in order to get the ticket. S. went through a gate, down a pathway, & across the line in front of the train going to D., which was then slowly approaching the station from K. The time was night. There were notice boards warning persons not to cross the line at that point, but there was evidence that the railway servants never interrupted any persons who did cross the line there. S. crossed in safety, & obtained a ticket for his relative, who, with two friends, was standing on the bank by the side of the up line. The train to D. had, in the meantime, arrived, & was standing still. S. having got the ticket began to recross the line, being then, not in front of the D. train, but behind it, in consequence of which that train prevented him seeing anything on the down line from D. ; & he moved on. As he was going on the down line, the down express caught him & he was killed. It was a rule of the railway that the express train should always sound a whistle on approaching the station, & the driver of that train swore that he whistled twice, & some other servants of the railway co. swore that they had heard the whistling. The friends of S. had, in their evidence for pltf., sworn that they were in a situation to hear the whistle if it had been sounded, & that they had not heard it ; and one of them, who could see the down train approaching, swore that he heard the " rumbling " of the approaching train, but heard no whistle :—Held : this was a case properly left to the jury ; where there is contradictory evidence on facts, the jurors & not the judge must decide upon them.

(2) Where notices have been put up by a railway co. forbidding persons to cross the line at a particular point, but these notices have been continually disregarded by the public, & the co.'s servants have not interfered to enforce their observance, the co. cannot, in the case of an injury occurring to any one crossing the line at that point, set up the existence of the notices by way of answer to an action for damages for such injury.—DUBLIN, WICKLOW & WEXFORD RY. 610. —— —— Proper place for crossing provided.]—Pltf. was in the habit of travelling by the last train from K. to L., which departed from the up platform. Adjoining the down platform at the K. station was a booking office & waiting room; but there was no office or room or any shelter whatever on the up platform. In the middle of the station opposite the booking office the ground between the rails was covered with wood for the width of several feet, over which passengers used to cross when there was no train standing in the station. Near the south end of the station there was also a covered wooden bridge over the rails, the steps leading to which opened on to the causeway of a highway, so that any person who wished to cross over from one platform to another by the bridge would have to go from the station to the high road, ascend the steps, cross the bridge, descend again to the high road, & then re-enter the station. Pltf., having arrived in good time for his train, went to the waiting room. Shortly before his train approached the up platform a porter called out "All the other side for L." At that time there was no train in the station, so that passengers could safely use the middle crossing. Pltf., however, had not then taken his ticket, & by the time he had done so a train had entered the station, & was standing on the down line, thereby blocking up the middle crossing. Pltf., therefore, being in a hurry to catch his train, did not cross over the rails by the bridge, but walked along towards the end of the platform & then jumped on to the rails for the purpose of reaching the up platform. In doing so he sustained considerable injury, the ground between the rails at that point having been excavated, & the ballast removed. At the trial several witnesses were called to prove that when the middle crossing was blocked they were in the habit of getting across from one platform to the other as best they could, and did not make use of the bridge. The co.'s officials denied, however, that they had ever sanctioned such a proceeding:—Held: as a proper place had been provided for crossing, of which pltf. was aware, & there was no evidence of an invitation on the part of any servant of the railway co. to cross where he did, defts. were not liable for the injuries which pltf. had sustained.—WILBY v. MIDLAND RY. CO. (1876), 35 L. T. 244.

611. —— Crossing in daylight—No servant stationed to warn passenger.]—A passenger having arrived by a train at a station on defts.' line of railway, got out in safety & walked along the way which she was well acquainted with, & proceeded to cross the single line by the appointed level crossing, in order to leave the station. At the very moment that she stepped on the line a train which she could have seen if she had looked arrived at the same spot, & she was knocked down by it & killed:—Held: there was no evidence for the jury of any negligence on the part of defts., it not being negligence in them not to have a person stationed on the spot to warn passengers about to cross the line of the approach of a train, of which, if passengers used due care, they might inform themselves.—WALKER v. MIDLAND RY. CO. (1866), 14 L. T. 796; 30 J. P. 535.

614. —— Crossing at night—Sharp curve.]—In an action of negligence, if pltf. gives evidence of negligence on the part of deft., & also gives evidence which may or may not be considered as amounting to contributory negligence on his own part, the case ought to be left to the jury.

Pltf., an intending passenger by defts.' railway, having received his ticket, was obliged to cross the line by a level crossing in order to get from the booking-office to the platform from which his train would start. While crossing he was knocked down & injured by a train which he was unable to see till it was about twenty yards from him, owing to a sharp curve on the line. The night was dark, & there was no one at the crossing to warn pltf. of the approaching train, which was a special train running through the station at a fast speed, & not mentioned in the time-tables. A nonsuit having been directed:—Held: the case ought not to have been withdrawn from the jury, & the nonsuit was wrong.—BROWN v. GREAT WESTERN RY. CO. (1885), 1 T. L. R. 614, C. A.

615. —— —— No warning.]—In an action brought under Fatal Accidents Act, 1846 (c. 93), by a widow for the loss of her husband, it was proved that deceased intended to travel on defts.' line to N. from W., by a train leaving to 9.50 p.m. On the up platform, from which he would have had to start, there was no waiting room, & the night being very cold, he had gone into that on the down platform. When the train was heard approaching, deceased went quickly along the down platform, so as to cross over to the up plat-

614 i. Whether passenger guilty of negligence—Crossing at night.]—A passenger, travelling by railway, whose train, from which he had alighted at a junction on a dark night was shunted to an unusual siding, out of sight from the platform, was killed while crossing the main line:—Held: although there was no accommodation by a bridge for the passengers, & no servant of the co. at hand to direct them, there was no evidence of positive negligence on the part of the ry. co.—FALKINER v. GREAT SOUTHERN & WESTERN OF IRELAND RY. He passed through an open gate, at the end of the down platform. While running across he saw the up-train, but had not heard any whistle, &, in endeavouring to jump on the siding, he was struck by this train & hurt. The evening was dark & misty, & there was at the time much smoke & noise from the down-train standing in the station.—Held: there was no evidence of negligence on the part of defts. which could be legitimately connected with the accident.—WRIGHT v. GREAT NORTHERN RY. form, which he could only reach by going over a level crossing. In attempting to cross the line when the train was only about 20 yards from the level crossing he was knocked down by the engine & killed. At the approach of a train it was usual for a porter to stand at the level crossing & warn the passengers, but on the occasion in question there was no porter there, & no notice was given of the danger, either by any bell being rung or any whistling by the driver of the engine:—Held: there being evidence of the negligence of defts. the case had been properly allowed to go to the jury, as both the primary facts in the case & the inference of fact to be drawn from them were not so clear that the jury acting fairly & impartially had been bound to come to a conclusion conclusive against pltf.—WRIGHT v. MIDLAND RY. No evidence was given for pltf. of anything, beyond the above-mentioned facts, in the nature of negligence on the part of any servant of defts. in the driving or management of the omnibus, or of any defect in the construction or condition of the particular omnibus, or that motor omnibuses generally were of such a character as to constitute a nuisance, but it was apparently assumed, & not disputed by defts., that motor omnibuses, however well constructed, had a tendency to skid when the road was greasy. Defts. called no witnesses except as to quantum of damage:—Held: upon the facts, there was no evidence for the jury that defts.' allowing the motor omnibus to run in the circumstances constituted a nuisance, & judgment was correctly entered for defts.

It was enacted that no action or proceeding should be prosecuted against any person or corporation for anything done or omitted to be done in pursuance of the Act, or in the execution of the powers or authorities given by it, without twenty days' notice in writing.

A declaration in case against the co. charged that they were owners of the railway, & of carriages used by them for the conveyance of passengers along it, for reward; that, they being owners of the railway & carriages, pltf., at their request, became a passenger in one of the carriages, for reward to them, & they received him as such passenger; & it became their duty to use due care & skill in conveying him. Breach: that they did not use due care & skill in conveying him, but took so little care & so negligently & unskilfully conducted themselves in carrying him, & managing the carriage in which he was passenger, the train to which it was attached, & the engine whereby it was drawn upon the co.'s railway, that the carriage was thrown off the rails & pltf. injured:—Held: (1) no notice of action was necessary, the co. being sued in their capacity of carriers, & not for anything done or omitted under the special authority of the Act; although, for the purpose of showing that the accident occurred from a speed which was improper in the circumstances, evidence was given that the rails were defective at the spot. 625 iii. —— —— ——.]—Pltf. sustained injuries, in consequence of a portion of the train in which she was travelling having left the rails; the railway, engine, & carriages, were under defts.' management:—Held: the fact of the accident was sufficient evidence to cast upon defts. the burden of showing that there was no negligence on their part; &, as they declined to afford any explanation of the cause of the accident, there was a case for pltf. proper to be submitted to the jury.—FLANNERY v. WATERFORD & LIMERICK RY. The car began to move when he was about half way across the street, but the motorman motioned him to go in front of the car, & stopped it; pltf. passed in front of the car & proceeded to the rear end of it; before he reached that end, the car had, without any signal from the conductor, begun to move slowly; pltf. attempted to step on; but, as he did so, the car gave a "sudden jolt forward," & he failed to get on the step of the platform, fell, & was injured:—Held: (1) pltf. was invited by the motorman to get on the car when it was in motion; (2) pltf.'s injuries were caused by negligence of defts.—HILL v. TORONTO RY. In an action against T. & C. in the alternative the judge non-suited pltf. as against T., & the jury found in favour of C., after evidence had been called by pltf. to prove that the 'bus was sound & that the accident was due to a defect in the tramline:—Held: (1) there was some evidence of negligent driving.

The wheel came off. Is not this a case of res ipsa loquitur? (COZENS HARDY, M.R.).

632. On whom burden of proof.]—In an action for an injury caused to a passenger on a railway, by alleged negligence of the railway co.'s servants, it is necessary for pltf. to make out that the injury arose from causes which involved negligence on their part. If the evidence leaves that point in doubt, the co. are entitled to the verdict.

A carriage broke from its fastenings & went off the line, & thus had caused the injury; it was a point in dispute upon the evidence whether this had arisen from insufficient fastening, or from a breakage caused by a latent flaw in the iron; the jury were directed that if they were in doubt upon this point the co. were entitled to the verdict.—PHELPS v. GREAT EASTERN RY. 633. ———.]—A goods train & a passenger train met, & were passing each other on a double line of railway. Some timber on a truck in the goods train projected & struck the passenger train, injuring pltf., a passenger. The timber had been loaded on the truck without stanchions, & was secured by a chain only, which broke, & there was evidence that the breakage was caused by a latent flaw in the chain. There was also evidence that it would have been safer to load the timber with stanchions, but that the use of them for that purpose was comparatively recent, & there was no evidence of any accident having happened from not using stanchions:—Held: (1) it was for him to show that the accident was caused by defts.' negligence, & they were not bound to show how the accident happened.

Accident not bound to have been foreseen—Alteration in working after accident—Whether evidence of antecedent negligence.]—At P. station on defts.' main line of railway, a few miles from M., there were sidings leading from the main line of rails to coaling & engine sheds, the points of which sidings were always open on to the main line. On the day in question, an engine had, in accordance with the usual practice, been taken by the servant of the co. appointed for that purpose to the coaling shed & been coaled, & was returning slowly therefrom on its way to the engine shed. In the ordinary course of things, the engine would have gone along the siding until it had passed the points of the siding leading to the engine shed, when it would have been reversed & backed over them into that shed; but at the moment that the man in charge of the engine should have reversed its action, he fell down in a fit on the footboard of the engine, which consequently proceeded on towards the main line. At this same time a down express train from M., & an up express train from R. were approaching the station at full speed, & the pointsman in charge of the points at the spot seeing the runaway engine, with the man lying on the floor approaching, in order to prevent its getting on to the main line, & coming into collision with either of these express trains, deliberately, as a choice of evils, turned the points so as to send it on to a branch line of railway from A., which formed a junction at this station with the main line, at the platform of which branch line he knew that a train was stopping for tickets to be collected. The consequence was, that the, engine ran into the stationary branch train, & pltf. a second-class passenger in one of the carriages of that train, received bodily injuries from the collision, for which he sued the co. for compensation, on the ground of negligence, (1), in not having two men on the engine while coaling, & running it from the coaling to the engine shed; & (2) in having the points of the sidings so arranged that the engine must necessarily, in case of accident to the driver, pass on to the main line; the fact of an alteration having since this accident been made, so that a runaway engine would pass on to a supplementary siding leading up to a "dead end," was urged as evidence of their previous negligence in this respect. It was admitted, on all hands, that the pointsman had acted with great presence of mind, & for the best in the circumstances:—Held: (1) there was no evidence of negligence in defts. on which the verdict could be supported; (2) there being nothing dangerous or attended with peculiar risk in the operation of coaling the engines, & running them to & from the coaling & engine sheds, & it being an operation usually well performed by one man, the not employing two men to perform it was not negligence in defts.; (3) the arrangement of the sidings having been used for twenty years without accident, defts. could not be held bound to have foreseen the accident, or be held responsible for it upon its happening; (4) the subsequent alteration of the siding rails was not evidence of antecedent negligence on their part in that respect.—HART v. LANCASHIRE & YORKSHIRE RY. Defts. pleaded the general issue, with a traverse of pltf. being a passenger, etc. The train in question was hired of the co. by a society for an excursion, the tickets for which were sold & distributed by the secretary of the latter body, from whom pltf. purchased his; the accident was occasioned by the train running, in the dark, against another train which was standing still at an intermediate station on the line:—Held: (1) the mere fact of the accident having occurred was primâ facie evidence of negligence on the part of defts.; (2) there was evidence to go to the jury in support of the allegation that pltf. became a passenger for hire with the co.—SKINNER v. LONDON, BRIGHTON & SOUTH COAST RY. N. Ry. Defts. pleaded that pltf. at the time, etc., was unlawfully, & not lawfully in the carriage. The evidence went to show that a practice existed by which the reporters engaged on Bell's Life, of whom pltf. was one, when going to any races travelled free. Pltf., acting bonâ fide in his capacity as a reporter to the paper, was supplied with a ticket which bore the name of a person connected with the paper, but not pltf.'s; on it were the words "not transferable" & a memorandum that any other person than the one named using it would be liable to a penalty, or liable to pay the fare; pltf. showed this pass to the porter, whose business it was to examine them, who said it was all right, & put pltf. in the carriage. It was not distinctly proved that pltf. was personally known to the porter; but it was proved that pltf. & other reporters had on several occasions travelled with similar tickets to that used in this instance by pltf., & upon which their names did not appear, but those of other persons, & that some of those persons were personally known to the officers of the railway; but knowledge of such acts was not conclusively brought home to the co.:—Held: there was evidence for the jury to consider whether pltf. was lawfully in the carriage as alleged in the declaration; the issue raised was not as to the lawfulness of the carriage being on the highway, but whether pltf. was in the carriage in such circumstances as to be considered a trespasser.—GREAT NORTHERN RY. Passengers were taken from the shore at M. by a small steamer to a hulk moored in the river, which they boarded through one of the portholes, & thus got on to the lower deck. The sea-going steamers called at the hulk for passengers. A ladder led from the lower deck of the hulk to the upper deck, where the ticket-office was. The owner let the hulk to A. & other persons; it was fitted up according to A.'s satisfaction, whose duty it was to light it. A servant of the owner of the hulk looked after it. Tickets could also be taken on the steamers. B., who was a passenger from M. to L. having taken his ticket, went down the ladder on to the lower deck to get on board the sea-going vessel. About two feet from the bottom of the ladder there was a hole, through which he fell & injured himself :—Held : A. was liable on the contract to carry, & on the contract implied by the invitation to passengers to come on board the hulk.—JOHN v. BACON (1870), L. 644. —— Person accompanying passenger.]—Pltf., who had frequently accompanied passengers in the same way on previous occasions, in company with A., a passenger by defts.' railway, entered upon the premises of defts. for the purpose of seeing A. off. In order to get to the departure platform of the defts.' railway, it was necessary to cross a bridge approached by steep steps & turning to the right at the top of the steps. About six or ten feet from the top step a servant of defts. for the purpose of cleaning a lamp, was standing on a narrow plank placed across the bridge resting on the balustrades about 4 ft. 6 ins. from the ground. Pltf. walked against the plank & was injured. It was daylight at the time of the accident:—Held: (1) (per DENMAN, J.), there was no reasonable evidence of negligence on the part of defts. to go to the jury; (per LOPES, J.), there was reasonable evidence to go to the jury of negligence on the part of defts., the rule being that a judge should always leave a case to the jury if there is any evidence upon which a jury may reasonably act; (2) (per DENMAN, J.) pltf. was not a bare licensee, but was on defts.' premises by the invitation of defts. to the same extent as the passenger accompanied, who was there on lawful business in which the passenger & the co. had both an interest.—WATKINS v. GREAT WESTERN RY. 646. Licensee—Steamer hired by ferryman—Fare paid to ferryman.]—H., the lessee of a ferry, hired of defts. for the day a steamer, with a crew, to carry his passengers across. Pltf., having paid his fare to H. passed across on the steamer, & while on board was injured by the breaking of a rope, owing to negligence of the crew in the manner of mooring:—Held: the crew remained the servants of defts., who were liable for their negligence, &, as the negligence was such as would have made defts. liable to a mere stranger, & pltf. was on board with their consent, it was immaterial that he was a passenger under a contract with H.—DALYELL v. TYRER (1858), E. 644 i. —— Person accompanying passenger.]—A person, who had been permitted to go upon a railway platform to see friends off by a train, was injured through the fault of the station employees in starting a train without closing the doors:—Held: the ry. co. were liable.—TOUGH v. NORTH BRITISH RY. CO., [1914] S. C. 291.—SCOT.

646 i. Licensee.]—A boy selling newspapers, got on a street car at the rear end, & passed through the car to the front platform, where the driver was standing. He stepped to one side behind the driver, & fell off or disappeared from the car, there being no step on that side, & was killed by the car running over him. Newsboys were allowed to enter the cars to sell newspapers without being charged:—Held: he was lawfully on the car, was a mere licensee or volunteer, & the co. were under no duty to provide a step for him.—BLACKMORE v. TORONTO STREET RY. CO. (1876), 38 U. C. R. 172.—CAN.

u. Trespasser.]—Defts. agreed with a contractor for the construction of their railway to furnish a construction train to be used in carrying materials. Pltf., one of the contractor's workmen, with the permission of the conductor, but without the authority of defts., got on the train. Through the negligence of the person in charge of the train, an accident happened, & pltf. was injured:—Held: defts. were not liable, for their contract was to carry materials only, not passengers, & the conductor in permitting pltf. to get upon the train was not acting as defts.' agent.—GRAHAM v. TORONTO, GREY, & BRUCE RY. CO. (1874), 23 C. P. 541.—CAN.

v. Passenger engaged in unlawful act.]—A passenger was told by the guard of a train in which he was about to travel that he would find room in the front carriages, & on his failing so to do he returned towards the guard's van; seeing it already partly occupied by passengers he asked the guard's leave to go in. No reply was given, & on his immediately thereafter attempting to enter the guard thrust him back, whereupon he caught hold of the door handle, &, the train having then got into motion, fell between the van & the platform & thereby sustained injuries:—Held: pursuer at the time when the accident occurred having been engaged in an unlawful act, took the whole risk, & no fault was chargeable against defenders or their servants.—THOMPSON v. NORTH BRITISH RY. 650. Spark from engine—Injury to passenger.]—Pltf., a passenger, while leaving defts.' station by a path belonging to defts. which ran alongside the railway & was an authorised means of exit, was injured by a spark from an engine on the railway. There was evidence that the attention of defts. had been called to the danger of injury from sparks to passengers using the path, & they had declined to protect the path by a screen or cover on the ground of expense ; & that the path could have been protected at a reasonable cost & without interfering with the business of the railway. The engine was properly constructed to prevent the emission of sparks according to the latest & most improved methods, & there was no negligence in working the engine :—Held : there was evidence upon which the jury could properly find that defts. were negligent in not taking reasonable precautions to protect passengers using the path from injury by sparks.—ATHERTON v. LONDON & NORTH WESTERN RY. 652. —— Measure of damages.]—Through the negligence of a railway co.'s servants, pltfs. & their two young children were taken to a wrong station, where they could not obtain either accommodation or a conveyance, & had to walk home several miles in the middle of a wet night. Female pltf. caught cold & was laid up for some time, & was unable to help her husband in his business, & he had to pay for medical attendance & other things, rendered necessary by the illness of his wife. Pltfs. having recovered damages, £10 for the personal inconvenience suffered by them, & £20 in respect of the wife's illness :—Held : pltfs. could recover damages for the inconvenience to which they had been exposed, but not for the illness of the wife or its consequences, the damages from these being too remote, & not flowing immediately from the cause of action.—HOBBS v. LONDON & SOUTH WESTERN RY. CO. (1875), L. R. 10 Q. B. 111 ; 44 L. J. Q. B. 49 ; 32 L. T. 252 ; 39 J. P. 693 ; 23 W. R. 520.

653. Travelling beyond named destination—Same fare to both stations—Liability to pay excess fare.]—A passenger with a return ticket between two stations on a line of railway cannot travel on, upon that ticket, to a station beyond the terminal station mentioned therein, & from & to which the ticket was taken, without paying the extra fare for the further distance so travelled, notwithstanding that the charge for a return ticket for the entire distance is the same as that paid by him for the ticket which he had taken.

Resp. took, at W. station of the applt. co., a return ticket from that station to D., for which he paid the authorised fare of 2*s.* 6*d.* On his return journey he travelled on in the same carriage from W. to P., & declined to pay the extra single fare of 3*d.* demanded of him for so doing, on the ground that, as the charge for a return ticket from P. to D. was only 2*s.* 6*d.*, the money which he had already paid for his ticket covered the whole distance, & entitled him to be carried on to P. without any extra payment :—Held : the contract between the passenger & the co., of which the ticket was conclusive evidence, was to carry him from W. to D.

a. Crossing gate left open—Train colliding with stray cattle—Injury to passenger.]—Pltf., a passenger on defts.' railway, sustained injuries, by the collision of the train with cattle, which were trespassing from adjoining lands, & had come on the line at a private level crossing through a gate open at the time of the accident. The post to which the gate should have been locked was loose :—Held : mere looseness of the post to which the gate was usually bolted was insufficient to imply neglect in the co.—PATCHELL v. IRISH NORTH WESTERN RY. f. —— ——.]—A. was a passenger by defts.' railway. F., a drunken man, with a ticket, was admitted to the platform at O. station, passed the barrier where the ticket-checker was stationed, & attempted to enter a carriage, when the station-master ordered a porter to keep him back. Whilst the porter was leading F. along the platform, F. suddenly swung his arm & broke the window of the carriage in which A. was sitting, A. being severely injured by the broken glass. In an action for damages brought by A., & founded upon the alleged negligence & want of care on the part of defts., the case was left to the jury on the erroneous assumption that if the drunken man was "obviously drunk," either the neglect to notice that condition, or the admission of him in that condition as a passenger, rendered the co. absolutely responsible for all that he did :—Held : ground for a new trial.—ADDERLEY v. GREAT NORTHERN RY. 651 i. Agreement to carry to named destination—By advertised steamers.]—Applts. advertised that they ran a regular steamer to B. at definite dates & hours. No fare was mentioned ; but a uniform fare had always been charged. Resp. in reliance upon the advertisement went on board the steamer & started on the voyage, & was willing to pay the usual fare in the ordinary manner on the steamer : —Held : applts. committed a breach of contract in requiring from resp. on personal grounds four times the usual fare, & on his refusal putting the steamer back to port & compelling resp. to go ashore.—PITCAITHLY v. THACKER (1903), 23 N. 654. —— Ticket used for station further on—Amount of excess fare recoverable.]—A condition indorsed on an excursion ticket, that if the ticket is used for any other station than that named the ticket will be forfeited, not only precludes a passenger from leaving the train at an intermediate station, but also from continuing his journey in the same train beyond the station named without paying the full ordinary fare for the entire journey. Should such passenger attempt to avail himself of an excursion ticket from A. to B. as part of his journey in the same train from A. to C., a station beyond B., his ticket is, under the condition, forfeited. He cannot at C. tender the excursion ticket from A. to B. with the ordinary fare from B. to C., but must pay the full fare from A. to C.—GREAT NORTHERN RY. CO. v. PALMER, [1895] 1 Q. B. 862; 64 L. 655. —— —— ——.]—A passenger intending to travel by a through train from H. to M., for which the fare was 2*s.* 3*d.*, took an ordinary ticket from H. to an intermediate station, S., for which he paid 1*s.* 6*d.* At S. he gave up his ticket & told the ticket collector that he intended to travel on in the same train to M., & he tendered 7*d.*, the local fare from S. to M. This the collector refused & demanded 9*d.*, which was the difference between what he had paid for his ticket to S. & the whole fare from H. to M. The passenger refused to pay this, &, without getting a fresh ticket, travelled on in the same train to M. Conditions against using a ticket for any other station than that for which it was issued, & against rebooking at an intermediate station by the same train, were incorporated into the contract:—Held: the railway co. were entitled to charge the whole fare as for one through journey from H. to M., & the passenger was liable to pay the difference between what he would have paid if he had taken a through ticket for the whole distance & what he had actually paid.—LONDON & NORTH WESTERN RY. CO. v. HINCHCLIFFE, [1903] 2 K. B. 32; 72 L. J. K. B. 530; 88 L. T. 800; 67 J. P. 205; 51 W. R. 556; 19 T. L. R. 430; 47 Sol. Jo. 493, D. C.

656. Breaking journey—Condition for forfeiture & payment of full fare—If ticket used for any other than named station—Ticket used for intermediate station.]—Deft., a passenger on pltfs.' railway, took a tourist ticket to S., for which he paid 8*s.*; the ticket contained a condition that if used for any other station it would be forfeited & the full fare charged. He alighted at F., a station short of S., to which the fare was 9*s.*; he then took a ticket from F., to his destination on a branch line; he did not give up at F. the ticket he had originally taken. Pltfs. brought an action in the county ct., claiming to be entitled to recover 9*s.* the full fare to F., or 1*s.* if deft. was entitled to be credited with the 8*s.* paid by him for his original ticket; but they were nonsuited on the ground that they were suing for a penalty, which was only recoverable before justices:—Held: pltfs. were not suing to recover a penalty but to recover a fare under the terms of the contract entered into with deft.; the action was maintainable & the nonsuit was wrong.—GREAT NORTHERN RY. CO. v. WINDER, [1892] 2 Q. B. 595; 61 L. J. Q. B. 608; 67 L. T. 422; 56 J. P. 775; 8 T. L. R. 564; 36 Sol. Jo. 504, D. C.

The conductor demanded from him the legal fare for the journey, but resp. refused to pay it, contending that, having already paid for & obtained a ticket, he was entitled to complete the journey by another tramcar:—Held: resp. had, by alighting from the first tramcar & allowing it to proceed, determined the contract of carriage, & was not entitled to travel on the second tramcar without paying the legal fare.—BASTAPLE v. METCALFE, [1906] 2 K. railway under a contract by which defts. were to carry him by continuous journey from H. to S., via H. There was a break in the line of defts.' railway at G., & an omnibus was provided, as advertised by defts., but pltf. was asked to pay a fare of 10 cents for transfer in it, & refusing so to do, was not permitted to be transported free. He failed to make his connection, & brought action for damages:—Held: he was entitled to be conveyed from station to station free of expense; but it would have been reasonable for him to have paid the 10 cents & made his connection, & the damages should be restricted to that sum.—CLARRY v. GRAND TRUNK RY. Not transferable." The train did not appear in the public time-tables, but the time of starting was notified to the G. Co. The train was run under an agreement between defts. & the G. Co. by which defts. lent the G. Co. engines, for continuing the trains from defts.' line to the colliery without charge, on condition that the G. Co. indemnified defts. from liability for injury to workmen being conveyed on the line & would treat the trains as private trains of the G. Co. Tickets for the train were issued by defts. to the G. Co. in bundles at 1*s.* a ticket & were distributed by the G. Co. to the colliers, who were charged 9*d.* a ticket. Defts.' train was timed to start at 5.18 a.m. Pltf. waited at the station until 7 a.m., when the train had not yet arrived, having been delayed by one of the carriages having got off the line. As it was then too late to be allowed to go down the pit to do that day's work he went home. He brought an action against defts. to recover the day's wages thus lost:—Held: (1) there was evidence of a contract between pltf. & defts.; (2) as there was unreasonable delay in starting the train, pltf. was entitled to recover.—COOKE v. MIDLAND RY. B. In Time Tables.

665. Effect of publication—Promise that train will run as advertised.]—The G. N. Ry. Co., whose line communicated with the line of the N. E. Ry. Co. at M., had arrangements by which their trains starting from P. at 7 p.m. & going to M., there met a train of the N. E. Co. running from M. to H., by which passengers from P. to H. were forwarded. The G. N. Co. published monthly time tables in which they stated, in the usual way, that the 7 p.m. train from P. carried to H. At the end of a month, after the G. N. time tables for the ensuing month were prepared in this form & printed, but before they were published, the N. E. Co. discontinued the train from M. to H. The G. N. Co. made no alteration in their time tables already printed, but published & circulated them after they knew that there was no such train. Pltf., having seen one of the time tables, made his arrangements, on the faith of it, to go from P. to H. by the 7 p.m. train; he came to P. in time, went to the station, & then for the first time learned that he could go no further than M. by that train. He was delayed in his journey & sustained damage, for which he sued the G. N. Co.:—Held: (1) he was entitled to recover; the circulation of the time tables amounted to a representation on the part of defts. that there was a train, which was false to the knowledge of those making it, & calculated to induce pltf. to act as he did; (2) the time table amounted to a contract on behalf of the co. with those who should come to the station to forward them as stated in the table.—DENTON v. GREAT NORTHERN RY. Co. (1856), 5 E. & B. 860; Saund. & M. 128; 25 L. J. Q. B. 129; 26 L. T. O. S. 216; 20 J. P. 483; 2 Jur. N. S. 185; 4 W. R. 240; 119 E. R. 701.

666. —— Whether absolute contract to reach destination same day.]—HAMLIN v. GREAT NORTHERN RY. Co., No. 714, post.

667. —— ——.]—Pltf. took a ticket of deft. co. from B. to L., by the train which was advertised in the time tables to leave B. at 4.55 p.m. & to arrive at L. at 10.10 p.m. Between B. & D. the train was delayed by the floods several times, & consequently failed to catch the corresponding train from D. to L. On arriving at D. pltf. was informed by the station-master that no other train would go to L. that night, but that the usual trains would run the following morning. Pltf. thereupon determined to pass the night at D. Next day pltf. was unable to reach L. at all owing to a portion of the line having during the night become impassable from the floods. Pltf. claimed damages for a breach of contract:—Held: (1) defts. had only contracted to use due diligence to reach D. in time to catch the corresponding train k. Starting train from unusual platform.]—It is the duty of a ry. co. which starts a train from an unusual platform to take steps to warn intending passengers of the place of departure of the train.—SIMMONTON v. BELFAST & COUNTY DOWN RY. (1911), 45 I. L. T. 251.—IR.

PART V. SECT. 3, SUB-SECT. 2.—B.

l. Effect of publication — Whether incorporated in contract.]—A published time table is not part of the contract to carry, but merely a representation that a train will leave a station at a named time & arrive at another station at another named time.—BRIGGS v. GRAND TRUNK RY. Co. (1865), 24 U. C. R. 510.—CAN.

m. —— Liability for delay.]—A ry. co. was held liable to pay damages because a train advertised in the time table as proceeding on a fair day to K. was delayed nearly three hours en route, & the passengers were late for the fair.—BURNS v. ULSTER RY. Co. (1867), 1 I. L. T. 534.—IR.

to L., & as they had failed to do so from unavoidable causes they were not bound to forward pltf. by a special train; (2) even had an absolute contract to carry from B. to L. on the day the ticket was taken existed, as pltf. alleged, the latter had by his conduct exonerated & discharged defts. from performance of it (BRAMWELL, B.).—FITZGERALD v. MIDLAND RY. CO. (1876), 34 L. T. 771, D. C.

668. —— Whether warranty as to punctuality.]—A statement in the official guide of a sleeping car co., which has sleeping cars in certain trains running between P. & the south of F., that such trains correspond with trains leaving L. at specified times, is not a warranty of punctuality, but a mere representation that the proper times of arrival of the trains from L. are those mentioned therein, & imposes no duty on the co. to see that such trains do so arrive.—LOCKYER v. INTERNATIONAL SLEEPING CAR & EUROPEAN EXPRESS TRAINS CO. (1892), 61 L. J. Q. B. 501; 8 T. L. R. 527; 36 Sol. Jo. 462, D. C.

See, also, Nos. 472, 660, ante, No. 713, post.

669. Condition against liability for delay—Whether company liable.]—Pltf. took a ticket from defts. from C. to N.; pltf., after waiting a long time, was told by a porter that the train was late in consequence of an accident, & the train eventually arrived an hour & a half late. The consequence was that pltf. was late for the train at G., which would have carried him on to N. The train bill was not put in, but only some correspondence in which defts. repudiated their liability on the ground that by the train bills they gave notice they would not be liable for the trains not keeping time:—Held: there was no evidence of a cause of action.—HURST v. GREAT WESTERN RY. CO. (1865), 19 C. B. N. S. 310; 6 New Rep. 297; 34 L. J. C. P. 264; 12 L. T. 634; 11 Jur. N. S. 730; 13 W. R. 950; 144 E. R. 807.

670. —— —— Statement that punctuality not guaranteed.]—The time table of a railway co. stated that a train would leave L. station at 2.37 p.m. & arrive at M. at 2.54. Pltf. entered L. station during the Whitsuntide holidays at 2.20 p.m. & procured a ticket for M. after being told by the ticket-porter & a guard that a train which was nearly due would stop there. The train in question did not arrive at L. till 3 p.m. Pltf. entered the carriage, &, after considerable delays in consequence of stoppages, arrived at S., a station beyond M., at 4.45 p.m. The train had not stopped at M. Pltf. who had an appointment for 3.30 at a place about ten minutes' walk from M. took a cab & arrived there at 5 p.m., but too late for his appointment. The time table of the co. contained the words following: "These tables show the time at which the trains may be expected to arrive & depart from the several stations; every exertion will be used to insure punctuality, but the departure or arrival of trains at the time stated will not be guaranteed, nor will the co. hold themselves responsible for delay, or any consequences, arising therefrom:—Held: no contract or duty had been proved by which the co. could be made liable.—PREVOST v. GREAT EASTERN RY. CO. (1865), 13 L. T. 20, N. P.

671. —— —— —— Through ticket.]—Pltf. took a ticket for S. at the defts.' station at L. The journey from L. to S. is via X. & Y. Defts.' train only goes to X.; & from X. to S. the journey is over the lines & by the trains of other cos. The ticket referred to the conditions in defts.' published time bills, of which the most material part was as follows: "The published train bills are only intended to fix the time at which passengers may be certain to obtain tickets for any journey from the various stations, it being understood that the trains shall not start before the appointed time. Every attention will be paid to insure punctuality, so far as it is practicable; but the directors give notice that the co. do not undertake that the trains shall start or arrive at the time specified in the bills, nor will they be accountable for any loss, inconvenience, or injury which may arise from delays or detention. . . . The granting of tickets to passengers to places off the co.'s line is an arrangement made for the convenience of the public; but the co. do not hold themselves responsible for any delay, detention, or other loss or injury whatsoever arising off their lines, or from the acts or defaults of other parties, nor for the correctness of the times over lines of other companies, nor for the arrival of this co.'s own trains in time for the nominally corresponding train of any other co. or party." The train by which pltf. travelled was too late at X. to catch the train by which pltf. should have proceeded to Y.; & when pltf. did arrive at Y., at about 7 p.m., he found that the train for S. which he should have caught had gone, & that the next train for S. did not start till 8 p.m., arriving at about 10 p.m. He thereupon took a special train from the N. E. Ry. Co., which arrived at S. between 8.30 & 9 p.m. Pltf. had no business or engagement in S. necessitating his being there at any particular time:—Held: (1) if one party does not perform his contract, the other may do so for him as reasonably near as may be, & charge him for the reasonable expense incurred in so doing; (2) a proper test of what is reasonable in such a case as pltf.'s is to consider whether, according to the ordinary habits of society, a person delayed on his journey, in circumstances for which the co. were not responsible, would have incurred the expenditure in question on his own account, & the taking of a special train was, in the circumstances, unreasonable; (3) the words "Every attention will be paid to insure punctuality as far as practicable" did import a contract to use due attention to keep the times specified in the time bills as far as practicable, having regard to the necessary exigencies of the traffic & circumstances over which the co. had no control.

(4) The contract in the conditions was such as to protect defts. from any further liability in a case where they issued a through ticket than they would have incurred if they had only issued a ticket to the farthest point of the journey on their own system (BAGGALLAY, J.A.).

(5) The true meaning of the contract was, that the persons in the management of the train would, with regard to the particular train on that particular journey, use due attention to insure punctuality, but that defts. were not to be held

670 i. Condition against liability for delay—Whether company liable—Statement that punctuality not guaranteed.]—Pltf. applying for a season ticket from C. to W., signed a condition that the co. did not hold themselves liable to subscribers for interruption or delay which might take place in the intercourse along the railway. The ticket was granted subject also to the published regulations & bye-laws of the co. The advertised time of arrival at W. was 8.30 p.m., & the train, owing to delay occasioned by races, did not arrive in W. until 9.12, owing to which pltf. lost the last train at 9 p.m. to T., where he lived, & was obliged to hire a car to take him home, the price of which he sought to recover from defts. The time tables provided that the co. did not guarantee punctual departure or arrival of the trains as advertised:—Held: pltf. could not recover.—KENNY v. WATERFORD & LIMERICK RY. CO., MURPHY v. WATERFORD & LIMERICK RY. CO. (1884), 18 I. L. T. 56.—IR.

672. —— —— —— ——.]—Pltf. took a ticket at defts.' station at D. by the 2.11 p.m. train for B. via L. (Midland) & B., which was printed on the tickets, & it was further stated that they were issued "subject to regulations in the time table." At the end of the time bills there were a number of pages entitled "Connection with other railways," & one of such pages was printed "Through communication between the N. E. Line & Ireland, B. via L. & Barrow," from which it appeared that the 2.11 p.m. train should arrive at L. at 4.45, & leave there at 5.10 by the M. Co.'s line. The M. Co.'s station at L. adjoins the N. E. station, but is a separate building. The train by which pltf. travelled did not reach L. till 5.22 or thirty-seven minutes late, & the M. Co.'s train having left at the proper time, pltf. was unable to proceed to B. that night, & was compelled to put up at a hotel at L. The conditions in defts.' time tables comprise the following: "The hours stated in these time tables are appointed as those at which it is intended, as far as circumstances will permit, the passenger trains should arrive at & depart from the several stations, but their departure or arrival at the times stated, or the arrival of any train passing over any portion of the co.'s lines in time for any nominally corresponding train on any other portion of their lines, is not guaranteed; nor will the co., in any circumstances, be held responsible for delay or detention, however occasioned, or any consequences arising therefrom. The issuing of tickets to passengers to places off this co.'s lines is an arrangement made for the greater convenience of the public; but the co. will not be held responsible for the non-arrival of this co.'s own trains in time for any nominally corresponding train on the lines of other cos., nor for any delay, detention, or other loss or injury whatsoever which may arise therefrom, or off their lines":—Held: the conditions formed part of the contract, & the true construction of such conditions was that defts. refused to guarantee the punctuality of their trains according to the times mentioned in the tables, from whatever cause the irregularity or want of punctuality might arise.—MCCARTAN v. NORTH EASTERN RY. CO. (1885), 54 L. J. Q. B. 441; 1 T. L. R. 490, D. C.

673. —— —— ——.]—(1) Held: a condition in defts.' time tables, that defts. would not undertake that the trains would arrive at the times stated in their time tables, nor would they be accountable for loss or inconvenience or injury arising from delays or detention, exonerated defts.

(2) Qu.: whether the condition would not cover negligence on the part of defts.—DRIVER v. LONDON & NORTH WESTERN RY. CO. (1900), 16 T. L. R. 293, C. A.

674. —— —— —— Negligence of company.]—A condition incorporated by a ticket issued by a railway co. to a passenger that the co. will not in any circumstances be held responsible for delay or detention, however occasioned, or any consequences arising therefrom, protects the co. from liability for delay or detention of the passenger, even when caused by the admitted negligence of the co.

A workman took a ticket issued subject to such a condition, & in consequence of the negligence of the company he was late in arriving at his destination, & so lost his day's work & his day's wages:—Held: he could not recover the amount of his loss from the co.—DUCKWORTH v. LANCASHIRE & YORKSHIRE RY. CO. (1901), 84 L. T. 774; 65 J. P. 517; 49 W. R. 541; 17 T. L. R. 454; 45 Sol. Jo. 467, D. C.

675. —— —— For negligence or wilful misconduct.]—In the common stipulation on railway tickets, that the co. shall not be liable for any delay in the starting or arrival of trains arising from "accident or other cause" the words "other cause" mean "other cause in the nature of accident," & not "any cause whatever." A railway co. cannot absolve themselves from the results of their negligence in not starting a train by stating on their time tables that they will not "hold themselves responsible for delay or any consequences arising therefrom."

Pltf. went to the terminus of a branch line of the G. E. Ry. intending to travel to L. by a certain train that he might attend a corn market. The train was at the station, but the engine which was to draw it had not sufficient steam up, in consequence of the fireman having neglected to light the fire in time, & the train could not go. Pltf. was compelled to take a special train. He was late at market, & suffered loss in his business thereby:—Held: the cause of the non-starting of the ordinary train was not accident, but an act of negligence on the part of a servant of the co., & pltf. was entitled to recover from the co. the sum he had paid for a special train, & likewise a reasonable sum for his loss of market.—BUCKMASTER v. GREAT EASTERN RY. CO. (1870), 23 L. T. 471, N. P.

676. —— —— —— Fog & unusual traffic.]—W. took a railway return ticket to B. by a train which was advertised to reach B. in six hours. The ticket had on its face the words "see back," & on the back the words "subject to conditions on time bills," which conditions stated the co. were not accountable for delays, except caused by wilful misconduct of the co.'s servants. Owing to fog & unusual traffic & a collision, W. was too late for the train at a junction, & at his request he was forwarded by another train, being at least four hours later in arrival than as advertised:—Held: W. was bound by the conditions on the time bills, & there being no evidence of wilful misconduct, W. could not recover damages for delay.—WOODGATE v. GREAT WESTERN RY. CO. (1884), 51 L. T. 826; 49 J. P. 196; 33 W. R. 428; 1 T. L. R. 133, D. C.

677. —— —— —— Steamer delayed.]—A railway co. is not liable to the passengers for the unpunctuality of its trains, except such as is caused by the wilful misconduct of the company's servants, where notice to that effect is printed by the company upon their passenger tickets and time bills.

Defts.' steamer having been delayed by fog, the boat train run in connection with it missed the connecting train at S. Junction &, on account of there being only three passengers, was not sent on & the passengers including pltf. had to wait at S. for a later train. Defts., by their published conditions, had excluded liability for unpunctuality of their trains unless caused by wilful misconduct: —Held: pltf. could not recover damages for loss of a market.—COOPER v. GREAT WESTERN RY. 679. —— —— Ticket issued subject to time table.]—Pltf. took a tourist ticket from defts. on the faith of defts.' programme of tourist ticket arrangements. On the back was printed "This ticket is subject to the regulations & conditions stated in the co.'s time tables & bills." Defts.' monthly time bill stated that the co. did not hold themselves responsible for any delay, detention, etc., arising off their lines, or from the acts or defaults of other parties, nor for the correctness of the times over other lines or cos." Pltf. was detained by the lateness of another co.'s train:—Held: pltf. was bound by the monthly time table & could not recover the expenses incurred through such detention.—THOMPSON v. MIDLAND RY. CO. (1875), 34 L. T. 34; 40 J. P. 612.

SUB-SECT. 3.—AS TO PASSENGER TRAVELLING AT OWN RISK.

680. Liability for negligence excluded.]—Declaration, that pltf. was received by defts., a railway co., as a passenger to be safely carried on their railway on a journey from P. to C., & that defts. so negligently managed the railway & the traffic upon it that a collision took place, by which pltf. was injured. Plea, that pltf. was received as a passenger under an agreement that he should travel at his own risk. Replication, that it was by reason of gross & wilful negligence & mismanagement of defts. that the collision took place:—Held: the replication was bad, for the agreement stated in the plea must be taken to include the negligence mentioned in the replication.—MCCAWLEY v. FURNESS RY. CO. (1872), L. R. 8 Q. B. 57; 42 L. J. Q. B. 4; 27 L. T. 485; 37 J. P. 358; 21 W. R. 140.

681. Extent of risks included—Incidental risks —Access to & departure from train.]—Where a passenger travels on a railway at his own risk, the exemption from liability on the part of the railway co. extends, not only to the actual transit, but to risks incurred on the premises of the co. in coming to & going from the points to which the contract to carry applies.

A cattle drover so travelling had to alight at a siding, & in necessarily going to the station passed a dangerous place at which he met with an accident:—Held: he was not entitled to recover, although the jury found there had been negligence on defts.' part.—GALLIN v. LONDON & NORTH WESTERN RY. Validity against infant.]—An infant agreed in effect with a railway co., that the company should carry him at a reduced rate, that they should not be bound to take any care in so doing, & that they might be guilty of negligence towards him, &, however severely he might be injured in consequence, they should not be liable to make him any compensation:—Held: the agreement was to the detriment of the infant, & was not, therefore, binding on him.—FLOWER v. LONDON & NORTH WESTERN RY. An accident occurred upon defts.' line, through which personal injuries were received by pltf.:—Held: (1) pltf.'s election to travel free under the contract was an election to travel at his own risk; (2) such contract was valid; (3) pltf. was without remedy against defts. for negligence during the journey.—DUFF v. GREAT NORTHERN RY. 681 i. Extent of risks included— Incidental risk—Access to & departure from train.]—A condition of a free pass issued to pltf. relieved defts. from all liability in the event of disaster or injury to the holder, or damage to his property, however caused, while travelling on the railway by means of the pass. Pltf. was landed, at the end of the journey, on the arrival platform & was proceeding along it to go to another platform, when, owing to the negligence of one of the servants of defts., pltf. was injured:—Held: pltf. was a passenger on the free pass at the time & travelled at his own risk & could not recover damages for the injuries.—M'DONALD v. VICTORIAN RAILWAYS COMRS. 688. —— —— Whether sufficient notice given—Ticket consisting of book of coupons.]—Outside the cover of a paper book of coupons forming a railway ticket, issued to pltf. by defts., was printed the name of their railway, the words "Cheap return ticket, L. to P. & back, Second class," & a statement of the period & journey for which the ticket was available, but no reference to the inside of the cover. On the inside, & apparent on turning the leaf, was a condition limiting the responsibility of defts. to their own trains. Pltfs. having been injured while travelling by virtue of the ticket, in a French train, sued defts. They set up the condition. Pltf. had not read & did not know of it. The jury were directed that if it was brought to his notice it would afford a defence, &, on being asked whether what was done by the co. was reasonably sufficient to bring the condition to the notice of pltf., answered that it was not :—Held : the whole book was the contract accepted by pltf., & he could not reject the condition which was one of its terms, & judgment should be entered for defts.—BURKE v. SOUTH EASTERN RY. 689. —— —— ——.]—A. paid R. & Co. passage-money for a voyage on their steamer & received a folded ticket on which no writing was visible till it was opened. On the ticket was a condition that the co. would not be liable beyond $100 for injury to the passenger or his luggage. On an action by A. to recover damages exceeding $100 for personal injuries, the jury found that A. knew there was writing on the ticket, but did not know that it contained conditions as to the contract of carriage, & that the co. did not do what was reasonably sufficient to give A. notice of the conditions :—Held : there was evidence on which the jury could properly so find.—RICHARDSON, SPENCE & CO. & LORD GOUGH S.S. 690. —— —— ——.]—Pltf. having been injured by the negligence of defts. while travelling on their railway with a workman's ticket, defts. set up a condition on the back of the ticket that their liability should be limited to £100 in case of accident. The jury, in answer to the judge, found that pltf. knew that there was writing or printing on the back of the ticket ; that it contained conditions relating to the carrying contract ; & that defts. did what was reasonably sufficient to give purchasers of workmen's tickets notice of the conditions of the carrying contract ; & they assessed the damages at £100, the maximum allowed by the condition. Judgment accordingly.

PART V. SECT. 3, SUB-SECT. 5.

688 i. Conditions incorporated in ticket—Passenger unaware of—Whether sufficient notice given.]—The receipt by a passenger of a ticket on which conditions are printed does not, per se, furnish sufficient evidence that the passenger assents to the conditions thereon, & it is a question of fact for the jury to determine whether the delivery of a ticket to a passenger in such manner that he could see there was printing upon it was or was not reasonable notice that such printing contained conditions.—ROWE v. AUSTRALIAN UNITED STEAM NAVIGATION CO., LTD., [1909] St. R. Qd. 1.—AUS.

688 ii. —— —— ——.]—Issuing to the passenger a ticket with the conditions upon which it was issued plainly & distinctly printed upon the face of it, is in itself reasonably sufficient notice of such conditions ; & if, in the circumstances, he sees fit to put the ticket into his pocket without reading it, he has nothing to complain of except his own carelessness or indifference.—COOMBS v. R. (1896), 4 Exch. C. R. 321 ; 26 S. C. R. 13.—CAN.

688 iii. —— —— ——.]—A railway passenger took a ticket containing a printed condition which stated that, inasmuch as the holder was permitted to travel by a passenger carriage attached to a goods train, the ry. co. should be relieved from responsibility for any personal injury to him, consequent upon, or in any way arising from, such passenger carriage being attached to a goods train. In an action by the passenger for personal injuries, sustained by him while alighting from a carriage attached to a goods train :—Held : pltf. was bound by the condition, although in fact unaware of its terms.—JOHNSON v. GREAT SOUTHERN & WESTERN RY. 692. —— —— ——.]—Pltf. was a passenger on one of defts.' steamers for an evening cruise. The passengers took their tickets when on board, & on the face of the tickets were the words "at passengers own risk," & there were also conditions on the back. Pltf.'s hand was injured on board owing to the negligence of defts.' servants. The judge found that pltf. did not observe or read any notice upon the ticket, & that no reasonably sufficient notice was given to him that the ticket contained conditions:—Held: (1) the judge had put the proper questions to himself; (2) there was evidence to support his findings.—HOOPER v. FURNESS RY. CO. (1907), 23 T. L. R. 451; 51 Sol. Jo. 446, D. C.

693. —— —— ——.]—Pltf. booked by wire & paid for, a first class passage on one of defts.' steamships from H. to A., & on the day when the steamer was to sail she called at their office at H. for her ticket. One of defts.' clerks took a printed form of ticket, wrote in the necessary words, & handed her the completed ticket. The ticket which was headed "Passenger Contract," contained in print of ordinary size except as regards the written words, a statement that pltf. was entitled, "subject to the conditions hereof," to a berth in the steamship; while below on the face of the documents in small but clear print were the conditions which (inter alia) exempted defts. from responsibility to passengers for loss of luggage & for personal injuries or damage arising from neglect of their servants. During the voyage, owing to the captain's negligence, the steamer struck a mine which had been laid by the enemy & sank. In an action by pltf. against defts. for damages for not safely carrying pltf. & her luggage defts. relied upon the conditions on the ticket. Pltf. stated in evidence that she looked at the ticket, but only sufficiently to notice that it was partly in print & partly in writing, & that, as she alleged, it contained the name of a different steamer from that in which she was to sail; &, further, that she knew there were conditions on tickets, but not that there were in this case. The jury found, first, that pltf. was aware that there were generally conditions relating to contracts to travel, but that there was no evidence that she was aware that such conditions were on her ticket; secondly that defts. did not do what was reasonably sufficient to give pltf. notice of the conditions:—Held: assuming that the first of these findings was not against the weight of the evidence & might stand, the second finding was clearly against the weight of the evidence & could not stand, & judgment should be entered for defts.—COOKE v. WILSON (T.) 694. —— —— —— Conditions signed in presence of passenger.]—Resp., by arrangement with the owner of a horse, travelled in charge of it upon applts.' railway. The owner's representative, in the presence of resp., signed a "livestock special contract," in a form authorised by the Board of Railway Comrs. for Canada. This contract provided for the carriage of the horse & contained, upon its face, a condition relieving applts. from liability for death or injuries, even where caused by negligence, to a person permitted to travel with the horse at less than full fare. The document was handed to resp. in order, as he knew, to show that he was travelling with the horse, but neither he nor the owner's representative read the conditions. A half fare was charged for the conveyance of resp., &, together with the freight for the horse, was payable by the owner upon delivery. Across the face of the contract was printed in large red type "Read this special contract," & at the side was written (but not as part of the authorised form) "Pass man in charge half fare." Resp., having been injured during the journey by the negligence of applts., sued to recover damages:—Held: the true inference was that resp. accepted the document knowing that it contained a contract made on his behalf for his conveyance, & that he was bound by the condition on its face exempting applts. from liability.—GRAND TRUNK RY. CO. OF CANADA v. ROBINSON, [1915] A. C. 740; 84 L. J. P. C. 194; 113 L. T. 350; 31 T. L. R. 395, P. C.

695. —— —— ——.]—In answer to an action by a passenger against deft. co. for damages for personal injuries alleged to have been sustained through the negligence of the co.'s servants in the course of a voyage from N. to G. in a ship belonging to the co., defenders pleaded a condition in pursuer's ticket limiting their liability for injury to passengers to £10. The ticket was purchased at defender's N. office by one of pursuer's clerks, who, on payment of the passage money, received in exchange a ticket enclosed in an envelope, on the front of which was printed in capital letters a notice requesting the passenger to read the conditions of the enclosed contract. The ticket contained on its face a printed notice that it was issued subject to the conditions thereinafter set out (which included the condition in question) & at the foot a printed request to the passenger to read carefully the above contract. Neither the pursuer nor his clerk was aware of the conditions:—Held: defenders had taken all reasonable steps to bring to the knowledge of pursuer the existence of the conditions & he was bound by them.—HOOD v. ANCHOR LINE (HENDERSON BROTHERS), [1918]

A pass at less than full fare was issued to deceased, who placed his signature below conditions printed thereon. 698. Liability of issuing company.]—B. took a ticket from W. to C. from the W. J. Ry. Co. In order to arrive at the platform at the station at M. the trains pass over the line of the M. & C. Ry. On that line was a self-acting switch used for shunting carriages into a siding. The switch & siding were the property of the M. & C. Ry. Co., but used exclusively by the W. J. Ry. Co. The switch was about four yards from a gate which was on the line of the W. J. Ry. Co., a servant of which co. was in the habit of occasionally looking over the gate to see that the switch was in proper order. It was proved that all switches are liable to get out of order. A train of the W. J. Ry. coming slowly up to the station, in consequence of the points being turned the wrong way, ran into the siding & came in collision with some coal trucks, whereby B. was killed :—Held : (1) the question whether there was negligence on the part of the W. J. Ry. Co. was properly left to the jury; (2) there was evidence of such negligence; (3) upon a finding by the jury of negligence on the part of the W. J. Ry. Co., over the line of that co. Defts. & the S. Co. divided the profits of the traffic between H. & R. Pltf. took a return ticket from R. to H., which was issued to him by a clerk of the S. Co. Upon the return journey from H. to R. he travelled in a train belonging to defts. & driven by their servants. Owing to the carriage being unsuited to the platform at R. which belonged to the S. Co. pltf. sustained bodily injury :—Held : an action lay against defts., for they, having permitted pltf. to travel by their train, were bound to make provision for his safety.—FOULKES v. METROPOLITAN DISTRICT RY. 706 i. Condition restricting liability—Whether non-issuing company protected—Passenger at own risk.]—A contract was made by a ry. co. for carriage of cattle to a point on the line of a connecting ry. co. at a fixed rate for the whole journey. The contract provided that the shipper, or his drover, should accompany the cattle; & that the person in charge should be entitled to a "free pass," but only "on the express condition that the ry. co. were not responsible for negligence, default, or misconduct of any kind on the part of the co. or their servants" :—Held : the condition could be taken advantage of by the connecting ry. co., who were not liable to the shipper for injuries suffered by him in a collision caused by their servants' negligence.—BICKNELL v. GRAND TRUNK RY. 713. ——— Out-of-pocket expenses—& deposit already paid.]—Pltf., who resided in Ireland, having applied to defts., emigration agents in L., respecting a passage for himself & family on board their ships to A., received in answer a letter in which they agreed to convey him & his family for £65. This letter was written on the fly-sheet of a printed circular, headed "Emigration to A.," & which (inter alia) stated that ships would be despatched on the appointed days, wind & weather permitting, for which written guarantees would be given. Then followed a list of ships, amongst which the X. was named as to sail from L. on Aug. 15, & from P. on the 25th. In another part of the circular it was stated that passengers from Ireland could readily join at P., a deposit of one-half the passage-money to be paid at the time the berths were engaged, the balance to be paid prior to granting the embarkation order. Pltf. engaged a berth on board X. & paid defts. £32 10*s.* as a deposit, but no written guarantee was given. The X. did not arrive at P. until Sept. 3, although not prevented by wind or weather. Pltf.'s berth was kept vacant from L. to P.:—Held: the statement in the circular was not a mere representation, but a warranty that the X. would sail on the days appointed, &, as she did not, pltf. was justified in taking a passage on board another vessel, & was entitled to recover from defts. the amount of the deposit, & the expenses he had been put to by the delay at P.—CRANSTON v. MARSHALL (1850), 5 Exch. 395; 19 L. In consequence of the delay, he failed to keep appointments with his customers, & was detained for many days:—Held: though he would have been entitled to have performed the contract at the expense of the railway co., yet, not having done so, he was not entitled to recover anything more than nominal damages in addition to the 1*s.* 4*d.*, & perhaps the cost of his bed, &c., at G.—HAMLIN v. GREAT NORTHERN RY. 720. Personal injuries—Loss of profits from business or profession—Passenger resuming business too soon.]—It is not sufficient ground for disturbing a verdict for heavy damages given by a jury for injury sustained in a collision upon a railway, that pltf., who had been advised by medical men to abstain entirely from business for a considerable time, did not act upon such advice (though, if he had, the evidence was that he would permanently recover), but resumed his business shortly after the accident, even though the effect might be to render permanent an ailment which otherwise would have been only temporary. The question of damages is entirely within the province of the jury, and the ct. will not in such a case interfere with their finding upon it.—SAUNDERS v. LONDON & NORTH WESTERN RY. CO. (1860), 2 L. T. 153.

721. ——— ———.]—The declaration in an action for negligence, after alleging that pltf. was hurt while being carried as a passenger by defts., concluded by stating as damage that she was greatly hurt, maimed, wounded, & permanently injured. Pltf. was accustomed to the management of a restaurant, & the judge directed the jury in assessing the damages to ask themselves, "what salary would a lady of experience in the trade be able to command for managing a public house in London, at a fair salary?":—Held: the question was justified by the form of the count, although no special damage was laid.—POTTER v. METROPOLITAN RY. 722. ——— ———.]—C., a passenger upon defts.' railway, met with an accident through their default, which occasioned him bodily harm; he was in consequence unable to attend to his business of a bootmaker, which became less profitable to him, & he incurred medical expenses in endeavouring to cure his bodily injuries. C. died of a disease unconnected with the accident. Pltf., as his extrix., sued to recover compensation for the sums expended in medical attendance, & for the loss of profit arising from C.'s inability to attend to his business. The declaration was framed upon a contract between C. & defts., & alleged that by breach of it his personal estate was lessened in value. At the trial the jury found a verdict for pltf. for £200, of which £160 was given for the loss sustained in C.'s business, & £40 for

v. General rule.] — In actions against carriers of passengers for injuries, there seem to be no well-defined rules for estimating damages; it is a matter to be submitted to the sound discretion & judgment of the jury; the actual loss to pltf., present & prospective, being the lowest amount which they are justified in giving; & the ct. will not set aside an assessment of damages by a jury where there is no evidence to show misconduct of the jury, or that they acted upon a wrong principle, or from a corrupt motive.—BLANCHARD v. WINDSOR & ANNAPOLIS RY. CO. (1875), 1 R. & C. 8.—CAN.

the medical expenses :—Held : (1) the action was maintainable ; the right to sue in respect of the breach of contract survived to the extrix., the maxim, "Actio personalis moritur cum persond," did not apply, and none of the provisions in Fatal Accidents Act, 1846 (c. 93), took away the cause of action ; (2) the damages given in respect of the loss of profit in C.'s business were not too remote.—BRADSHAW v. LANCASHIRE & YORKSHIRE RY. 723. —— —— Physician in big practice.]—In an action against a railway co. for personal injury to a passenger, a physician, making £5000 a year, & with an increasing practice, the jury in assessing the damages may take into their consideration, besides the pain & suffering of pltf., & the expense incurred by him for medical & other necessary attendance, the loss he has sustained through his inability to continue a lucrative professional practice.—PHILLIPS v. LONDON & SOUTH WESTERN RY. CO. (1879), 5 C. P. D. 280 ; 49 L. J. Q. B. 233 ; 42 L. T. 6 ; 44 J. P. 217, C. A.

724. —— ——.]—(1) The rule laid down in Praed v. Graham ((1889), 24 Q. B. D. 53), that a new trial will not be granted on the ground of excessive damages unless, having regard to all the circumstances of the case, the ct. is of opinion that the amount is so large that no twelve men could reasonably have given it, must be construed in the light of other decisions of the Ct. of Appeal, e.g., Phillips v. London & South Western Ry. Co. (No. 723, ante), the effect of which is that a verdict may be set aside & a new trial granted if the ct., without imputing perversity to the jury, comes to the conclusion, from the amount of the damages & the other circumstances, that the jury must have taken into consideration matters which they ought not to have considered, or applied a wrong measure of damages.

(2) In awarding damages for a prospective loss of income from professional or other earnings, the jury ought not to give pltf. such a sum as, if invested, would produce the full amount of income which he would probably have earned, but ought in estimating the damages to take into account the accidents of life & other matters, & to give pltf. what they consider in all the circumstances a fair compensation for his loss.—JOHNSTON v. GREAT WESTERN RY. 726. Wrongful removal—From ship—Passenger put ashore at intermediate port.]—A declaration in assumpsit on an agreement to carry pltf. in a ship to a particular place, alleged as a breach, that defts., by their agent, caused him to be disembarked at an intermediate point, &, by their agent, caused the disembarkation to be conducted in a scandalous, disgraceful, & improper manner, whereby, & also by contemptuous usage & insulting language addressed to pltf. by the agent in effecting the disembarkation, pltf. sustained damage :—Held : (1) the declaration was good on motion in arrest of judgment ; (2) the judge had rightly received evidence of the language of the captain of defts.' ship in putting pltf. on shore, in which he described pltf. as being a pick-pocket, & belonging to the "swell mob" ; (3) the judge had rightly directed the jury that defts. were responsible for any injury naturally resulting from the acts of the captain, when acting as their servant, & that pltf. was entitled to fair compensation for the injury done to him in being put on shore at the intermediate place, so far as the injury arose from the act of the captain in putting him on shore.

(4) Semble : supposing pltf. had been a pick-pocket, or belonged to the "swell mob," it would be no excuse for turning him out of a ship in which he had paid his passage, so long as he was not guilty of any impropriety on board.—COPPIN v. BRAITHWAITE (1844), 8 Jur. 875.

727. —— Train—Loss of race-glasses.]—Pltf. was travelling with other passengers in a carriage of a railway co., & on the tickets being collected there was found to be a ticket short. Pltf. was charged by the collector with being the defaulter, & on his refusing to pay the fare or leave the carriage he was removed from the carriage by the officers of the co. without any unnecessary violence. It turned out that pltf. had a ticket. He brought an action for the assault against the co. laying as special damage the loss of a pair of race-glasses which he had left behind in the carriage when he was removed. There was also a count in trover ; but there was no evidence that the glasses had come to the possession of any of the co.'s servants :—Held : pltf. could not recover for the loss of the glasses.—GLOVER v. LONDON & SOUTH WESTERN RY. 732. —— What amounts to—Purchase of non-transferable ticket.]—Resp. travelled with half of a tourist return ticket over the latter part of the route covered by that half. The ticket had been taken by another person who had used it over the first portion of the route, & had then sold it to resp. for a trifling sum. Upon the ticket were printed the words "not transferable" :—Held : resp. was liable to be convicted under Railways Clauses Consolidation Act, 1845 (c. 20), s. 103, of travelling without having previously paid his fare, & with intent to avoid payment thereof.—LANGDON v. HOWELLS (1879), 4 Q. 735. —— —— —— Demand of excess fare.]—Resps. were summoned before a metropolitan police magistrate, under Regulation of Railways Act, 1889, s. 5 (3) (a), for travelling without having previously paid their fare, & with intent to avoid payment thereof. They had travelled in a first-class carriage with second-class tickets. Evidence having been given that the excess fare had been demanded, the magistrate at once dismissed the summons, on the ground that resps., having been asked to pay the excess fare, could not be proceeded against criminally :—Held : the ground on which the magistrate had dismissed the summons was wrong in point of law, & the case must be remitted to him for further consideration.—NOBLE v. KILLICK (1891), 60 L. 736. —— Power of arrest.]—The power given to railway cos. by Railways Clauses Consolidation Act, 1845, ss. 103, 104, to arrest passengers for travelling without having paid the proper fare with intent to avoid payment thereof was determined by Regulation of Railways Act, 1889, the code contained in ss. 103, 104 of the former Act with regard to that offence being replaced by the code contained in the latter Act, s. 5, under which there is only a power of arrest if a passenger refuses to give his name & address after having failed to produce a ticket & to pay his fare.

Pltf. was the holder of a first-class season ticket between certain stations upon defts.' railway. Upon pltf.'s arrival at a station at which the ticket was available, after he had passed the ticket barrier & had shown his ticket to a ticket collector but before he had reached the exit from the station, a porter in the employment of defts. took him by the arm & in the presence of other persons charged him with having travelled first class with a third-class ticket :—Held : as defts. had no power to arrest pltf. for the offence with which the porter charged him, they could not be taken to have impliedly authorised the porter to arrest him.—ORMISTON v. GREAT WESTERN RY. SUB-SECT. 2.—UNDER BYE-LAWS.

A. Of Railway Companies.

741. Entering carriage without previously paying fare—Alighting at intermediate station.]—A railway co. was authorised by statute to impose fares within certain amounts for conveyance on their line, & to make bye-laws. By a bye-law it was declared that any passenger who should enter a carriage without having paid his fare was subjected to a penalty. The co. imposed a fare of 5*s.* for conveyance from C. to N., & of 7*s.* for conveyance from C. to D. D. was a place between C. & N. Both fares were within the limits prescribed by the Act. A person took, at C., a ticket from C. to N., intending to stop at D., paid for it 5*s.*, got into a carriage at C., & quitted it at D. He refused, when called upon at D. to do so, to pay the difference of 2*s.* He was convicted of having entered the carriage without having previously paid his fare, contrary to the bye-law:—Held: a bad conviction, inasmuch as applt. had paid the fare within the language of the bye-law.—R. v. FRERE (1855), 4 E. & B. 598; 24 L. 743. Failure to produce ticket—Power to detain—For purpose of demanding fare.]—By a bye-law of a railway co. any passenger not producing or delivering up his ticket would be required to pay the fare from the most distant place, &c., & was to forfeit & pay a sum of 40*s.*:—Held: the co. were not justified in detaining a passenger for the purpose of making the demand.—TALMAGE v. LONDON & SOUTH WESTERN RY. 744. —— By season ticket holder.]—A bye-law of a railway co. provided that each passenger booking his place would be furnished with a ticket, which he was to show & deliver up when required to the guard, &c.; each passenger not producing or delivering up his ticket when required was subjected to a penalty not exceeding 40*s.*:—Held: under the bye-law holders of annual tickets for travelling on the line were bound to produce their tickets to the railway officers as much as ordinary passengers.—WOODARD v. EASTERN COUNTIES RY. 745. —— By servant—Bought & kept by master—Assent of company.]—A master took tickets for himself & three servants, keeping the tickets in his own care, but telling the guard that he had the servants' tickets, & the servants were allowed to enter the train without each having or showing his own ticket:—Held: by so doing the co. were estopped from pleading, as a defence to an action by the master against the co. for afterwards expelling the servants from the train & refusing to carry them, a bye-law that no passenger would be allowed to enter any carriage or travel therein without having paid his fare & obtained a ticket . . . which ticket such passenger was to show when required by the guard, & to deliver up before leaving the co.'s premises.—JENNINGS v. GREAT NORTHERN RY. 746. —— Liability to pay whole fare on default—Demand of fare necessary—Before bye-law enforceable.]—One of the bye-laws of a railway co. provided that any passenger travelling without a ticket, or failing or refusing to show or deliver up his ticket, would be liable to pay the fare from the station whence the train originally started:—Held: (1) before the bye-law could be enforced by the co., a demand must have been made for the amount of the fare at the time the offence was committed.

(2) Semble: such a bye-law is not void for uncertainty.

(3) Semble: the fare to be so paid is in the nature of a penalty or forfeiture.—BROWN v. GREAT EASTERN RY. CO. (1877), 2 Q. B. D. 406; 46 L. J. M. C. 231; 36 L. T. 767; 41 J. P. 567; 25 W. R. 792, D. C.

747. Publication—What is sufficient.]—A bye-law imposed a penalty not exceeding 40*s.* upon a passenger getting into or out of a carriage whilst in motion. Upon a summons before justices for a breach of this bye-law:—Held: to prove publication of the bye-law, under Railways Clauses Consolidation Act, 1845 (c. 20), ss. 110, 111, it was sufficient to show that the bye-laws were affixed at the stations at which the party entered & quitted the train, without showing publication at every station on the line.—MOTTERAM v. EASTERN COUNTIES RY. 748. Validity—Bye-law making offence punishable without fraud—Travelling without ticket—Fare from furthest station.]—By a bye-law of a railway co. no passenger was to be allowed to enter or travel in a carriage without having paid his fare & obtained a ticket, which the passenger was to show whenever required, & give up on demand before leaving the co.'s premises. Any passenger not so producing or delivering up his ticket was to be required to pay the fare from the place whence the train originally started, or forfeit a sum not exceeding 40*s.* :—Held : this bye-law only applied to the case of a person having & wilfully refusing to produce or give up his ticket, & not to the case of a person travelling without having paid for & obtained a ticket, with no intention to defraud the co.; if the bye-law extended to the latter case, it would have been illegal & void under Railways Clauses Consolidation Act, 1845, s. 109, as repugnant to s. 103, which makes a fraudulent intention the gist of the offence of travelling without having paid the fare.—DEARDEN v. TOWNSEND (1865), L. 749. —— —— —— ——.]—Pltfs., a railway co., made, under Railways Clauses Consolidation Act, 1845, ss. 108, 109, a bye-law that any passenger travelling without a ticket would be required to pay the fare from the station whence the train originally started to the end of his journey. Deft., without any intent to defraud, travelled on pltfs.' railway from N. to L. without a ticket, & in a train which had originally started from C. On his arrival deft. tendered the fare for the distance he had actually travelled, but this was refused by pltfs.' servants, who demanded the whole fare from C. Deft. having subsequently paid pltfs. the fare from N. to L., they sued him to recover the difference between the sum so paid, & the amount of the whole fare from C. to L. :—Held : (1) pltfs. were not entitled to maintain their action, because the excess fare was claimed, not as a penalty which would be recoverable only before two justices under Railways Clauses Consolidation Act, 1845, ss. 145, 150, but as a debt, & the Act gave pltfs. no power to create such a debt.

(2) The bye-law was repugnant to the provisions of the Act, because the Act only authorised the exacting of an additional sum from a passenger whose conduct had been fraudulent (BRETT, L. J.). —LONDON & BRIGHTON RY. CO. v. WATSON (1879), 4 C. P. D. 118; 27 W. R. 614; sub nom. LONDON, BRIGHTON & SOUTH COAST RY. CO. v. WATSON, 48 L. J. Q. B. 316; 40 L. T. 183; 43 J. P. 301, C. A.

750. —— —— Travelling in superior class—Fare from furthest station.]—A bye-law of a railway company provided that a person travelling in a carriage of a superior class to that for which his ticket was issued should be subject to a penalty not exceeding 40*s.*, & should, in addition, be liable to pay his fare according to the class of carriage in which he was travelling from the station whence the train originally started, unless he showed that he had no intention to defraud. Applt. was convicted of this offence, & fined 10*s.* & costs, although he showed to the satisfaction of the justices that he had no intention to defraud :—Held : unless the proviso at the end applied to the whole, the bye-law was inconsistent with Railways Clauses Consolidation Act, 1845, s. 103, & bad; & the conviction could not be sustained.—BENTHAM v. HOYLE (1878), 3 Q. 751. —— —— —— Unreasonableness.]—By a bye-law under Railways Clauses Consolidation Act, 1845, any person travelling, without the special permission of some duly authorised servant of the co., in a carriage or by a train of a superior class, to that for which his ticket was issued, was subjected to a penalty not exceeding 40*s.*, & was, in addition, liable to pay his fare, according to the class of carriage in which he was travelling, from the station where the train originally started, unless he showed that he had no intention to defraud. Applt. was convicted in a penalty of 10*s.* under this bye-law for travelling in a first-class carriage with a second-class ticket, & it was found as a fact that he did so with the intention of defrauding the co. :—Held : (1) the bye-law taken as a whole was void, on the ground that the penalty imposed by the latter part was unreasonable; (2) the bye-law was divisible, but the conviction could not be upheld, for the first part of the bye-law which alone was applicable to the case, omitted the intention to defraud required by s. 103 of the Act, to constitute the offence, & was repugnant to the Act & invalid.—DYSON v. LONDON & NORTH WESTERN RY. CO. (1881), 7 Q. B. D. 32; 50 L. J. M. C. 78; 44 L. T. 609; 45 J. P. 650; 29 W. R. 565, D. C.

752. —— —— Failure to produce ticket—Unreasonableness.]—A bye-law of resp. co. provided that a passenger should show & deliver up his ticket to any duly authorised servant of the co. whenever required to do so for any purpose, & that any person travelling without a ticket, or failing or refusing so to show or deliver up his ticket should be required to pay the fare from the station whence the train originally started to the end of his journey. Applt. had a ticket entitling him to travel on the lines of resps. and the L. Co. from X. or C. to W. & back. Having come to J. station on resps.' line, where he had to change trains, he had for this purpose to go from resps.' station to that of the L. Co. On passing out of resps.' station he was asked to show his ticket but refused to do so. There was no intention to defraud on applt.'s part. Resps. summoned him under the above bye-law, & he was convicted in the amount of the fare from the station whence resps.' train by which he travelled had started :—Held : the conviction must be quashed.

(1) Assuming that the power given by Railways Clauses Consolidation Act, s. 108, to make bye-laws for regulating the travelling upon or using & working the railway, applied to persons travelling in the co.'s carriages, which he was inclined to think it did not, it was not competent to the co. by their bye-law to make the refusal to show the ticket an offence in the absence of a fraudulent intention; (2) the bye-law was void for unreasonableness, because the penalties thereunder for offences of equal criminality would vary with the distances from which the train might originally have started; (3) the bye-law was inapplicable to the case, as the power to make bye-laws was confined to the case of persons travelling on the railway, which applt. was not doing when required to show his ticket (COCKBURN, C.J.).

The bye-law was void for unreasonableness, because (4) the penalty for not showing the ticket varied according to the distance the train had travelled, & also because (5) the passenger was required not only to show but to deliver up his ticket whenever required for any purpose (LUSH, J.).—SAUNDERS v. SOUTH EASTERN RY. A passenger having paid the fare & received a ticket inadvertently lost it, & was thus unable to deliver it up when required. A passenger, having paid the fare & received a ticket, refused to show it to an inspector of the co. & was summoned for breach of the bye-law:—Held: the bye-law was not unreasonable, & the passenger ought to have been convicted.—LOWE v. VOLP, [1896] 1 Q. Resp., on entering the car, paid his fare & received a ticket. In the course of the journey he lost it. On being asked to produce his ticket by the inspector he was unable to do so, though the conductor admitted he had paid for & received one. Resp. was then asked to produce his ticket, or pay the fare or leave the car, but failed to comply with any of these requests. He was summoned for a breach of the bye-law:—Held: the bye-law was reasonable, & resp. had infringed it.—HUNT v. GREEN (1906), 96 L. T. 23; 71 J. P. 18; 23 T. L. R. 19; 21 Cox, C. C. 333; 5 L. G. Applt., accompanied by his nephew, took two tickets to N., the fare being 5*d.*, & requested the conductor to set him down at Q. Hotel, which is a place where cars stop on request. The conductor forgot to stop & applt. was carried 200 or 250 yards past his destination. Applt. did not leave the car, & on being spoken to said he was going to remain on the car as a protest, & afterwards that he was going to the office of the co. to lodge a complaint. He refused to pay the extra fare after passing N. or to give his name & address, which he said he would only give to the manager. An inspector accompanied applt. to the office, where he gave his name & address and lodged his complaint. He was summoned for refusing to pay the excess fare under a bye-law which provided that each passenger should upon demand pay to the conductor or other duly authorised officer of the co., the fare legally demandable for the journey: Held: the bye-law was good, & applt. could be convicted, though there was no intention to defraud.—TUFFLEY v. TATE (1906), 96 L. Failure to produce ticket—Passenger paying fare but refusing to accept ticket—Refusal to pick up ticket.]—Applt., a passenger on one of the trams owned by the Corpn. of S., paid his fare, but refused to accept the ticket on account of a condition printed on the back of it, limiting the liability of the corpn. in case of an accident to the passenger. The conductor appeared to have thought that applt. took the ticket, but between them it fell to the floor. Later on an inspector asked applt. for his ticket, who pointed it out to him lying on the floor, but refused to take it up or deliver it up to the inspector. Applt. was summoned for contravention of a bye-law, which provided that each passenger when tickets were issued should as and when requested to do so show his ticket to the conductor or other servant of the corpn. acting in the performance of his duty deliver up his ticket or, in case of failure to produce such ticket, pay the fare legally demandable for the distance travelled over by such passenger:—Held: applt. had not been guilty of any offence under the bye-law.—WILSON v. FEARNLEY (1905), 92 L. 763. Obstruction of carriers' servants—Riding outside omnibus—Contrary to regulation.]—The E. Corpn., who had statutory authority to run motor omnibuses, made a regulation prohibiting on one section of a particular route passengers riding on the top of the omnibuses. The regulation was made for the safety of the passengers in view of the camber of the road, & notice thereof was exhibited on top of the omnibuses, but attention was not drawn thereto on passengers' tickets. Applt., who had previous knowledge of the regulation, was an outside passenger on the particular route & had paid the fare entitling him to travel over the section to which the regulation applied. When the omnibus reached the beginning of that section he refused to come down from the top although his attention was again called to the notice by the conductor & an inspector, applt. stating that he had got his ticket & intended riding on the top to the terminus. The inspector declined to allow the omnibus to proceed while applt. remained on the top, & it was thereby delayed 20 minutes. Applt. having been convicted of the breach of the corpn.'s bye-law which provided that no passenger or other person should wilfully obstruct or impede any officer or servant of the council in the execution of his duty upon or in connection with any motor omnibus:—Held: (1) applt. was not entitled to be carried on the top of the omnibus on the part of the route to which the regulation applied inasmuch as the corpn. had not, in respect of that part of the route, held themselves out as common carriers of passengers on the top of their omnibuses, or contracted to carry applt. on the top of the omnibus; (2) applt.'s conduct amounted to wilful obstruction of the conductor & inspector within the bye-law, & the conviction was right.—BAKER v. ELLISON, [1914] 2 K. 764. Removal—For misconduct—Unnecessary violence used.]—The conductor of deft.'s omnibus had, as part of his general employment, authority from deft. to remove from it passengers who misconducted themselves. Pltf., who had been drinking, having got into the omnibus, the conductor deeming him an improper person to remain in it, carelessly & with unnecessary violence dragged pltf. out & threw him on the ground, & thereby inflicted on pltf. a serious injury:—Held: deft. was responsible for the act of his servant, the conductor.—SEYMOUR v. GREENWOOD (1861), 7 H. & N. 355; 158 E. 765. —— From wrong train—Porter acting in mistake.]—Pltf., a passenger on defts.' line of railway, sustained injuries in consequence of being violently pulled out of a railway carriage, just after the train had started, by one of defts.' porters, who acted under an erroneous impression that pltf. was not in the right train for the place to which he had booked. Defts.' rules, a copy of which was given to each porter in their employ, assigned various specific duties to the porters, among others, that of not suffering passengers to get in or out of trains in motion, & concluded with a general direction that they were to do all in their power to promote the comfort of the passengers & the interests of the co. It was proved to be the duty of the porters to prevent passengers going by wrong trains, as far as they could do so, but it was not their duty to remove passengers from the wrong train or carriage:—Held: there was evidence on which the jury might find that the act of the porter in pulling pltf. out of the carriage was an act done within the course of his employment as defts.' servant, & one for which they were therefore responsible.—BAYLEY v. MANCHESTER, SHEFFIELD, & LINCOLNSHIRE RY.

766. —— For refusing to pay fare—On failure to produce ticket — Ticket lost.] — Pltf. was a passenger by defts.' railway. The ticket issued to him incorporated by reference certain conditions published in defts.' time-tables, one of which was that every passenger should show & deliver up his ticket to any duly authorised servant of the co., when required to do so for any purpose, & any passenger travelling without a ticket, or failing, or refusing so to show or deliver up such ticket, should be required to pay the fare from the station whence the train originally started. Pltf. having lost the ticket was unable to produce it when required to do so during the journey by one of defts.' servants. Pltf. was thereupon required to pay the fare from the station whence the train started, &, on his declining to do so, was forcibly removed by defts.' servants from the carriage in which he was travelling, no more force, however, being used than was necessary for his removal. He thereupon sued defts. for assault:—Held: the contract between pltf. & defts. did not by implication authorise defts. to remove pltf. from the carriage on his failing to produce a ticket & refusing to pay the fare as provided by the condition; defts. were not justified in so removing him; & the action was maintainable.—BUTLER v. MANCHESTER, SHEFFIELD & LINCOLNSHIRE RY. 767. —— —— Improper conduct of carriers' servant—Carriers liable.]—The car of deft. tramway co. was crowded, & pltf., a passenger, was obliged to stand. The conductor had, by the bye-laws of the co., power to collect the fares, which were payable on demand, & to prevent people travelling without paying them. The conductor asked pltf. for his fare, but, as pltf. was unable to get to his pocket, as he subsequently alleged, owing to the crowd, he asked the conductor to wait a little. The conductor thereupon said:—"None of your nonsense," & took him by the collar & pushed him off the car. Pltf. fell & sustained injuries:—Held: an action lay against the co. in respect of the assault & injuries.—SMITH v. NORTH METROPOLITAN TRAMWAYS CO. (1891), 55 J. P. 630; 7 T. L. R. 459, C. A.

768. —— For travelling without paying proper fare — Porter acting in mistake.] — There is an implied authority by a railway co. to its servants to remove passengers from carriages in which they are misconducting themselves, or travelling without having paid the proper fare. A railway co., however, is liable for the acts of its servants, if in pursuance of such authority, but under a misapprehension, they eject a passenger who has neither misconducted himself nor travelled improperly.—LOWE v. GREAT NORTHERN RY. 769. —— Whether in performance of powers—Or actuated by malice—Question for jury.]—Whether the conductor of a tramcar, who removed a passenger from the car, was acting in the supposed exercise of his powers under bye-laws, or was actuated by personal malice in consequence of something which had passed between him & the passenger, is a question which should be left to the jury, & the judge at the trial is not justified in withdrawing the case from them on the ground that there was no evidence which could make the conductor's principals liable in an action for damages for assault brought against them by the passenger.—HUTCHINS v. LONDON COUNTY COUNCIL (1915), 85 L. 766 i. —— For refusing to pay fare—On failure to produce ticket—Ticket lost.]—Pltf. lost his ticket before an intermediate station between the stations of departure & destination & when the conductor demanded the fare informed him of these facts, of which he had no other knowledge. He insisted nevertheless upon payment to him, & on refusal obliged pltf. to leave the cars at the intermediate station. In so doing he was obeying the regulations of the co., which were authorised by their charter:—Held: he was justified, & the co. not liable.—DUKE v. GREAT WESTERN RY. Co. (1857), 14 U. C. Pltf. at last tendered his fare:—Held: the pltf. had refused to pay his fare & the conductor was justified in what he did.—FULTON v. GRAND TRUNK RY. Co. (1859), 17 U. C. R. 428.—CAN.

Pltf. then took a ticket, proceeded to B., & returning thence by train at the time appointed arrived at C., where the train stopped. C. station was used by defts. & by other railway cos. A railway servant, who had charge of the train, took pltf.'s ticket, & informing him that he ought not to have gone by that train, demanded 2*s.* 6*d.* more. Payment being refused, the railway servant & the superintendent took pltf. into custody. Pltf.'s attorney having written to the secretary of deft. co., asking for compensation, received an answer from the secretary, requesting that he might be furnished with the date of the transaction & promising to make inquiries. The secretary also stated verbally that it was an awkward business, that the blame would fall upon the station clerk at M. station, who gave pltf. the false information, & he also offered to return the 2*s.* 6*d.* :—Held : (1) there being no proof of defts. having the power of arresting pltf. there was no evidence of their having expressly or impliedly authorised or ratified the arrest made by the railway servant, & therefore they were not liable for his tortious act.

775. —— ——.]—Action against a railway co. for giving the plaintiff into custody, & causing him to be taken before a magistrate, on a charge of travelling in a carriage of the co. without having paid his fare, & with intent to avoid payment thereof. Plea, not guilty.

Pltf., being in L. took a return ticket by defts.' railway to W. & back to L., available from Saturday to Monday; on arriving at home at W. he placed the half ticket on the chimney piece. On the preceding Thursday his wife's sister had come with a return ticket available that day, & had placed the half of her ticket on the same chimney piece; having stayed over the night she went away leaving it there. On the Monday pltf. took by mistake his sister-in-law's half ticket. On his arrival at the station at L. he gave up this ticket; & being told by the collector of tickets that he had got a wrong ticket, he mentioned at what hour he got it on Saturday. He went with the collector to the ticket office, & hearing that the ticket which he had given up had been issued on Thursday, he explained the mistake, & gave his address. He then went with the collector to the inspector of police in the station, & they went to the superintendent of the line. Pltf. asked them to send to the station master at W., who knew him. The superintendent of the line said, "I think you had better take him, but first you had better obtain the concurrence of the secretary." Pltf., being asked whether he would pay the fare, said he had not enough, but offered to leave a few tools which he had. The police inspector then went away, & on returning said to a police constable, "Take this man to P. S. station, & charge him with having travelled in a second-class carriage without having paid his fare." Pltf. was accordingly taken to the station, & before a magistrate; the charge was made, & defts.' servants gave evidence. In the result he was discharged. When pltf.'s attorney applied to the co. for compensation, a letter was written in answer by the secretary, in which he did not state that the persons apprehending pltf. acted on their own responsibility. The police constable & the police inspector were employed & paid by defts. :—Held : there was evidence on which the jury might properly find that the imprisonment was the act of some person acting within the scope of an authority conferred on him by defts., inasmuch as it was a reasonable inference that for the conduct of their business the co. had on the spot officers with authority to determine, without the delay attending on convening the directors, whether the servants of the co. should or should not on its behalf apprehend a person accused of this offence, & there was evidence to go to the jury that the superintendent of the line was an officer having such authority from the co.—GOFF v. GREAT NORTHERN RY. Part VI.—Carriage of Passengers' Luggage.

SECT. 1.—DUTY TO RECEIVE AND CARRY.

784. Extent of duty—Amount allowed—Husband & wife travelling together.]—(1) A carrier of passengers for hire is, at common law, only bound to carry their personal luggage; if a passenger has merchandise among his personal luggage, or so packed that the carrier has no notice that it is merchandise, he is not responsible for its loss. If the merchandise is carried openly, or so packed that its nature is obvious, & the carrier does not object to it, he will be liable.

(2) Under Railway Regulation Act, 1844 (c. 85), s. 6, a husband & wife travelling together are entitled to carry 1 cwt. of luggage.

(3) The luggage of a passenger by railway, though never delivered to any servant of the co., but kept by the passenger during the journey, is, nevertheless, in point of law, in the custody of the co., so as to render them responsible for its loss.—GREAT NORTHERN RY. CO. v. SHEPHERD (1852), 8 Exch. 30; 7 Ry. & Can. Cas. 310; 21 L. J. Ex. 286; 155 E. R. 1246; sub nom. SHEPHERD v. GREAT NORTHERN RY. CO., 19 L. T. O. S. 324.

785. —— Refusal to label loose articles.]—A railway Act enacted, that, without extra charge, it should be lawful for every passenger travelling upon or along the railway to take with him his articles of clothing, not exceeding 40 lbs. in weight & four cubic feet in dimensions; & that the co. should in no case be in any way liable or responsible for the safe carriage or custody of, or for any loss of or injury to any articles, matters, or things whatsoever carried upon or along the railway with or accompanying the person of or belonging to any passenger, or delivered for the purpose of being carried, other than & except such passenger's articles of clothing not exceeding the weight & dimensions aforesaid. Pursuant to the powers conferred upon them by the Act, the co. made certain rules & regulations as to passengers' luggage; amongst others, one requiring it to be labelled, & declaring that they would not be responsible for the loss or detention of articles not labelled & properly addressed, & another declaring that all unclaimed property found on their premises or in their carriages should be deposited in a place called the lost property office, & restored to the owner on payment of a fee of 6*d.* for each article. In addition to these regulations, the co. gave private instructions to their servants, to the effect that no small articles, such as rugs, coats, umbrellas, sticks, caps, or small paper parcels, nor bundles of rugs, coats, & wrappers strapped together, are to be labelled or placed in the luggage-van: the passengers must take charge of such articles themselves, or send them as booked parcels. Pltf., a passenger upon the railway, required one of the co.'s porters to label & place in the luggage-van a package (within the stipulated weight and dimensions) consisting of articles of wearing apparel, & wrapped in a shawl fastened with a strap, & properly addressed. The porter refused to label the package, & insisted upon placing it in the carriage with pltf. Pltf. declined to allow this, unless it was to be at the co.'s risk. The package was left behind, & was afterwards taken to the lost property office, where it was detained, & 6*d.* demanded for its restoration:—Held: the co. were not justified in refusing to carry the package at their own risk, & were responsible for its detention.

Semble: if the co. had been justified in refusing to carry the parcel, they might have been justified in taking it to the lost property office.—MUNSTER v. SOUTH EASTERN RY. CO. (1858), 4 C. B. N. S. 676; 27 L. J. C. P. 308; 31 L. T. O. S. 200; 4 Jur. N. S. 738; 140 E. R. 1257.

A traffic arrangement for booking passengers through, existed between the S. Ry. Co. & the M. Co. The S. Co. issued a through ticket to pltf. from N. to B., the words " via M. Co. from G." being printed on the ticket. Under the S. Co.'s Act, a passenger's ordinary luggage is conveyed at his own risk. The fares paid are divided between the cos. according to the mileage :—Held : pltf. had no cause of action against the M. Co., the contract entered into by him being with the S. The conductor of defts.' train, being asked by pltf., told him it was right to give his check to this person. 818. —— Special condition—Loss "arising off their lines"—No proof of delivery to second company.]—Pltf. took a ticket of the M. Ry. Co. from A. to C. On the ticket was stated that it was issued subject to the conditions in the co.'s time-tables, one being that the co. did not hold themselves responsible for any delay, detention, or other loss or injury arising off their lines. The journey from A. to C. is on the M. line to B., & thence by the L. line. At B. the station belongs to the L. Co. & all the clerks & porters are hired & paid by that co.; but by agreement, sanctioned by Act of Parliament, the M. Co. have the use of the station & the services of the clerks & porters on payment of an annual sum. Pltf. delivered his luggage to the M. Co. at A., & when the train by which he travelled arrived at B. a porter took pltf.'s luggage from the train & put it on a truck, &, after about twenty minutes wheeled the truck across to the platform from which the L. train was about to start for C. Pltf. saw the luggage on the platform, & this was the last that was seen of it. On the above facts, the ct. having power to draw inferences of fact:—Held: that, assuming the pltf. to be bound by the condition, the meaning of "off the co.'s lines," when applied to luggage, must be taken to be, not off the lines of railway merely, but out of the custody of the co. Pltf.'s luggage was shown to have been delivered to defts., & it lay on them to show that they had delivered it to the L. At the junction of the two lines pltf.'s portmanteau was transferred to the luggage van of defts.' train, but could not be found at the journey's end. It was recovered three months later, the contents being then spoiled:—Held: defts. were liable for the damage done, apart from any question of contract, because, having accepted pltf. as a passenger by one of their trains, the duty was cast upon them of taking care of his portmanteau.—HOOPER v. LONDON & NORTH WESTERN RY. SECT. 6.—COMMENCEMENT OF LIABILITY.

820. Luggage received by porter—& put on platform—Nothing said by passenger or porter as to destination.]—Pltf., a commercial traveller, at 12.20 p.m. arrived at defts.' booking office, at V. Station, in a cab with a friend & a portmanteau. The next H. train was timed to leave at 12.45. When pltf. arrived, a porter took pltf.'s portmanteau & put it on the platform not far from the rack which contained the luggage labels, but nothing was said either by pltf. or the porter. The porter then left, & pltf., after standing a short time with his friend by the portmanteau, & failing to obtain the services of another porter, himself took an H. label from the rack, & put it on his portmanteau. After again trying to get a porter, but without success, pltf. left the portmanteau where it had originally been placed by the porter, & went with his friend to the refreshment room, where he remained ten or fifteen minutes. During this time pltf.'s friend went to the booking office & took a ticket for him to H. On returning to the platform the portmanteau was not to be found. Pltf. went by the 12.45 train to H., thinking the portmanteau had gone by another train, but it was never seen again. Pltf. was well acquainted with V. Station, & was aware that there was a left luggage office there. There was posted up within two yards of the place where the portmanteau was left a notice stating that the co. would not be responsible for articles left at the station unless deposited in the cloakroom & a fee of 2*d.* paid on each article:—Held: in the circumstances pltf.'s portmanteau was never in the custody of defts. as carriers.—AGRELL v. LONDON & NORTH WESTERN RY. 821. —— —— Porter told destination.]—Pltf. on his arrival at defts.' station handed his bag to a porter, at the same time telling him he was going to W. The porter took the luggage to the platform & was about to have it labelled, when pltf. told him he would take it with him in the carriage. The porter then left suddenly, leaving the bag on the platform, & pltf. went to get a ticket. On his return the bag was found to be missing:—Held: (1) there was evidence to go to the jury that the bag was entrusted to the servant of defts. to go to W. as passenger's luggage; (2) there was no evidence of the bailment having been determined.—LEACH v. SOUTH EASTERN RY. Pltf. did not read the printed matter, & could not have learned the condition without special enquiry:—Held: (1) defts. failed to do what was reasonably sufficient to give pltf. notice of the restriction of liability; (2) pltf. could recover from them the value of the lost luggage.—RYAN v. GREAT SOUTHERN & WESTERN RY. s. Luggage received by porter—Porter told destination—Luggage not addressed.]—A party about to travel by a railway having obtained a ticket, his luggage was taken possession of by a railway porter, who was informed of the destination, in order to be placed upon the train. There was no address upon the luggage, &, on a change of carriages which took place in the course of the journey, the passenger did not inquire for his luggage. The luggage having been lost:—Held: by receiving it, the ry. co. undertook to convey it to the destination; having failed to do so, they were liable for its value.—CAMPBELL v. CALEDONIAN RY. CO. 822. —— Passenger going to booking office—Notices excluding liability for luggage left with porter.]—Pltf., an intending passenger by defts.' railway, reached the departure station about half an hour too early, in consequence of a mistake as to the time. Her luggage was taken from the cab by a porter, who directed her to get a ticket while he labelled the luggage, telling her that the booking office would be open in a few minutes. After pltf. had waited two minutes the office was opened, & pltf. took her ticket; but when she got on to the platform she discovered that one of the articles taken from the cab by the porter was missing. Defts. posted notices in their stations to say that their servants are strictly forbidden to take charge of any articles; & that any article which a passenger wishes to leave at a station should be deposited in the cloak-room; & that they will not be responsible for any article left on their premises in any other manner:—Held: (1) such notice did not apply to this case, where the luggage was taken charge of by the porter at the commencement of pltf.'s journey, and was not given to him to be left on the station for the convenience of pltf.; (2) the luggage was received by the porter within the scope of his authority, & delivery to him was delivery to defts. as carriers, & they were liable for the loss.—LOVELL v. LONDON, CHATHAM & DOVER RY. 823. —— ——.]—Resp. arrived at P. Station of applts.' railway at 4.20 p.m. with a bag & two other articles of luggage, in order to travel by the 5 p.m. train. A porter labelled the two articles & took all the luggage to the platform, the train not then being at the platform. Resp. told the porter she wished the bag to be put into a carriage with her, & asked if it would be safe to leave it with him. He replied that it would be quite safe & that he would take care of the luggage & put it into the train. She then went to meet her husband & get her ticket. Ten minutes after she had left the luggage she & her husband returned together to the platform, & found that the two labelled articles had been put into the van of the train, but that the porter & the bag had disappeared:—Held: there was evidence (1) that the bag was in the custody of the railway co. for the purposes of present & not of future transit from the time when it was delivered to their porter until its disappearance, & (2) that its loss was due to their negligence.

(3) Semble: a railway co. accepting passengers' luggage to be carried in a carriage with the passenger, enter into a contract as common carriers, subject to this modification, that in respect of his interference with their exclusive control of his luggage, the co. are not liable for any loss or injury occurring during its transit, to which the act or default of the passenger has been contributory.—GREAT WESTERN RY. 824. —— Whether within reasonable time before train starting—Passenger temporarily leaving station.]—(1) A passenger having missed his intended train left his luggage on the platform in charge of a porter, saying that he would travel by the next train. This train was timed not to start for an hour. He left the station & went into the billiard-room of an hotel for that interval. His luggage was afterwards missed:—Held: luggage so left was not taken charge of by the porter on behalf of the co. for carriage, but was watched by the porter on his own responsibility.

(2) Semble: the co. would have been liable if pltf. had only gone to some other part of the same station for a purpose strictly necessary to travelling, such as to take a ticket, & for a brief period.—WELCH v. LONDON & NORTH WESTERN RY. CO. (1884), 34 W. R. 166; 2 T. L. R. 64, D. C.

826. —— —— Passenger going to get meal—In refreshment room.]—Pltf., intending to travel by defts.' railway, went to the station, & as he had to wait for a train he went to have some tea at a refreshment room & entrusted his luggage to a porter in uniform, who appeared to be employed at that station, but who in fact was employed by defts. at another station, & at the time in question was off duty. The porter passed through the barrier to the platform in the ordinary way as any authorised servant does, & while the luggage was in his charge some of it disappeared & must have been stolen:—Held: (1) there was evidence for the jury that defts. had held out the porter as a person authorised to receive the luggage, & they were liable as common carriers; (2) the proper inference of fact to be drawn by the ct. under Ord. 58, r. 4, was that defts. held out the porter as their servant with authority to accept & take charge of the luggage.—SOANES v. LONDON & SOUTH WESTERN RY. 827. Luggage put in compartment by inspector—Whether within reasonable time before train starting—Passenger going to get meal—Outside station.]—Pltf. booked two berths for himself & his wife in a sleeping car on defts.' railway, &, having arrived at the departure station more than an hour before the train was due to start, allowed one of defts.' inspectors to have the luggage put in the sleeping compartments on the inspector's assuring him that it would be perfectly safe. Pltf. then left the station to have a meal & on his return found that the luggage had been stolen:—Held: defts. had taken control of the luggage down to the time of its loss, & pltf. was entitled to recover its value.—STEERS v. MIDLAND RY. Defts.' servants allowed this man to put it in the usual place with the other luggage. The valise contained a revolver,

It was not shown that at the time he left the valise any one was in charge of the train, or that there was any other passenger in the car:—Held: there was no sufficient delivery of the valise to defts. to render them liable.—KERR v. GRAND TRUNK RY. ear defenders, a flash lamp & a pair of binoculars. There were no conditions with regard to luggage. During the passage pltf.'s valise disappeared. Pltf. sued the co., who contended that the valise had never been entrusted to them, & that the revolver & binoculars were not personal luggage :—Held : (1) there was evidence that the valise was entrusted to defts. ; (2) in the circumstances the revolver, ear defenders, flash lamp & binoculars were personal luggage.—JENKYNS v. SOUTHAMPTON, ETC., STEAM PACKET CO., [1919] 2 K. SECT. 7.—DURATION AND TERMINATION OF LIABILITY.

830. Porter employed to put luggage on cab.]—Where a railway co. employ porters at their stations to convey passengers' luggage from the railway carriages to the carriages or hired vehicles of the passengers, the liability of the co. as carriers continues until the porters have discharged their duty.

In case against a railway co. for the loss of a package, the first count of the declaration stated that defts. were the owners of a railway for the carriage of passengers & their luggage, etc., from A. to B., for hire ; that defts. were common carriers for hire on the railway ; that the wife of pltf., at their request, became a passenger on the railway, to be carried from A. to B., with her luggage, consisting of a dressing-case, etc., on the railway from A. to B., & there safely & securely delivered for pltf., etc. : the breach alleged was, that defts. did not use due & proper care in the carriage of the dressing-case from A. to B., but by their carelessness, negligence, & improper conduct, the dressing-case was lost. Pltf.'s wife had become a passenger by a first-class carriage, to be conveyed from A. to B. ; the dressing-case was placed in the carriage, under the seat ; on the arrival of the train at B., the porters of the co. took upon themselves the duty of carrying the lady's luggage from the railway carriage to her carriage ; on her arrival home, the dressing-case was missing :—Held : (1) the duty of defts. as common carriers continued until the luggage was placed in the hackney-carriage ; (2) the evidence entitled pltf. to a verdict upon the first count ; (3) it was not necessary to prove negligence, although it was alleged.—RICHARDS v. LONDON, BRIGHTON & SOUTH COAST RY. 831. —— Delivery a question of fact.]—Pltf., a passenger by railway, brought with him into the carriage a carpet-bag containing a large sum of money, & kept it in his own possession until the arrival of the train at L. On alighting from the carriage with the bag in his hand, pltf. permitted a porter of the co. to take it from him for the purpose of securing for him a cab. The porter, having found a cab, within the station, placed the carpet-bag on the foot-board thereof, & then returned to the platform to get some other luggage belonging to pltf., when the cab disappeared, & the carpet-bag & its contents were lost :—Held : (1) this was a loss by the negligence of the co., for which they were responsible in damages ; (2) whether pltf. had accepted a delivery of the bag on the platform or elsewhere, in lieu of such delivery to a cab, was a question for a jury to determine.—BUTCHER v. LONDON & SOUTH WESTERN RY. 832. Luggage put on platform—Porter putting part in private room—At passenger's request—While waiting for connection.]—A. applied to a railway co. to take him to B., & was told that he could not be taken at once to B. by the train that was about to start, because it would pass through B. without stopping, but that he could be taken to D., & that if he waited at D. four hours, a train would then start for B. by which he might go. A. made up his mind to do this, & went to D. by the train about to start. When he got to D. his luggage, which consisted of, among other things, a case, containing jewels of value, was taken out of the luggage van & placed on the platform, & he then told one of the porters that he was going to B. by the train which would leave D. in four hours from that time, & wished to leave his luggage & particularly the jewel case, which was of considerable value, in a place of safety there. The porter put away the luggage except the jewel case in a waiting room, & the jewel case he took to a room marked "Private," in which was a clerk writing, & then in the presence of pltf. placed the jewel case in the room, &, after saying something to the clerk, told pltf. that the case would be safe, & that if the clerk left he would lock the door. Some time before the next train started, the luggage of pltf. was put on the platform, & the jewel case was stolen :—Held : the co. were not liable for it as common carriers.—FEARNLEY v. GREAT NORTHERN RY. CO. (1852), 16 J. P. 822.

833. —— At usual place of delivery—Reasonable time for passenger to take delivery.]—(1) It is the duty of a railway co. with regard to the luggage of a passenger, which travels by the same train with him but not under his control, when it has reached its destination, to have it ready for delivery upon the platform at the usual place of delivery

u. Luggage put on platform—Porter placing it in baggage room—At passenger's request—Passenger leaving station.]—Pltf. was a passenger from P. to S., with two trunks, checked. At S. the trunks were put on the platform, & he assisted defts.' servants to carry them into the baggage room, & went to an hotel. Later he sent for the trunks, but one of them had disappeared & the evidence showed that it had been stolen :—Held : defts. were not responsible ; their duty as common carriers ended when the trunk had been placed on the platform, & pltf. had had a reasonable time to remove it, as he clearly had here.—PENTON v. GRAND TRUNK RY. 835. Luggage taken by porter to adjoining railway—No proof as to time or place of loss.]—A., a passenger by the M. railway from G. to B., on arriving at the terminus at B., told a porter there that he wished to proceed by the B. & E. railway, whose station closely adjoined that of the M. railway, to T. The porter thereupon placed A.'s portmanteau on a truck with other luggage, entered the B. & E. station with the truck, passed down an incline from the arrival platform, crossed the lines of the railway, & ascended an incline to the departure platform of the B. & E. railway. There was no evidence that the portmanteau was ever afterwards seen, & it never reached T. In an action against the M. Co. for the loss:—Held: there was no evidence of a breach of their contract to deliver either to A., or at the departure platform of the B. & E. railway.—MIDLAND RY. CO. v. BROMLEY (1856), 17 C. 836. Luggage taken by porter to passenger's house—Loss en route.]—If, at the request of a passenger who has just arrived by train, a porter is told by a railway inspector to take luggage to the passenger's house, & a scale of fees is arranged by the railway co., the inspector so acting is presumed to have the railway co.'s permission & authority so to do, & the co. are estopped from denying that they are carriers for reward. If the luggage is lost the co. are liable.—REITH v. LONDON, TILBURY & SOUTHEND RY. CO. (1912), 47 L. Jo. 649.

837. Luggage left with porter—Re-delivery to porter as passenger's agent.]—Pltf. arrived at a station on defts.' railway with her luggage contained in two boxes which were taken from the luggage-van by a porter in the employ of the co. The porter asked pltf. if he should engage a cab for her. In reply she said she would walk to her destination, & would leave her luggage at the station for a short time, & send for it. The porter said: "All right; I'll put them on one side & take care of them." Thereupon pltf. quitted the station leaving her boxes in the custody of the porter. One of them was lost:—Held: the transaction amounted to a delivery of the luggage by the co. to pltf., & a redelivery of it by her to the porter as her agent to take care of, & the co. were not responsible for the loss.—HODKINSON v. LONDON & NORTH WESTERN RY. 847. —— —— Validity of bye-law.]—5 & 6 Will. 4, c. cvii., which incorporated the Great Western Ry. Co., by s. 169 enacts that, without extra charge, it shall be lawful for every passenger travelling upon the railway to take with him articles of clothing, not exceeding forty lbs. in weight & four cubic ft. in dimensions; & that the co. shall in no case be responsible for any things whatsoever carried upon the railway with any passenger, other than such passenger's articles of clothing not exceeding that weight & those dimensions, provided that nothing in the sect. contained shall extend to make liable the co. further than where, according to law, stage-coach proprietors & common carriers would be liable. S. 144 enables the co. to make bye-laws for the good government of the affairs of the co., & for the management of the undertaking. The co. made a bye-law, that every first-class passenger should be allowed to carry 112 lbs. of luggage free of charge, but that the co. would not be responsible for the care of it, unless booked, & the carriage thereof paid for:—Held: the co. had no power to make the bye-law, since it was in contravention of s. 169.—WILLIAMS v. GREAT WESTERN RY. 848. —— Knowledge of passenger—Luggage containing merchandise.]—By their Act of Parliament & their published notices a railway co. were bound & professed to allow each passenger to take with him his ordinary luggage, not exceeding a given weight, without any charge for the carriage. Pltf., a passenger by the railway, who was found to have had no knowledge of the Act of Parliament or the notice, brought with him as luggage a box containing only merchandise, but not exceeding in weight the limit prescribed for personal luggage. On the box was written in large letters the word "Glass." No information was given by pltf. to the co.'s servants, nor was any inquiry made by them, as to the contents of the box, the box having been lost:—Held: (1) inasmuch as the box contained merchandise only, & not personal luggage, there was no contract on the part of the co. to carry it, & consequently they were not liable for the loss; (2) the mere fact that a package looks like merchandise & is marked "glass," is not enough to fix the co. with responsibility.

849. Issue of ticket subject to—Exemption from liability for loss—Unless bill of lading signed.]—Pltf., by his agent, took a ticket by defts.' ship from N. to L.; on the ticket was the following condition:—"The ship will not be accountable for luggage, goods, or other description of property unless bills of lading have been signed therefor; each passenger allowed twenty cubic feet of luggage free, but no jewellery, bullion, etc., etc., will be carried as luggage." The ship sailed & eventually was lost on the voyage by the negligence of defts.' servants, & with it pltf.'s luggage. Pltf. did not take a bill of lading, nor was one offered to him:—Held: such a stipulation for a bill of lading as a condition for defts. being accountable was absolute, &, as no bill of lading had been taken, they were not liable for the loss of any part of pltf.'s luggage; the stipulation for twenty cubic feet of luggage being an exemption from the charge so far, & no further, leaving the passenger at liberty to get a bill of lading, for all the luggage, for which he intended to make the ship accountable, & at the same time giving him the option of taking luggage under his personal control without a bill of lading, but in that case carrying it at his own risk.—WILTON v. ATLANTIC ROYAL MAIL STEAM CO. 851. —— —— In any circumstances—Not liable for negligence.]—The ticket of a passenger by defts.' steamer contained a condition that defts. would not be responsible for any loss or damage to luggage in any circumstances. Pltf. fell ill of typhoid fever, & in accordance with a liberty reserved to defts. under the contract, was landed at K., insensible. His box was also landed on the wharf by defts. but pltf. never heard or saw anything of it afterwards:—Held: the condition exempted defts. from liability for the loss of the box; the words "in any circumstances" were sufficient to include loss or damage to luggage by negligence.—THOMPSON v. ROYAL MAIL STEAM PACKET CO. PART VI. SECT. 8, SUB-SECT. 4.

d. Issue of ticket subject to conditions—General rule.]—If a person receive a ticket & does not see or know that there is any writing on the ticket, he is not bound by the conditions contained on the ticket. If he knows there is writing, & knows or believes that the writing contains conditions, then he is bound by them. If he knows there is writing on the ticket, but does not know or believe that the writing contains conditions, nevertheless he is bound, if the delivery of the ticket to him is in such manner that he can see that there is writing upon it containing conditions.—STRETTON v. UNION S.S. subject to the express condition, of which he had notice, that no luggage was allowed. He had nevertheless, put his portmanteau, which weighed less than 150 lbs. into the train:—Held: he had waived the benefit of the above sect., & was bound to pay for the carriage of the portmanteau, & the co. were justified in detaining it.

(2) Where a person has, by fraud, induced another to perform a service for him, intending not to pay for the performance of it, still there is a liability implied by the law, which may be enforced in the same way as an obligation arising out of an express contract.—RUMSEY v. NORTH EASTERN RY. 853. —— —— Specified amount taken free at passenger's risk—Passenger without notice.]—The holder of a railway excursion ticket, issued subject to the conditions contained in the co.'s time & excursion bills, one of which conditions was, that luggage under 60 lbs. should be carried free, at passenger's own risk, is bound by the terms of this special contract, which is not void under Railway & Canal Traffic Act, 1854 (c. 31), s. 7; he has consequently no claim against the co. for the loss of his luggage, although it be proved that he did not know the condition on which it was being carried.—STEWART v. LONDON & NORTH WESTERN RY. 854. On ticket—Lex loci contractus.]—Resp. took a ticket in England from applts. for the conveyance of himself, family, & baggage from S. to A., & from P. to Mauritius. The ticket was issued subject to a condition signed by resp., that the co. did not hold themselves liable for damage to, or loss or detention of, passengers' baggage. In the course of the journey some articles of personal use were lost:—Held: (1) the contract was to be construed by the law of England; (2) at common law it is open to carriers to limit their common-law liability by special contract with the consignor of goods; (3) the loss of the resp. fell within the stipulated condition.—PENINSULAR & ORIENTAL NAVIGATION CO. v. SHAND (1865), 3 Moo. 855. —— Whether reasonable steps taken to bring to passenger's notice—Condition on back of ticket.]—(1) A ticket, having on its face only the words "Dublin & Whitehaven," was given to a passenger, who, without looking at it, paid for it, & went on board. Having lost all his luggage he brought an action against the co. The co. pleaded that on the back of the ticket there was an intimation that they were not to be liable for losses of any kind or from any cause:—Held: they were liable.

It would be extremely dangerous to hold that where a document is complete on the face of it, but having on the back of it something which has not been brought to the knowledge of a contracting party, he shall be held to have assented to that which he has not seen & of which he knows nothing (LORD CAIRNS, C.).

(2) A mere notice from the steam packet co. without the passenger's assent will not discharge them from performing the very essence of their duty, which is to carry safely & securely, unless prevented by unavoidable accidents (LORD CHELMSFORD).

(3) A ticket is in reality nothing more than a receipt for the money which has been paid (LORD HATHERLEY).

CO., LTD. (1881) 1 E. D. C. 315.—S. AF.

e. —— Condition on back of ticket.]—Pltf., a passenger from England to the Cape by defts.' steamship, received from defts. a passenger ticket, on the face of which ticket attention was called to the conditions printed on the back of the ticket, & among the conditions so printed on the back of the ticket were limitations of defts.' liability unless the passenger's luggage was placed under their care & a special rate paid; & the passenger saw there was printing on the ticket, but did not read the conditions or pay the special rate, & the luggage was lost:—Held: (1) the ticket contained the special contract between the parties; (2) defts. were not liable in damages for the loss of the luggage.—STRETTON v. UNION S.S. 855 i. On ticket—Whether reasonable steps taken to bring to passenger's notice.]—Pltf. purchased from an agent of deft. co. a ticket, which was not transferable, & had printed on it a number of conditions, one of which limited the liability of the co. for baggage to wearing apparel not exceeding $100 in value, & another required the signature of the passenger for the purpose of identification & to prevent a transfer. The agent obtained pltf.'s signature to the ticket, explaining that it was for the purpose of identification, but did not read nor explain any of the conditions, & pltf. was unable to read them herself. On the trip pltf.'s luggage, valued at over $1,000, was destroyed. In an action for damages for such loss:—Held: the special conditions printed on the ticket not having been brought to pltf.'s notice were not binding on her, pltf. could recover.—BATE v. CANADIAN PACIFIC RY. 857. —— —— Loss by felonious act of carriers' servants.]—(1) Passengers' luggage was carried on board defts.' ship on the terms of a ticket containing a condition that defts. should not be responsible for any loss, damage, injury of or to passengers or their baggage or effects by whatsoever cause or whatever manner occasioned & whether arising from the act of God, King's enemies, thieves, whether on board or not, accidents to or by machinery, boilers or steam, unseaworthiness of the steamer even existing at the time of sailing, or from any act, neglect, or default whatsoever of the pilot, master mariners, or other servants of the steamer:—Held: the condition protected defts. from liability to make good a loss occasioned by the felonious act of their servants.

(2) Defts. had previously offered to send pltf. her ticket in exchange for the passage money several days before the vessel sailed, but pltf., for her own convenience, asked that it should be ready for her on the steamer when she embarked. At the time the ticket was issued pltf. saw it contained writing or printing in addition to her name, but did not know that the writing or printing contained conditions which were part of the contract of carriage:—Held: defts. had taken reasonable steps to bring the conditions on the ticket to pltf.'s notice, & the conditions formed part of the contract of carriage.—MARRIOTT v. YEOWARD BROTHERS, [1909] 2 K. 858. Carrier not liable for negligence—If vessel seaworthy—Whether vessel seaworthy.]—Pltfs. were passengers upon defts.' steamer. At the commencement of the voyage their personal luggage, owing to the crowded state of the vessel, was placed in a lavatory, which was not in use, but adjoined another which was. During the voyage the lavatory in use became stopped by cotton-waste improperly placed in it by some person, & an overflow occurred which damaged pltfs.' luggage. Upon the back of the ticket was printed a condition exempting defts. from liability for damage to passengers' luggage, although caused by negligence or default of defts.' servants, provided that reasonable diligence had been used by defts. to render the ship at starting seaworthy & fit for the voyage:—Held: defts. were liable for the damage to the luggage upon the ground that there was evidence which justified a finding of fact that the vessel in sailing with the luggage so stowed was not seaworthy with regard to the carriage of the luggage, & that reasonable diligence had not been used by defts. to render the ship seaworthy within the condition on the ticket.—UPPERTON v. UNION-CASTLE MAIL STEAMSHIP CO., LTD. Condition on ticket—Delivery up of luggage only on production of ticket—Liability for delay.]—Pltf., arriving in L. by defts.' railway on Saturday evening, left a portmanteau at the luggage & cloak office on the up platform of P. Station, & on paying 2*d.* received a ticket acknowledging the receipt with printed conditions, among which was a notice that the co. would not deliver up luggage except to persons producing the proper receipt. On Sunday evening, intending to leave L. by another railway, he came to P. Station for his portmanteau, & found the office shut. After some time he was told by a porter that the superintendent was on the other side; whereupon he went across to the down platform, from which a train was starting, & the superintendent sent a porter with a key of the office, & he obtained his portmanteau. He was thus delayed forty minutes, & prevented from leaving L. by the other railway that night:—Held: (1) by the ticket defts. were bound to deliver up the portmanteau on Sunday as well as on other days, on a reasonable request & within a reasonable time; (2) whether there had been an unreasonable delay was a question for the jury.—STALLARD v. GREAT WESTERN RY. g. Declaration of value — Notice limiting liability.]—Deft. co. sold pltf. a ticket containing the proviso that baggage liability was limited to wearing apparel only, & that each passenger was allowed 150 lbs. of baggage free, & not exceeding $100 in value. Pltf. paid $10 excess baggage. Part of the baggage, including lady's apparel, men's suits & wolf robes, to the value of $560 was lost. Pltf. sued for full amount:—Held: defts. were liable for more than $100, but under R. S. C. (1886), c. 82. s. 3, for not more than $500.—WENSKY v. CANADIAN DEVELOPMENT CO. (1901), 8 B. C. h. —— Absence of — Articles of special value lost in transit.]—Pltf. who was a passenger on deft. railway booked three packages. One of them contained silver & silk articles of the description mentioned in the second schedule to Indian Railways Act, 1890, s. 75, as articles which must be declared, but pltf. did not do so. The package was lost & pltf. brought suit for damages:—Held: (1) above sect. is one of general applicability to all classes of goods; (2) inasmuch as pltf. did not declare the contents of the lost package the ry. co. was freed from all liability for the loss thereof, both as regards scheduled & non-scheduled articles contained therein.—EAST INDIAN RY. j. Merchandise booked as luggage.]—A passenger took a journey on a railway & booked as his "luggage" a package containing merchandise. The package was lost & consequently not delivered at the end of his journey. He sued the ry. co. for damages caused by its loss:—Held: the case was governed by Indian Railways Act (1890), s. 72, & the co. was liable for the loss.—VELAYAT HOSSEIN v. BENGAL & NORTH WESTERN RY. CO. (1909), I. L. R. 36 Calc. 819.—IND.

k. Limitation of liability — Form of approved contract.]—Although the Dominion Board of Railway Comrs. under R. S. C., 1906, c. 37, s. 353, approved of the form of contract used by a carrier "as the only form to be used," that means the only form of contract "impairing, restricting, or limiting the liability of" the carrier, there is nothing to prevent the carrier carrying goods without limiting his liability.—WILKINSON v. CANADIAN EXPRESS CO. 860. —— Exemption from responsibility for package exceeding stated value—Application of Carriers Act, 1830 (c. 68)—& Railway & Canal Traffic Act, 1854 (c. 31), s. 7.]—Pltf., a passenger by the South Eastern Ry., on arriving at L., deposited in the cloak-room there a bag containing wearing apparel & jewellery to a value considerably exceeding £10, receiving as a voucher a ticket on the back of which was printed the following notice:—"The co. will not be responsible for articles left by passengers at the station, unless the same be duly registered, for which a charge of 2*d.* per article will be made, & a ticket given in exchange; & no article will be given up without the production of the ticket, or satisfactory evidence of the ownership being adduced. A charge of 1*d. per diem*, in addition, will be made on all articles left in the cloak-room for a longer period than twenty-four hours. The co. will not be responsible for any package exceeding the value of £10." A similar notice printed in large characters was posted up in the office, but pltf. swore that she did not see it. She was not asked whether or not she had seen the notice on the back of the ticket, but she produced it when she applied for the bag. Through the negligence of the co.'s servants, part of the contents of the bag were abstracted whilst it was in their custody:—Held: (1) the co., having received the deposit, not as carriers, but as ordinary bailees, upon the terms contained in the printed notice, which pltf., having the means of ascertaining them, must be taken to have consented to be bound by, were not responsible for the loss; (2) the case was neither within Carriers Act, 1830, nor (3) Railway & Canal Traffic Act, 1854, s. 7.—VAN TOLL v. SOUTH EASTERN RY. Upon leaving the bicycle he received a ticket upon which was printed the following condition: "The co. will not be in any way responsible in respect of any article deposited the value whereof exceeds £5 unless at the time of deposit the true value & nature of the article shall have been declared, & 1*d. per* £1 sterling of the declared value be paid for each day or part of a day in addition to the ordinary cloak-room charges." Pltf. did not declare the value of the bicycle, which exceeded £5, at the time of the deposit, & only paid the ordinary cloak-room fee. The bicycle was not put by defts.' servants in the cloak-room, but was left in the booking hall without protection, & owing to this negligence was stolen:—Held: defts. were protected by the condition, although the bicycle had not been deposited within the cloak-room.—GIBAUD v. GREAT EASTERN RY. Pltf. having been a passenger by defts.' railway, H., her agent, delivered her luggage to defts. at their cloak-room, paid 4*d.* & received a ticket. On the one side of such ticket was a duly filled up table of articles deposited with a memorandum that the luggage of pltf. was left subject to the conditions on the other side. H. neither read nor knew of these conditions, which were (inter alia) that defts. would not be liable for loss of packages above the value of £5, unless the value should be declared, & an increased charge paid, & that defts. would not be responsible in any circumstances for loss or injury to articles, except left in the cloak-room. The luggage was above the value of £5 & not declared. It was not deposited in the cloak-room, but in a vestibule, from which it was stolen:—Held: (1) defts. were not liable for the loss; (2) pltf. was bound by the conditions of the ticket.—HARRIS v. GREAT WESTERN RY. At the back of the ticket were the words, "The co. will not be responsible for any package exceeding the value of £10." The same conditions were also printed on a placard

860 i. Condition on ticket—Exemption from responsibility for package exceeding stated value—Notice of condition.]—M. delivered a package of a value exceeding £5 at the cloak-room of the railway station & received a ticket on which was printed in red ink diagonally across the face "The department is not responsible for any article exceeding the value of £5." These words were partly hidden by the clerk's entry of the description of the article deposited. M. did not know that the printing contained any conditions limiting liability. His attention was not directed to the condition, nor was any notice placarded in the cloak-room calling attention to the condition. The package was lost:—Held: the railway had not done what was reasonably sufficient to give M. notice of the condition, & he was entitled to recover the value of the package.—CENTRAL SOUTH AFRICAN RYS. v. MCLAREN (1903), T. hung up in the cloak-room. In an action against the co. for the loss of the bag while thus in their cloak-room, pltf. claimed more than £10 for the value of the bag & its contents. Defts. resisted the claim, on the ground that they were relieved from responsibility by the above conditions. The judge at the trial left two questions to the jury:—(1) did pltf. read, or was he aware of the special terms of the contract; (2) if not, was he guilty of negligence in being unaware of them:—Held: there had been a misdirection; the proper question for the jury was whether defts. had done what was reasonably sufficient to give pltf. notice of the condition; if that question were answered in the affirmative, judgment should be given for defts.—PARKER v. SOUTH EASTERN RY. 867. —— Exemption from "loss" of luggage—Misdelivery included.]—The owner of a bag exceeding the value of £5 deposited it for safe custody in a railway station cloak-room paying 2*d.* & receiving a ticket with the following condition, of which he had notice, upon it: "The co. are not to be answerable for loss or detention of, or injury to, any article or property exceeding the value of £5 unless at the time of its delivery to them the true value & nature thereof be declared by the person delivering the same, & a sum, at the rate of 1*d.* for every 20*s.* of the declared value be paid for such article of property for each day, or part of a day, for which the same shall be left, in addition to the above-mentioned charge." The bag was delivered by mistake by a servant of the co. to a wrong person & never recovered:—Held: as the word "loss" in Carriers Act, 1830 (c. 68), s. 1, & Railway & Canal Traffic Act, 1854 (c. 31) s. 7, the words of which were followed by the condition to be construed, had been held to include "misdelivery" the word "loss" in the condition must be construed as having the same meaning, & judgment must be entered for defts.—SKIPWITH v. GREAT WESTERN RY. 876. —— ——.]—At 1.30 p.m. the son of G., applt., loaded twelve cows at M. station on a truck of resp. co. The cows were consigned to C. another station twenty-five miles distant, & at the time of loading were in good condition. Applt. had on other occasions sent cattle from M. to C. & they had usually arrived by 8 p.m. On this occasion they did not arrive till after midnight, & were then found to be in a damaged & exhausted condition. G. then brought an action against resp. co. on the ground that the injuries had been caused by the resps.' negligence. After evidence had been given in support of pltf.'s case, counsel for the defence submitted that there was no evidence of negligence to go to the jury, but the judge held that a primâ facie case had been made out. Evidence was then given by the co. to the effect that the delay in the arrival of the cattle was due solely to shunting operations to avoid passenger trains. The judge thereupon withdrew the case from the jury, & gave judgment for the co. :—Held : though the judge was wrong in withdrawing the case from the jury, & should have left it to them with a strong direction to find a verdict for defts., yet it would be useless to send the case back for trial, as the only verdict that could be found on the evidence must be a verdict for defts.—GODDARD v. MIDLAND RY. special contract for the conveyance of horses by railway was signed by the person sending them, whereby it was agreed that defts. should in no case be responsible for the delivery of the horses at any particular time; should be free from all liability with respect to them, whether in loading or unloading during conveyance; or while in the co.'s vehicles or on their premises. This contract was contained in a printed form, & was called condition A. Under condition B., at a higher rate, the co. were to be liable for any injury pointed out at delivery. Pltf. paid at lower rate. The horses were injured in transit:—Held: (1) condition A., by itself, was unreasonable; (2) condition B. was unreasonable in obliging the party to point out the injury at the time of unloading.—LLOYD v. LIMERICK & WATERFORD RY. b. Carrier exempted from liability for injury "caused by fear or restiveness."]—In an action against a ry. co., as carriers, for negligence, whereby a horse delivered to them by pltf. was injured at one of their stations defts. pleaded that they received the horse under a special contract containing a condition that defts. should not be liable for injuries occasioned by the fear or restiveness of animals:—Held: (1) the condition did not embrace cases in which the injury immediately flowed from the fear or restiveness of the animals, directly occasioned by some act of negligence or want of care on the part of defts., but applied only to injury from fear or restiveness, caused by the transit, with its ordinary incidents, & without any negligence or default on the part of the co.; (2) the condition was not unreasonable.—MOORE v. GREAT NORTHERN RY. c. Carrier exempted from all liability for wilful misconduct—Land & sea carriage.]—An action was brought against a ry. co. for injuries to pltf.'s cattle on the way from D. to M., via L., caused by the wilful misconduct & default of defts.' servants, on the voyage between D. & L. Defts. pleaded that under an arrangement with D. S. Packet Co., cattle were carried by sea from D. to L., & booked through at alternative rates, i.e. at the ordinary rate per waggon, without any condition limiting defts.' liability; that defts. had another & reduced rate per waggon, upon the terms of the owner taking upon himself all risk connected with the sea part of the journey, & becoming subject to certain special conditions; pltf., having been informed of both rates, selected the reduced rate, & signed a special contract for the carriage of the cattle. One of the conditions of the contract was that the co., in consideration of the reduced rate of freight charged, would not be accountable for loss caused by delay or injury taking place before or at shipment, on the journey, or at or after landing; nor for loss or injury, whether arising from or consequent upon the dangers or accidents of the sea, or navigation, or from the act of God, etc. . . . improper, careless, or unskilful navigation, or from accidents connected with machinery or boilers, or for any fault, negligence, or mistake of the master, officers, seamen, or crew of the vessels, or other servants of the D. S. Packet Co.:—Held: (1) the contract did not in its terms exempt defts. from liability for acts of wilful misconduct on the part of the seamen & crew; (2) a contract exempting them from liability for such acts would be unreasonable.—RONAN v. MIDLAND RY. d. Carrier exempted from liability not occasioned by misconduct.]—Defts., a ry. co., carried pltf.'s cattle under a special contract signed by the consignor, which stated that the co. had two rates for the conveyance of cattle; one, the full rate, when they undertook the ordinary duties of carriers for hire, subject to conditions printed thereon & their statutory rights; the other, a reduced rate, when the co. received, carried, & delivered at the owner's risk & exempt from all liability not occasioned by the wilful misconduct of their servants acting within the scope of authority. Pltf. elected the reduced rate. The cattle arrived at their destination seriously injured. In an action for damage to the cattle:—Held: the conditions were bad, & did not exempt the co. from negligence.—BOLLAND v. WATERFORD, LIMERICK & WESTERN RY. CO. (1897), 31 I. L. T. 62.—IR.

884 i. Carrier exempted from liability above declared value.]—Pltfs. sent horses to be carried on defts.' line, & signed a declaration that the value of each horse did not exceed £10:—Held: pltfs. having signed a declaration that the horses were under the value of £10 each were precluded from objecting that the conditions were unreasonable as exempting the co. from liability beyond that amount, even in case of wilful misconduct.—NEVIN v. GREAT SOUTHERN & WESTERN RY. CO. (1891), 30 L. R. Ir. 125.—IR.

f. Declaration of value — Insurance rate.]—Where a consignment note, signed by a person delivering a dog for carriage to a ry. co. in Ireland, contained a condition providing that the co. would not be responsible for any damages for loss thereof or injury thereto beyond the sum of £2 unless a higher value was declared, & an insurance rate of £5, for journeys exceeding 150 miles, paid for every £100 over £2:—Held: the insurance rate was too high, &, consequently, that the condition with reference thereto was unreasonable, & did not protect the ry. co. from liability to an amount exceeding £2 in respect of damage done to the dog through the negligence of their servants.—GALLAGHER v. GREAT NORTHERN RY. CO. (1903), 42 I. L. T. 267.—IR.

h. What is just & reasonable — In general—Question of law.]—As an alternative to a carriers' contract which admittedly contained unreasonable conditions, the carriers offered to carry at certain reasonable rates, but subject to a condition that they would not be accountable for the correct selection of the owner's cattle on landing, nor on loading into the waggon, nor on unloading at destination:—Held: this condition, upon its fair construction, would extend to exempt the carriers from responsibility for negligence or default on their own part in the selection of the cattle on landing, & was therefore unreasonable & unjust.—M'NALLY v. LANCASHIRE & YORKSHIRE RY. k. —— Onus of proof.]—In an action against a ry. co., as carriers, for breach of an alleged contract, in failing to carry pigs of pltf. from a station on their railway in I. to L., within a reasonable time, defts. pleaded that the pigs were received by them under a condition, signed by pltf., providing that, in consideration of carriage at a reduced rate or charge below the ordinary rate, deft. co. should be free from all liability for injury or delay in the transit or conveyance of the pigs, unless occasioned by the intentional & wilful misconduct of the defts.' servants:—Held: the burden of proving that the condition relied on was a reasonable one lay upon defts.; that therefore the question whether an alternative higher rate, at which, as the co. alleged, they offered to carry upon the ordinary carriers' liability, was a reasonable alternative, should not have been withdrawn from the jury, & that, under the reservation, pltf. was entitled to the verdict.—RUDDY v. MIDLAND GREAT WESTERN RY. CO. OF IRELAND (1880), 8 L. R. Ir. 224.—IR.

l. —— Whether fair alternative offered.]—Defts., a ry. co., contracted to carry pltfs.' cattle from D. to towns in E. During the sea part of the journey some of the animals were injured & others killed, through alleged negligence in securing & stowing them. In an action for the loss of the cattle, defts. pleaded that the ordinary rate charged by them for carriage of the cattle to the places to which pltfs.' cattle were booked was a reasonable rate, & that at such rate they undertook the carriage of cattle to those places, without, as regarded the sea portion of the journey, any limitation to their liability so far as imposed by law &, as regarded the land portion, without any unjust or unreasonable conditions; of which pltfs. had notice when delivering their cattle for carriage; & that pltfs. elected & contracted to have their cattle carried at a certain reduced rate, upon a special contract that the same should be conveyed at owners' sole risk in connexion with the sea part of the transit. Pltfs. replied that the alternative contract of carriage at ordinary rates offered by defts. was not, as regarded the land portion of the carriage, without any unjust or unreasonable conditions imposed, but was subject to a condition that, where the charge of conveyance was per waggon, as the owner or his servant was required to superintend the loading of the stock, & was allowed to place as many animals in such waggon as he considered may be conveyed with safety, the co. would not be responsible for loss arising in any way from the

885. Exemption from loss or damage—"However caused."—Defective horse-box or truck.]—A declaration alleged that defts. were proprietors of a railway & of carriages for the conveyance of passengers, cattle, goods, etc. for reward; that pltf. delivered to them, & they received from him, a horse of pltf. to be "safely & securely" carried by them upon their carriages, & to be safely & securely delivered to pltf., at a place mentioned, for reward. Pltf. had pointed out a defect in one of the partitions of a horse-box shown to him for the reception of his horse; a servant of defts. then endeavoured to secure the partition, & had assured pltf. that he had done so; the horse was carried in that box, & the horse's death was occasioned during the journey by the insecurity of the partition. A receipt was given to pltf. for the amount paid for conveyance of the horse, at the foot of which receipt was written: "N.B. This ticket is issued subject to the owner's undertaking all risks of conveyance whatsoever, as the co. will not be responsible for any injury or damage, however caused, occurring to horses or carriages, while travelling, or in loading or unloading": —Held: the terms of the memorandum formed part of the contract for the conveyance of the horse, & disproved the averment in the declaration that defts. received the horse to be safely & securely carried.

m. ——— Effect of alternative rates.]—Pltfs. sent horses by an ordinary goods train to be carried on defts.' line from C. There were no horse-boxes at the station, but the porters of defts.' co., without objection by pltfs., put them into an ordinary goods waggon. Defts. had different rates for conveyance of horses—two rates for horse-boxes, & a specially reduced rate for waggons, at which the animals were to be carried at the owner's risk, & the co. to be exempt from all liability, except from loss or damage caused by wilful misconduct of their servants; & at the waggon rate in case of loss or damage, however caused, no claim exceeding £10 should be allowed for any one horse. At the full rate for horse-boxes, defts. undertook the ordinary duties of carriers. This condition, amongst others, was indorsed on the loading docket, signed by defts., & they also signed a declaration that the horses were delivered to defts. for conveyance in cattle or goods waggons, & were to be carried entirely at owner's risk:—Held: having regard to the alternative rates the contract of carriage was a reasonable one & was not rendered unreasonable by the want of horse-boxes at the station, in the absence of any requisition for them by pltfs.—NEVIN v. GREAT SOUTHERN & WESTERN RY. One of the owners travelled on the same train as the foxes, but not in the same car, the foxes being in the express car with other express parcels. No free transportation was furnished:—Held: the contract did not apply to the shipment in question, & the co. was liable if the foxes died during the transportation through its negligence.—TRENHOLM v. DOMINION EXPRESS CO. The attempt to box the horse was afterwards successfully carried out. The groom, after the injuries were done, signed a contract in writing for the carriage of the horse at defts.' reduced rate, subject to condition that carriage should be at "owner's risk":—Held: defts. were not liable.—KNOX v. GREAT NORTHERN RY. 888. —— —— Collision.]—A contract entered into with a common carrier by the party who delivers goods to be conveyed, by which contract the carrier is exempted from all liability for any loss occasioned by his negligence, is binding upon both parties. A declaration stated, that defts. were the owners of a certain railway, & that they conveyed horses & cattle thereon as common carriers; that pltf. delivered to defts. a horse, to be carried by them for hire on their railway from A. to B., subject to certain conditions assented to by pltf., & contained in a notice at the foot of the ticket of deft. co. for the conveyance of the horse; the ticket stated that it was issued subject to the owners taking all risks of conveyance whatsoever, as the co. would not be responsible for any injury or damage, howsoever caused, occurring to live stock travelling upon their line. The declaration then stated, that, whilst the horse was in the custody of defts., it was injured by the horse-box, in which the animal was, being propelled against some trucks, through the gross negligence of the co.:—Held: defts. had engaged to carry pltf.'s horse under a special contract, the terms of which were contained in the notice; & by that notice, pltf. had agreed that defts. should not be responsible for such a loss, although it were occasioned through their negligence; & consequently, the declaration was bad after verdict.—CARR v. LANCASHIRE & YORKSHIRE RY. In an action by A. against the co. for an injury to the animals & delay in delivering them :—Held : on these facts it was a misdirection to leave it to the jury to say whether the railway co. were common carriers of cattle for hire, & whether they received pltf.'s cattle for carriage as common carriers for hire, or whether they received them under a special contract on the terms contained in the ticket ; there was no evidence of the co. being common carriers of cattle for hire, nor of any other contract but that contained in the ticket, & the judge ought to have told the jury that there was either a special contract or no contract at all.—YORK, NEWCASTLE & BERWICK RY. After the cattle were placed in the trucks at H., the traffic-manager handed to B. a "live stock" ticket, stating that the co. undertook the conveyance of live stock free from all responsibility, as they would not be liable for damage arising in any way whatever, nor hold themselves responsible to forward cattle by any particular train, or in time for any particular market. The fare for the carriage of the cattle was to be paid on B.'s return to D. B. brought action to recover compensation for injuries to the cattle in transit :—Held : (1) the putting the cattle on board the steamer at D., coupled with the fact that the cattle were conveyed to W., afforded some evidence of a contract to convey as carriers from D. to W. ; (2) it was wrong to direct the jury that the only contract proved was a contract subject to the terms endorsed on the ticket.—BYRNE v. CHESTER & HOLYHEAD RY. The horses, which were valuable hunters, were in soft condition at the time. They were deteriorated in appearance by the fatigue of the road journey ; one of them was lamed ; & such as were sold realised prices below what would have been otherwise obtained, the others being left on the owner's hands. Had they been in hardfed condition they would have borne the journey without injury. The co.'s stationmaster was, at the time of the contract, aware of the intended sale, & of the day on which it was to take place :—Held : the co. were not liable in damages for the entire loss which the owner sustained in consequence of the injuries occasioned to the horses by the road journey, but the measure of damages was the deterioration which the horses, if in ordinary condition & fit to make the journey, would have suffered thereby, & the time & labour expended on the road.—WALLER v. MIDLAND GREAT WESTERN RY. 894 i. Notice to carrier—Duty of sender.]—There is a duty on all who deliver dangerous substances to be carried by other persons to take reasonable precautions & to give notice of the dangerous nature of the substance, if they are aware of it ; & in the case of a substance like bichromate of potash, the nature of which is not a matter of common knowledge, co. would only carry articles of that dangerous character on one day in each week, handed it to pltf., the servant of a C. carrier, without communicating to him (& there being nothing in its appearance to indicate) its dangerous nature. While being carried by pltf. to the cart, the carboy from some unexplained cause burst, & its contents flowed over & severely injured pltf. :—Held : deft. was liable for the injury thus resulting from his breach of duty.—FARRANT v. BARNES (1862), 11 C. 895. Implied warranty by sender.]—First count : that pltfs. were owners of a general ship ; that defts. caused a corrosive substance to be packed in casks, & delivered to pltfs., as casks of bleaching powder, to be carried in the ship ; that pltfs. & their agents were ignorant that bleaching powder contained a corrosive substance, & the casks outwardly appeared to be sufficient ; but that the casks were insufficient, & the contents were improperly packed, that the corrosive contents escaped & destroyed the cargo. Second count : that defts. shipped a dangerous article, knowing it to be such, without notice of its danger ; & pltfs. without knowledge of its dangerous nature, received it, & stowed it in the hold, where it did mischief. Plea 3, to so much of the first count as relates to the insufficiency of the packages : that defts. purchased the goods ready packed from third persons, named, & were not themselves, or by their servants, guilty of negligence. Plea 4, to first count : that the persons employed on the ship knew & had the means of judging of the sufficiency of the casks. Plea 10, to the second count : that the master of the ship knew, or had the means of knowing, the dangerous nature of the goods. On demurrer to the pleas :—Held : there is an implied undertaking on the part of skippers of goods on board a general ship that they will not deliver to be carried on the voyage packages of a dangerous nature, which those employed on behalf of the shipowner may not on inspection be reasonably expected to know to be of a dangerous nature, without giving notice ; consequently, both counts were good, & the third plea bad ; the fourth & tenth pleas, which the ct. construed to amount to an allegation of facts equivalent to notice, were good.—BRASS v. MAITLAND (1856), 6 E. & B. 470 ; 26 L. It was delivered to pltf.'s husband under the description of "general cargo," & he was not informed by defts. that it was ferro-silicon. During the carriage of the ferro-silicon from G. to S. on pltf.'s husband's boat, it gave off poisonous gases, in consequence of which pltf.'s husband died, & pltf., who was on board, & assisted her husband in the management & working of the boat, was rendered seriously ill. Pltf. brought an action, as administratrix of her husband, against defts. for damage suffered by her by reason of the death of her husband, & also for injury & damage sustained by herself. Defts. did not know when they shipped the casks containing ferro-silicon that it was a dangerous substance :—Held : (1) (VAUGHAN WILLIAMS, L.J.) defts. owed a duty to pltf.'s husband to communicate such information as they had as to the nature of the goods to be sent in the canal boat, & through their servants they were guilty of negligence, & want of care in not communicating to the carrier the name, which they knew, of this particular cargo ; (2) (FLETCHER MOULTON & FARWELL, L.JJ.) a consignor who tenders goods to a common carrier to be carried by him in performance of his common law obligation to carry thereby impliedly warrants to the carrier that the goods so tendered are fit to be carried in the ordinary way, & are not dangerous ; (3) that implied warranty is displaced by evidence that the carrier in accepting the goods knew of their unfitness or dangerous character whether such knowledge arises from express information or from the general knowledge of mankind of the natural incidents of the goods tendered for carriage.—BAMFIELD v. GOOLE & SHEFFIELD TRANSPORT CO., LTD., [1910] 2 K. 897. What are dangerous goods — Railways Clauses Consolidation Act, 1845 (c. 20)—Rates & Charges Orders — Liquid metal polish.]—Liquid metal polish having a flash point of over 73° Fahr. (Abel Close Test) in securely closed tins in cases, is "dangerous goods" within the meaning of Pt. 4 of the schedule to the Railway Rates & Charges Orders ; & the Board of Trade have no jurisdiction under Railway & Canal Traffic Act, 1888 (c. 25), s. 24 (11), to classify the same, as such goods are already classified in the "Exceptional Class" in Pt. 4 as "dangerous goods."

The statutory schedule & classification in the Rates & Charges Orders Confirmation Acts do not in any way fetter or limit the power given to a railway co. by Railways Clauses Consolidation Act, 1845, s. 105, to decide what goods are "in the judgment of the co." dangerous goods ; & if a railway co. in the bonâ fide exercise of their discretion come to the conclusion that goods, which are not included in any part of the classification, are in their judgment dangerous goods, then such goods are "dangerous goods" within the "Exceptional Class" in Pt. 4 of the statutory schedule to the Rates & Charges Orders.—NORTH EASTERN RY. 899. Criminal liability—Onus of proof.]—Where the law presumes the affirmative of any fact, the negative of such fact must be proved by the party averring it in pleading. So where any act is required to be done by one, the omission of which would make him guilty of a criminal neglect of duty, the law presumes the affirmative, & throws the burthen of proving the negative on the party who insists on it. Therefore, where pltf. declared that defts., who had chartered his ship, put on board a dangerous commodity (by which a loss happened) without due notice to the captain, or any other person employed in the navigation, it lay upon him to prove such negative averment. The commodity was delivered by defts.' officer, & received by the first mate of pltf.'s ship (which first mate was dead, & no other person was present to depose to the conversation which passed between them) :—Held : the best evidence of the fact could only be given by defts.' officer who delivered the commodity on board to such first mate ; & the action could not be sustained by secondary evidence.—WILLIAMS v. EAST INDIA CO. 900. —— Innocent sender.]—(1) Great Western Railway Act, 1835 (c. cvii.), s. 168, enacts that every person who shall send or cause to be sent by the railway any vitriol, etc., or other goods of a dangerous quality, shall distinctly mark or state the nature of such goods on the outside of the package, or give notice in writing to the servant of the co. with whom they are left, at the time of sending, on pain of forfeiting £10 for every default, or being imprisoned :—Held : the Act made the sending of dangerous goods, without notice, a criminal offence ; & a guilty knowledge on the part of the sender was necessary to render him liable under the Act.

Resps. received from N. some cases containing vitriol, & sent them by the railway. The nature of the goods was not marked on the packages or known to resps. when they received the packages. N., in answer to an inquiry by resps., informed them that the cases contained gun stocks & other goods of a harmless nature : & resps. so described them in the receiving note sent by them with the goods to the railway, in which note they described themselves as the consignors :—Held : as resps. had been misled by N. as to the nature of the goods, & had no guilty knowledge of their dangerous character, they were not liable as senders of the goods, within the Act.

In its transit on the railway, a small parcel, addressed to K. was abstracted from the hamper. In an action by pltf. against the co. for loss of the parcel :—Held : (1) it was sufficient to prove that it was not in the hamper when delivered to pltf. by the co. ; (2) it was not necessary to go into evidence to show that the co. had not delivered it to K. ; (3) the amount of damages in such action is the value of the lost parcel, as pltf. would be liable to that amount to the owner of it.

918. —— Notice of special purpose.]—Pltfs. being shoe manufacturers at K., were under a contract to supply a quantity of military shoes to a firm in L. for the use of the F. army at 4*s.* per pair, an unusually high price. The shoes were to be delivered by Feb. 3, 1871, & pltfs. accordingly sent them to defts.' station at K. for carriage to L., in time to be delivered there in the usual course in the evening of that day, when they would have been accepted & paid for by the consignees. Notice was given to the station master (which for the purposes of the case was assumed to be notice to the co.) at the time, that pltfs. were under a contract to deliver the shoes by the 3rd, & that unless they were so delivered they would be thrown on their hands; but he was not informed that there was anything exceptional in the character of the contract. The shoes were not delivered in L. till Feb. 4, & were consequently not accepted by the consignees, & pltfs. were obliged to sell them at 2*s.* 9*d.* a pair, which, in consequence of the cessation of war, was, apart from the previously mentioned contract, the best price that could have been obtained for them, even if they had been delivered on the evening of Feb. 3, instead of the morning of the 4th. In an action against defts. for the delay in delivering the shoes, they paid into ct. a sufficient sum to cover any ordinary loss occasioned thereby, but pltfs. further claimed the difference between the price at which they had contracted to sell the shoes & the price which they ultimately fetched:—Held: (1) pltfs. were not entitled to recover the latter sum, the damage not being such as might reasonably be considered as arising naturally from defts.' breach of contract, or such as might be reasonably supposed to have been in the contemplation of both parties at the time when they made the contract; (2) the notice given to defts. was not such that they could reasonably be supposed to have had in their contemplation, at the time of entering into the contract for the carriage of the shoes, damages of such an exceptional nature as those claimed; (3) a mere notice as such could not have the effect of rendering defts. liable to more than ordinary damages; but it must in order to do so be given in such circumstances as to make it a term of the contract that defts. will be liable for such damages if the contract be broken (MARTIN, B. &, semble, BLACKBURN & LUSH, JJ.).—HORNE v. MIDLAND RY. 919. —— —— What notice sufficient.]—Pltf. delivered a parcel at the receiving office of deft. co. in L. addressed to "M. & Co., Stand 23, Show Ground, L.; van train." Nothing was said by the person who delivered the parcel at the receiving office as to the purpose for which it was being sent to L., or to draw attention to the label:—Held: the label was sufficient notice to defts. that the goods were being sent to a show; & pltfs. were entitled to recover damages for loss of profits & expenses incurred by the goods being delayed & not delivered at L. in time for the show.—JAMESON v. MIDLAND RY. 920. —— —— ——.]—Pltf., through his agents in L., handed to defts. certain samples of goods, which they undertook to carry for him to T. by their passenger route for goods. They undertook to deliver the samples there within a reasonable time, but failed to do so, owing to the negligence of the officials of a foreign post-office. Pltf.'s case was that he had, through his agents in L., given notice to defts. that he required the samples to be delivered with the utmost dispatch to him at T. for a special purpose. In an action brought by him to recover damages for delay he also made a claim for special damage in the loss of business suffered by him through the failure of defts. to carry the goods with proper dispatch:—Held: pltf. was entitled to damages for the failure of defts. to deliver the samples within a reasonable time, but his claim for special damage could not be sustained, inasmuch as he had failed to show that he had given defts. proper notice of the special object with which the goods had been sent by him to T.—LEVI BROTHERS v. SOUTH EASTERN RY. The goods were not delivered at N. on the Monday, nor until after the exhibition was over, & pltf., who had preceded them there, incurred considerable loss of time & profits:—Held: as both parties were well aware of the purpose for which the goods were sent & made it the basis of their contract, pltf. was entitled to recover as damages the amount of profits which he might have acquired at N., in the ordinary conduct of his business & which were fairly capable of being ascertained.—SIMPSON v. LONDON & NORTH WESTERN RY. CO. (1876), 1 Q. B. D. 274; 45 L. J. Q. B. 182; 33 L. T. 805; 24 W. R. 294.

929. Depreciation in value—Damage to part.]—Pltf., a hop-grower in K., sent to L. by defts.' railway some pockets of hops consigned to a purchaser. Defts. kept the hops for some days on their premises in an open van whereby a small portion was stained by wet, & the purchaser rejected the whole as he was entitled to do by the custom of the market. Pltf. dried the stained hops & they were rendered as good as ever for actual use, but the staining had depreciated the market value of the bulk. Pltf. sent the hops to a factor for sale, but at that time the market price of hops had considerably fallen from what it was at the time the hops ought to have been delivered. Defts. had no notice that the hops were sent to L. for sale :—Held : (1) pltf. was entitled to recover, as damages, the amount of the depreciation in the market value of the hops, & was not confined to the value of the portion actually damaged; (2) he was entitled to recover, as damages, the difference between the market price on the day when the hops were sold, & the day when they ought to have been delivered.—COLLARD v. SOUTH EASTERN RY. Pltf. desiring to change the consignee applied to another agent of defts.', who on payment of additional freight granted a fresh bill of lading agreeing to carry the seed to London. The change of destination was duly intimated to the proper agent of defts., but he having omitted to make the necessary arrangements, the seed was carried to L. & ultimately delivered in London, too late for the sowing trade, so that the seed had to be sold at a heavy loss :—Held : defts. were bound to indemnify pltf. against the loss he had sustained through the fall in the market value of the seed together with the additional sum paid for freight from L. to London.—MONTEITH v. MERCHANTS' DESPATCH & TRANSPORTATION CO. Pltf.'s clerk, who had been sent to B. on the Saturday to receive & sell the goods, waited there until the Monday, when he removed them to N., in order to sell them:—Held: it was a question for the jury, whether the expenses of the clerk's stay at B. were a reasonable consequence of defts.' breach of contract, & the Judge was not bound as a matter of law to direct the jury that defts. were not liable for such expenses, unless they had notice that it would be the consequence of a delay in the delivery of the goods.—BLACK v. BAXENDALE (1847), 1 Exch. 410; 17 L. On the parcel was a printed label—"Travellers' goods; deliver immediately; 77 (address of consignee)—carriage paid." No directions were given to send the parcel by any particular train, & the ordinary rate only for the conveyance of goods was paid. The parcel might reasonably have been delivered on June 7, but it was not delivered till the 8th. Pltf. thereupon sought to recover from defts. one guinea, being the expenses incurred by the traveller for one day while awaiting the arrival of the parcel:—Held: pltfs. were rightly non-suited, no notice having been given by them to defts. that the parcel should be delivered on any particular day.—CANDY v. MIDLAND RY. SECT. 4.—DELAY IN RECEIVING GOODS.

940. Expenses incurred by sender—Delivered out of ordinary course.]—By the terms of a contract defts. agreed with pltfs. to have a certain ship ready on a certain date, in the S. Docks, to receive a cargo of tiles for shipment to A. The ship was not ready on the agreed day, & the tiles being kept waiting in the trucks in which pltfs. had had them brought into the docks, pltfs. were obliged to pay the railway co., the owners of the trucks, a certain sum for the detention, which sum they now sought to recover from defts. as damages for their breach of contract. If pltfs. had followed the ordinary course of business at the docks they would have employed the dock co. to bring the tiles into the docks up to the ship's side, & the dock co.'s scale of charges, which were slightly higher than the railway co.'s, would have included storage of the tiles at the docks for three weeks, without further charge. The time during which the trucks were actually detained was less than three weeks:—Held: (1) defts. had no right to assume that pltfs. would follow the ordinary course of business in the mode of bringing their goods into the docks; (2) pltfs. were entitled to deliver the tiles in any manner they pleased; (3) the detention of the trucks was the natural & ordinary consequence of defts.' breach of contract.—WELCH, PERRIN & CO. v. ANDERSON & CO. The pictures were damaged on the journey by defts.' negligence. H. thereupon brought an action against pltfs., who gave notice of it to defts., & requested them to defend it. Defts. refused, & told pltfs. to take their own course. Pltfs. defended the action brought against them by H. without success, & then brought an action against defts. to recover not only the damages found by the jury to have been sustained by H., but also the costs of the unsuccessful defence. Defts. paid the damages into ct., & disputed their liability as to the costs:—Held: the costs were not recoverable, inasmuch as they could not be considered as the natural consequence of defts.' default, the contracts between H. & pltfs., & between pltfs. & defts. having been separate & independent.—BAXENDALE v. LONDON, CHATHAM & DOVER RY. On their arrival at their destination defts. by mistake demanded a further charge, which was not paid, & the articles were detained, whereby pltf. sustained loss & damage. He refused to pay the overcharge under protest & sue to recover it, but allowed defts. to retain his goods until they discovered their mistake, & then sued for the loss of profits he might have made in the meantime, besides the various expenses he had paid. An order was made that the goods be delivered up, subject to pltf.'s rights, &, in an action for damages, defts. paid £15 into ct.:—Held: (1) the ct. being placed in the position of a jury, £15 was a sufficient sum for damage; (2) a jury are entitled to look at the conduct of the parties, & to see where the real blame lies, & to whom in reality the mischief is to be attributed.—DAVIS v. LONDON & NORTH WESTERN RY. The ry. co. thereupon returned them to the manufacturers, who repacked them, & forwarded them to Germany. On arrival there, they were rejected as being too late. SUB-SECT. 1.—THE STATUTES AND THEIR APPLICATION.

947. 1854 Act, s. 2—Application to—Working signals on block system.]—Where one railway co. gives to another co. power to use its railway & the works belonging to it, it undertakes to perform all those services which must be performed if the privilege given is to be exercised at all.

Appcts. had running powers over defts.' railway, & under statutory powers had altered & reconstructed the signals thereon in such a way as was necessary to enable defts.' railway to be worked on the block system. Upon complaint that defts. did not, according to their powers, afford all due & reasonable facilities for the receiving, forwarding, & delivering of passenger traffic upon their railway in that they refused to work the signals which appcts. had reconstructed in such a manner as to enable defts.' railway to be worked on the block system:—Held: the working of such signals on defts.' railway was, under 1854 Act, s. 2, a due & reasonable facility which defts. should afford for the receiving, forwarding, & delivering of passenger traffic, & defts. by refusing or omitting to work the signals offered obstructions to the public desirous of using appcts.' & defts.' railway as a continuous line of communication.—GREAT WESTERN RY. 949. —— —— Facilities involving large structural alterations—Doubling line.]—A single line railway was used only for mineral & goods traffic & had never been open for passenger traffic, although the special Act under which the railway was made authorised its being used & contemplated its being at some time or other used for passenger traffic; as to a portion of such railway, that there was a passenger station in existence at each end of such portion of the line, & there was a considerable population in the district requiring passenger accommodation on the railway. The Board of Trade would not sanction the railway being opened for passenger traffic without the extra work of doubling the line being carried out:—Held: an application under 1854 Act, s. 2, for an order enjoining the co. to afford all reasonable & proper facilities for passenger traffic must be dismissed; the structural alterations involved as a necessary incident of opening the line for passenger traffic were so large as to be beyond the jurisdiction of the Comrs. to order.—GLAMORGANSHIRE COUNTY COUNCIL v. GREAT WESTERN RY. m. —— —— Works not within the railway company's own powers.]—Upon a complaint by the Town Council of A. of want of facilities for passenger traffic at A. station it was admitted that the rebuilding of a bridge on which the booking offices were erected & which carried one of the town streets over the railway line, was essential to any alteration & improvement of the station. The bridge was originally constructed by the ry. co. under its special Act, but the street passing over the bridge was vested in the municipal authorities of A.:—Held: (1) as the accommodation works which appcts. asked for could not be carried out except with the consent or authority of some one other than the ry. co. themselves, the works applied for were not within the ry. co.'s own powers; (2) the ry. co. had not violated its statutory duty under 1854 Act, s. 2.—ARBROATH CORPN. v. CALEDONIAN RY. been taken by the Govt. from the railway co., as the Govt. may delegate to the railway co. the right to exercise the actual control over the working of the railway in so far as it does not interfere with the paramount right vested in the Govt. to use the railway for His Majesty's service. On such application the burden lies upon the railway co. of showing that it is not within their power to give such facilities, inasmuch as primâ facie the railway co. are still under obligation of giving reasonable facilities.—DENABY & CADEBY MAIN COLLIERIES, LTD. v. GREAT CENTRAL RY. 952. 1873 Act, s. 10—Revision of working agreement—By court.]—A special Act enabled the G. N. Ry. Co. & the M. Ry. Co. to enter into working agreements, & in pursuance of that Act an agreement was entered into, the 14th clause of which was as follows: "Neither co. shall make any bargain, treaty, agreement, or arrangement with any other co., or do any other act, directly or indirectly, to affect injuriously the traffic of the co., or to prejudice this agreement, without the consent of such other co." Upon an application by the Corpn. & Chamber of Commerce of H. to the Railway Comrs., under 1873 Act, s. 10, to revise the above agreement in the interests of the public, by declaring the 14th clause to be invalid & ordering it to be modified:—Held: the clause acted prejudicially to the interests of the public, because it did not leave the railway cos. at liberty to accommodate the use of their line to what was advantageous for traffic, & the agreement must be modified either by the omission of the article or by the addition thereto of a proviso to the following effect: "Provided that nothing in this agreement shall be used or operate to prevent either of the cos. parties hereto from agreeing to any through rate, or entering into any agreement with any other co. or cos. with reference to the conveyance of traffic by any route hereafter to be opened, or which has been opened for the first time at any time since Oct. 1, 1860, or to the interchange of running powers in respect of any such route or any part of it."—HUDDERSFIELD CORPN. v. GREAT NORTHERN RY. Upon an application for an order directing the railway co. to afford reasonable facilities for receiving, forwarding, & delivering traffic at such station:—Held: appcts. had failed to show that the shunting operations caused any substantial obstacle to the free use by passengers of the level crossing or that there was any appreciable danger to passengers crossing by either way, &, although the station was not a convenient one & could be made more convenient at some considerable expense, nothing less than reasonable proof, which was not forthcoming, that the obligation cast upon the railway co. had not been fulfilled, could authorise the Railway Comrs. to interfere with the discretion of the railway co. as to the arrangement of its stations.—LEEK URBAN DISTRICT COUNCIL v. NORTH STAFFORDSHIRE RY. 957. ——.]—(1) Although the Railway Comrs. have no jurisdiction to order a co. to make a new railway station or to order any particular works, or otherwise to interfere with the discretion of the co. in the mode of performing its obligation to afford facilities, according to its powers, for the receiving, forwarding & delivering of the traffic, yet they have jurisdiction to order such facilities, even if their doing so would necessitate the making by the co. of some structural alteration of such station.

(2) An application was made for an order requiring a railway co. to enlarge the station at H., to provide a better booking-office, waiting-room, refreshment room, & general accommodation therein; to alter the existing platforms, & to provide new ones; to improve the warehouse & cattle accommodation; & at L. to enlarge the platform & to provde a new road of approach. The Comrs. ordered the co. to extend the platform accommodation at H. according to a specified plan, to cover over the platforms & part of the carriage yard, to add four waiting-rooms of a specified size, to reserve a portion of the station for refreshments, to increase the accommodation for the delivery of tickets, & to increase & improve the accommodation for cattle; & as to L. to increase & improve the platform & waiting-room accommodation, to cover over the bridge, to make fresh openings into & to widen the road of approach to that station:—Held: the subject-matter of the application was not beyond the scope of the jurisdiction of the

q. Alteration of works not dedicated to railway purposes—Street vested in municipal authority—Passing over railway bridge.]—Upon a complaint by the Town Council of A. of want of facilities for passenger traffic at A. station it was admitted that rebuilding a bridge was essential to any improvement of the station. This bridge was originally constructed by the ry. co. under its special Act, but the street passing over the bridge was vested in the municipal authorities of A.:—Held: under 1845 (Scotland) Act, s. 16, ry. cos. have power to alter works of their own, but have no power to alter works which have been dedicated to a purpose other than railway purposes.—ARBROATH CORPN. v. CALEDONIAN RY. 958. Erection of new station.]—(1) The obligation imposed upon railway cos. by 1854 Act, s. 2, to afford to the public facilities for using a railway as regards the receipt & delivery of traffic is not confined to the granting of such facilities at existing stations only.

(2) A railway co. infringe that sect., if not having the excuse of inability, they refuse to receive & deliver traffic of a particular district except at places on their railway which are unreasonably remote, & if also the convenience that the opening of a station within easy reach would be to traffic that would use it, measured by quantity & other considerations, has a clear preponderance over the inconvenience from expense & trouble which it would cause the railway co. to give that accommodation.

(3) The district of N. was intersected by a line of railway; there was no station nearer than at A. on the one side, & the terminal station of H. on the other, the distance from A. to H. being about four & a half miles; the railway co. possessed surplus & unoccupied lands in the district, upon part of which they had placed a siding for the delivery of coal; there was no physical or engineering difficulty in using part of such land for the establishment of a station at which traffic of every description could be dealt with:—Held: the co. had not contravened 1854 Act, s. 2, by omitting to provide a passenger station in the district; the number of passengers that would use such a station would be so limited that the saving to them of the inconvenience of going to H. was not a public gain sufficient to justify the Comrs. in requiring the co. to open a passenger station in the district of N.; the co. ought to provide siding accommodation reasonably sufficient for the receipt & delivery in N. of the station to station traffic of the district, & to give such a service as was given in corresponding circumstances to other places.—NEWINGTON LOCAL BOARD v. NORTH EASTERN RY. CO. (1878), 3 Ry. & Can. Tr. Cas. 306.

959. —— Jurisdiction of commissioners—Acquirement of additional land.]—(1) The Comrs. have jurisdiction to entertain an application under 1854 Act, s. 2, for an order compelling a railway co. to provide a station, on the ground that there are no stations in use where the traffic of a particular district traversed by the railway can come or go without public inconvenience.

(2) The Comrs. cannot order accommodation to be provided which entails the acquirement by the co. of additional land which they have no immediate power to take.—HARRIS v. LONDON & SOUTH WESTERN RY. CO. (1879), 3 Ry. & Can. Tr. Cas. 331.

960. —— ——.]—A railway co. ceased to use one of their branch lines for passenger traffic, & pulled down a station which had formerly been in use by passengers on the line. No obligation to maintain the station in use was imposed on the co. by any of their private Acts of Parliament. The Comrs. having ordered the co., under 1854 Act, s. 2, to afford reasonable facilities for the receiving & forwarding & delivering of passenger traffic on the line in question:—Held: the order was, in effect, an order to build & open a new station; the jurisdiction of the Comrs. to order a railway co. to afford all reasonable facilities under 1854 Act, s. 2, has reference only to a railway or a station in actual use; & the Comrs. had no jurisdiction to order a new station to be built.—DARLASTON LOCAL BOARD v. LONDON & NORTH WESTERN RY. (2) A railway co. who have an hotel of their own within the limits of the station may qualify their permission to other hotel proprietors & their servants to have free access to the platform with the condition that on those occasions no hotel servant shall wear a distinctive badge or livery.

Siding accommodation—Under special agreement—Approaches.]—A railway co. agreed with a landowner, through whose estate the railway would pass, to construct & maintain a siding connected with their railway at B., together with all necessary approaches thereto for public use, for the reception & delivery of goods:—Held: (1) specific performance could be decreed of the agreement to construct the siding & approaches without decreeing the co. to maintain them when made; (2) the agreement did not bind the co. to erect sheds, or to keep one of their servants in attendance at the siding; (3) it obliged them to construct a proper siding, with approaches & a wharf or raised platform for the loading & unloading of goods; (4) "necessary approaches" meant also "proper approaches."—LYTTON v. GREAT NORTHERN RY. 971. —— Connecting adjoining works.]—(1) A connection between an adjoining owner's works & a railway by means of a siding is a reasonable facility within 1854 Act, s. 2, which the Railway Comrs. have jurisdiction to order.

(2) The fact that such connections are granted to other traders at other places on the railway co.'s line & refused to appct. will, if the circumstances are shown to be the same, constitute an undue & unreasonable prejudice within the meaning of that sect.

(3) The "continuance" of a siding which has been constructed for the use of a particular individual may be a reasonable facility, to which that individual is entitled under that sect., so that the taking up of such a siding by the railway co., while competitors in trade of the individual in question were not deprived of a similar facility, would constitute an undue prejudice within the meaning of that sect.

(4) The siding having been constructed under an agreement between the railway co. & complainant, the Railway Comrs. had no jurisdiction in the matter.—BEESTON BREWERY CO. v. MIDLAND RY. CO. (No. 1) (1885), 5 Ry. & Can. Tr. Cas. 53.

972. —— Connecting with private sidings—Company's sidings appropriated for another purpose.]—Appct.'s sidings had communicated with sidings on resps.' railway for many years under a terminable agreement, which resps. terminated. An alteration recently made in an adjoining tunnel, which had fallen in, necessitated the exclusive appropriation of the sidings over which appct.'s traffic had formerly been worked to the purpose of providing refuge sidings for trains which met at the tunnel:—Held: resps. had shown to the satisfaction of the Ct. that their sidings had been bonâ fide appropriated for the specific purpose of use as refuge sidings, & that the use of them for appct.'s traffic would interfere with such use, & an application under 1845 Act, s. 76, for an order enjoining resps. to make, or permit to be made, such lines of rails as might be necessary for effecting a communication between the sidings of appct. & of resps. must be refused.—RICHARD v. GREAT WESTERN RY. Annotation:—Refd. Lancashire Brick & Terra Cotta Co. v. L. & Y. Ry., [1902] 1 K. B. 381.

973. —— —— Whether absolute right to.]—(1) 1845 Act, s. 76, is applicable only to communications required by the owners of the branch railways for the purpose of using the railway with their own engines and carriages, & does not entitle an adjoining owner, who makes a siding, to demand communication with the railway for the purpose of establishing a claim to facilities for his traffic.

(2) The limitation of the right of communication, between a railway & a private branch railway, to places where the communication can be made with safety to the public, & without injury to the railway & without inconvenience to the traffic thereon, does not relate solely to the structural difficulties of making an opening, but has reference also to difficulties arising from working the traffic on the railway.

(3) A siding having a gradient of 1 in 96 or 98 is not upon an "inclined plane" within 1845 Act, s. 76, which means a plane so inclined as to be incompatible with the reasonable insertion of a junction.—LANCASHIRE BRICK & TERRA COTTA CO. v. LANCASHIRE & YORKSHIRE RY. 974. Trucks—To trader refusing to pay demurrage.]—(1) A railway co. is justified in carrying goods for one person at a less rate than that at which they carry the same description of goods for another, if there be circumstances which render the cost to the co. of carrying for the former less than the cost of carrying for the latter.

(2) The North-Eastern Ry. Co. from a desire to introduce the northern coke into Staffordshire were induced to make special agreements with different merchants for the carriage of coal & coke at a rate lower than their ordinary charge:—Held: this was not a legitimate ground for making such agreements, & lowering their rates for that purpose, there being nothing to show that the pecuniary interests of the co. were affected, was giving an undue preference to the traffic.

(3) Held: a railway co. should not be required to provide trucks for the carriage of coal & coke for a merchant who refused to pay demurrage therefor at the same rate as was charged to all other merchants in similar circumstances.

(4) Held: the co. were not common carriers of coal.—Re OXLADE v. NORTH EASTERN RY. CO. (1857), 1 C. B. N. S. 454; 1 Ry. & Can. Tr. Cas. 72; 26 L. J. C. P. 129; 28 L. T. O. S. 340; 3 Jur. N. S. 637; 140 E. R. 186.

"shall provide & employ all such locomotive powers, engines, carriages, waggons, & other rolling stock, plant, stores, materials & labour, as shall be proper & sufficient for the working & user of the demised undertaking, & the reception, accommodation, conveyance & delivery by the A. Co. of the traffic thereof, & the B. Co. shall not be bound to provide any such thing":—Held: (1) the special Act imposed an obligation on the A. Co. to provide waggons proper, & sufficient for the working & user of the B. railway; (2) any one interested in procuring that accommodation had a ground of complaint under 1854 Act, s. 2, against the A. 977. Means of storage—At station to which goods sent.]—A railway co., having land adjoining one of their stations, let the whole of it to P., a coal merchant, for the purpose of storing coal brought by their line. P. did not require or actually use the whole of the land for this purpose. W., another coal merchant, applied to the co. to provide him on similar terms with land for storing coal, or to let to him the part of the land not actually used by P. The co. refused to do so W. then applied to the ct. under 1854 Act, s. 3, for an order compelling the co. to desist from allowing P. to store coals on the land, or to give similar facilities to him:—Held: (1) (BOVILL, C.J., & KEATING, J.) a means of storing coal at the station to which it is sent being a necessary facility for the proper carrying on of the coal trade, the co. had no right to grant greater facilities to P. than to W., & they ought to be restrained from doing so; (2) (MONTAGUE SMITH & BRETT, JJ.) 1854 Act only relates to facilities in the receiving, forwarding & delivering traffic, & the ct. has no jurisdiction to interfere with matters not relating to these, & facilities for storing coal after it has been delivered to the consignee do not relate to the receiving, forwarding, or delivering of traffic, & are not under the control of the ct.—WEST v. LONDON & NORTH WESTERN RY. 978. Locomotive power—For adequate & sufficient load—Special act.]—(1) A Railway Act (clause 66) gave the directors power to charge a sum for the conveyance of coal along the line, "including the tolls for the use of the railways & waggons, or trucks & locomotive power, & every expense incidental to such conveyance," which sum was to be a maximum sum, except in certain cases, the exception being thus expressed: "Except a reasonable sum for loading, covering, & unloading of goods, & delivery & collection, & any other services incidental to the business of a carrier, whether such services, or any of them, are or is to be performed by the co." The services in respect of which the excepted charges were claimed to be made were those of taking the waggons of a colliery owner from his own sidings & attaching them to the trains, or returning them from the line of the railway to the sidings of the colliery owner. Whatever particular difficulty arose in this work was occasioned by the position of the points effecting the junction of the line with the sidings:—Held: these were not services which came within the exception.

(2) At some of the stations the colliery owner had been allowed to leave his coals on the ground adjoining the lines:—Held: this might have been made the subject of an agreement for payment for any advantage thus obtained by him, but did not come within the description of a "service" contained in the exception.

(3) Another clause in the Act (clause 73) required that the co. should at all times "provide sufficient locomotive power, when & as the same shall be required, & as soon as an adequate & sufficient load shall be in readiness, to convey all merchandise," etc. The directors required the colliery owner to furnish a declaration of his having ready fifteen waggons with a minimum load of four tons in each waggon, & gave orders not to forward his coals in a smaller number of waggons containing coals. While this restriction existed the coals of other owners were carried in smaller quantities. It was found in the case that the "regulation requiring fifteen waggons was an unreasonable requirement.":—Held: this restriction was not warranted by the words of the clause, & the colliery owner having suffered in his business from such restriction, was entitled to damages on that account.

(4) The colliery owner had paid several of these sums, which in his action he sought to recover as overcharges, but he had paid them under protest, & for the purpose of obtaining possession of his goods:—Held: his payment of them in such circumstances was not a fact which would disqualify him from recovering them in an action for money had & received.

(5) The arbitrator had found upon this matter that pltf. was entitled to damages occasioned to pltf. by reason of loss of customers:—Held: his finding was right.—LANCASHIRE & YORKSHIRE RY. Co. v. GIDLOW (1875), L. R. 7 H. L. 517; 45 L. J. Q. B. 625; 32 L. T. 573; 24 W. R. 144, H. L.

979. —— Must be sufficient to work without undue delay—To haul with despatch.]—(1) Upon complaint by traders whose collieries & brickworks were connected by sidings with resps.' railway that resps. did not duly & properly work & manage their railway, & did not provide sufficient locomotive power for that purpose, & that they improperly & unnecessarily detained empty waggons destined for the collieries & works of appcts., & failed to haul away with regularity & despatch from the sidings connecting the works & collieries with the railway, loaded waggons placed ready for removal, the Comrs. held that the resps. did not according to their powers, afford all reasonable facilities for the receiving & forwarding & delivering of traffic upon & from their railway, & for the return of carriages & trucks; & the Comrs. ordered the resps. to work & manage their railway duly & properly, & to provide sufficient locomotive power & labour for that purpose, & to desist from unduly detaining empty or unloaded waggons destined for the collieries & works of the appcts., & to haul away with regularity & despatch from the sidings communicating with their railway loaded waggons properly placed ready for removal.

(2) It is the duty of a railway co. to inform any person interested, & applying to them for information, how much of each local or through rate in its entirety is for conveyance, & how much is for other expenses, specifying the nature & detail of such other expenses; if the information is withheld it will be ordered by the Railway Comrs. to be given, & to be made public by proper entries in the rate-book.

(3) A railway co. are not required under 1873 Act, s. 14, to show how the through rates quoted by them are divided between the railway cos. receiving them.

(4) Qu.: whether, if a railway co. is bound by its special Act, to weigh coal at the point of discharge, such weighing is a facility for delivery under 1854 Act, s. 2.

(5) A railway co. having been ordered to provide waggons for the working & uses of their railway, on being applied to for waggons for certain traffic, offered to supply them on condition that the waggons were loaded on the land of a railway worked by them:—Held: not a compliance with the order.—WATKINSON v. WREXHAM, MOLD & CONNAH'S QUAY RY. Co. (No. 3) (1880), 3 Ry. & Can. Tr. Cas. 446.

980. —— To haul trader's own trucks—Failure of company to provide sufficient trucks.]—(1) A railway co. are under no legal obligation to convey on their railway in all circumstances trucks belonging to a trader & loaded with the trader's goods on payment of tolls based on rates of carriage applicable to such goods alone. But if a railway co. fail to provide sufficient trucks for the conveyance of the goods of a particular trader the latter may provide his own trucks, & in that case the provision of motive power for the haulage of the trader's trucks is a reasonable facility for the forwarding & delivering of traffic within 1854 Act, s. 2. The question whether in a given case such provision is a reasonable facility is a question of fact for the Railway & Canal Commission, whose decision is final.

(2) The provision in Great Western Ry. Company (Rates and Charges) Order Confirmation Act, 1891, s. 2 (b), for the reduction of the authorised rate for conveyance where the co. do not provide trucks in which merchandise is carried on the railway does not apply where, although the co. are ready & willing to provide sufficient trucks, the trader prefers to use his own trucks, but only applies to cases where the trader uses his own trucks in order to supplement a deficiency in the supply of trucks by the co.—SPILLERS & BAKERS, LTD. v. GREAT WESTERN RY. 981. Delivery of goods — Determination of reasonable requirements.]—(1) A railway co. are under the same obligations as a common carrier undertaking to carry in accordance with 1854 Act; questions as to how far a sender of goods may require delivery at any station he may appoint, or as to how far a railway co. are liable to carry goods of every kind, or for all persons alike, are to be determined in each case, not with reference to what a railway co. may choose to do, or may ordinarily do, but with reference to what may be within their powers, & at the same time a reasonable requirement.

(2) A railway co. delivered minerals at T. station, but refused to deliver there damageable traffic consigned to appct., & delivered such traffic at L., one mile & a half from T., which was their general goods station for T. The accommodation at T. station was insufficient to receive all the T. goods traffic, & the co. had no power to enlarge it:—Held: appct. was not entitled to have damageable goods delivered at T.

(3) Semble: if the accommodation at T. had been sufficient to receive all traffic similarly sent,

t. Delivery of goods—At private siding.]—A ry. co., which had for 28 years received & delivered coal & goods at a private siding belonging to traders, informed them that, while they were willing to receive & deliver other goods as before, they would no longer deliver coal at the private siding.

In an application by the traders:—Held: the ct. of the Railway & Canal Commission had no jurisdiction to order a ry. co. to deliver traffic at a private siding, such sidings not being part of the "railway" within 1854 Act, s. 2, & the right of the ry. co. to refuse to deliver traffic at such sidings was not affected by the fact that they had in the past voluntarily received & delivered traffic at the siding, or that they were still voluntarily receiving & delivering traffic there in the case of goods other than the particular kind which they had refused to deliver.—COWAN & SONS v. NORTH BRITISH RY. 982. Collection of goods over foreign line—Convenient access.]—(1) A railway co. worked a line for the carriage of minerals which was connected with collieries by junctions to private sidings; they had no power to make a terminal charge for services at the junctions of their line with the sidings. The co. charged for drawing out from the sidings any trucks ready to start & attaching them to the train, & shunting & marshalling, a fixed sum of 3*d.* per ton, in addition to the mileage rate for conveyance on the co.'s own line:—Held: the co. were not entitled to make such charge, &, as the plan of each siding as well as its junction had received the approval of the engineer of the co., the owners of the sidings were entitled to have their traffic taken by the co. at the mileage rate, & free of any charge for terminal services, if they placed their trucks as near to the junctions as they could be brought with safety to the main line, arranged in proper order, & clear of any obstacles to their being moved away.

(2) A railway co. give only a reasonable facility in running over a portion of foreign line to collect traffic, properly placed for that purpose, where such line has been conveniently planned for their having access to it, & where they have no reserve line of their own.

(3) What determines whether a charge is a rate or a toll is not who provide the carriage or who provide the engine, but who are the carriers.

(4) The question whether a co. are bound to run over a foreign line & collect traffic therefrom without receiving any remuneration for so doing other than the mileage rate chargeable on their own railway, is a question of reasonableness, which is a question of fact.

(5) The question whether a co. were entitled to charge the tolls mentioned in their Act for the above-mentioned traffic, involved the question whether the co. were carriers or merely toll-takers, which was a question of fact.—WATKINSON v. WREXHAM, MOLD & CONNAH'S QUAY RY. Act, 1862, s. 34, provides for the co. laying down an additional rail or rails for the passage of engines & carriages adapted to the narrow gauge, requisite for the public service:—Held: "public service" did not mean Govt. service merely, but included any service which would supply wants felt by the public, or which the public might reasonably be desirous of having on its own behalf.—Re LAUNCESTON (INHABITANTS) APPLICATION, Re LAUNCESTON & SOUTH DEVON RY. ——Through traffic.]—See Sub-sect. 5, post.

986. "Feeder" made navigable under permissive Act—Failure to keep open—Advantages outbalanced by expense.]—A canal co. were authorised by their special Act, passed in 1793, to construct a canal for navigable purposes, & to construct feeders for supplying the canal with water. A special Act passed in 1794 authorised & empowered the co. to make navigable a cut some seven miles long which was at first intended to act only as a feeder in supplying the main canal with water, & to make applicable to it provisions of the Act of 1793, authorising the co. to levy tonnage & wharfage rates, & owners & proprietors of adjacent lands to use it for the carriage of their goods. In 1898, in consequence of a long continued drought, the water in it, except as to the part nearest the main canal, one mile & a half in length, was drawn off by the co. & used to replenish their main canal reservoirs. After the difficulty from want of water had ceased to exist, the co. refused to re-open the closed part of the branch for traffic.

Having regard to the dwindling traffic on the branch, the very large cost necessary to reinstate it, & the extra cost of maintaining it, if opened, owing to the porous nature of the chalk soil through which it was constructed, the traffic would not have been sufficient to compensate the co. for the outlay:—Held: (1) as the provision in the Act of 1794 to make the cut navigable was permissive only & not obligatory, & as the power under the Act of 1793 to make the branch as a feeder was not taken away by the power in

w. —— At passenger station—No goods station.]—Upon a complaint that the ry. co. did not afford due facilities for receiving & forwarding merchandise traffic at N. because they had not connected their railway with A. at the port of N. near their D. bridge station, it appeared that that station was used only for passenger traffic, & that goods & cattle arriving by railway & going on by sea, or arriving by sea & going on by railway, had to be taken by road between the port & the co.'s goods station at E. Street; the land upon which the passenger station was, not being large enough to afford a site for a goods station as well, & there being nothing to show from an agreement between the co. & a packet co. that the latter were bound to berth their vessels where they were then berthed, or that they were not at liberty to load or unload wherever they pleased, or even to discontinue running any vessels at all:—Held: 1854 Act, s. 2, was not contravened.—NEWRY NAVIGATION CO. v. GREAT NORTHERN RY. CO. OF IRELAND (1889), 7 Ry. & Can. Tr. Cas. 176.—IR.

x. —— Through named carrier—Refusal of company to recognise traders' general orders.]—A ry. co. employed W., a carrier, under a contract, to deliver all goods, carried by the ry. co. to D., at cartage rates, & not invoiced to be delivered by particular carriers. Traders in D. sent to the ry. co. general orders to hand over to B., other carriers in D., for cartage, all inwards traffic consigned to them. The ry. co. refused to recognise or act upon such general orders:—Held: the refusal to obey such general orders was not a denial of reasonable facilities for the delivery of traffic.—WALLIS & SONS v. GREAT NORTHERN RY. CO. OF IRELAND (1903), 12 Ry. & Can. Tr. Cas. 38.—IR.

a. —— In traders' trucks.]—The question whether it is a reasonable facility that goods should be conveyed in traders' trucks is one of fact, & necessarily depends on the circumstances of the case. In considering that question, the Railway Comrs. are not confined to the convenience of the traders in a particular case, but may take into consideration the interests of the ry. co. as well as those of the traders, the comparative cost & convenience, & the effect of the facility sought on other traders & the public using the line.—CALEDONIAN RY. CO., GLASGOW & SOUTH WESTERN the Act of 1794 to make it navigable, the co. were entitled to keep the cut, or any part of it open as a feeder only without thereby incurring any obligation to maintain & keep it open for traffic; (2) the fact that the co. kept a part open for traffic did not impose upon them the obligation of keeping the whole branch open for traffic; (3) the ct. could not, under colour of ordinary reasonable facilities under the Traffic Acts, order the co. to work what they were not otherwise compellable to work & were not in fact working; (4) as the cost of restoring & maintaining the branch for traffic would be far in excess of any advantage which could accrue either to appcts. & other landowners & traders using the branch, or to the co. themselves, the facility claimed was not reasonable.

(4) There may be many cases in which a railway or canal co. could properly be ordered to give facilities, the cost of which may greatly exceed the benefit of them to them or to appcts.—ROTHSCHILD (LORD) v. GRAND JUNCTION CANAL CO. SUB-SECT. 4.—AS TO PASSENGER TRAINS.

988. Trains—Stopping of—Times & places of stopping.]—(1) The ct. refused to grant a writ of injunction under 1854 Act, on the complaint of a co. having a branch on a trunk-line, to restrain the parent co. from charging higher rates for the conveyance of passengers to the complainants' terminus, than they charged for the conveyance of passengers to the terminus of another branch line, in which they themselves were interested, extending over the same number of miles. To constitute an "undue or unreasonable preference" within the Act, by reason of an inequality of charge, it must be an inequality in the charge for travelling over the same line or the same portion of the line.

(2) To induce the ct. to interfere on a complaint by the proprietors of a branch line, that a sufficient number of trains of the main line do not stop at the junction, or stop at inconvenient times, it must be distinctly shown that sufficient accommodation is not afforded to meet the fair requirements of the public.

(3) It is no ground of complaint that the co. working the main line refuse to grant third-class return tickets to the branch line, if it appears that no such tickets are issued to other branches similarly situated.

(4) Semble: it is a good ground of complaint that there is no place of shelter provided at the junction for passengers on the branch line waiting the arrival of trains; the public being entitled in this respect to reasonable accommodation.—CATERHAM RY. This agreement was to continue in force until the latter co. carried passengers to a new terminus. The agreement was made before the two cos. were authorised by Act of Parliament to enter into working & traffic arrangements with respect to the joint line & railways communicating with it:—Held: (1) such an agreement had no validity, so far at least as the Ct. of the Railway Comrs. was concerned; (2) the Ct. will not interfere unless an undue preference or prejudice arises from the distinction.

(3) On a complaint that the trains were too few & that the trains to V. terminus had been taken off:—Held: the Comrs. had jurisdiction to order the cos. to conform to every part of 1854 Act, s. 2, & to conduct their business so as to give the public all reasonable facilities; & (4) it having been shown that the trains were sufficient in number, except as to V., the Comrs. pointed out that proper accommodation might be provided by a transfer station.

It was found necessary for the safety & despatch of the trains that trains should run at intervals of 10 minutes, & that the running of the ordinary trains up to 2 p.m. should be suspended. The co. did not suspend the running of the daily Parliamentary train:—Held: (1) the co. had not failed to afford "all reasonable facility" for the ordinary traffic within 1854 Act, s. 2; (2) they were entitled to charge the special rate.—LAWRIE v. LONDON & SOUTH WESTERN RY. There was a substantial passenger traffic to be carried:—Held: the co. were bound to afford facilities which should be reasonable in all the circumstances for the conveyance of that traffic.

They will not interfere, at the instance of an individual, where there is a continuous line by which through tickets may be obtained, though by a somewhat longer route, no additional cost or serious loss of time being thereby incurred, & no substantial inconvenience being thereby occasioned to the public, & if it appears that no complaints had been made of the inadequacy of the existing accommodation.—Re BARRET v. GREAT NORTHERN RY. 998. —— —— Necessities of existing traffic.]—Two railway cos. ran trains to M. & each had a station there. The stations were half a mile apart, & were connected by a line of railway belonging to one of the cos., & which was used for the transit of goods only. Upon an application for the provision of through passenger trains & through booking of passengers over the continuous lines of railway & for an arrangement of the time-tables to allow passengers to avail themselves of the trains of both cos. without delay:—Held: (1) an order for reasonable facilities, without specifying what they were, must issue; (2) no case had been made out of public necessity which would at all justify an order for a through service of trains, or even carriages going through from the one system to the other; (3) a good covered footpath between the two stations, with the necessary porterage for luggage, for passengers passing from the one to the other, with through booking, would amply meet the necessities of the traffic then existing; (4) an existing important up & down main line traffic would not be sacrificed to provide through communication for an insignificant local traffic.

(5) With regard to reasonable facilities, this is a jurisdiction to be exercised essentially with reference to practical considerations, in a reasonable & moderate spirit, of protection to the public on the one hand, & of reasonable consideration for the great interests represented by railway cos. on the other hand. It cannot be right to put cos. to an excessive & exorbitant expenditure for the sake of accommodating a very small & insignificant traffic.—SUSSEX COUNTY COUNCIL v. LONDON, BRIGHTON & SOUTH COAST RY. Co. to run trains over a disused branch line; & upon non-compliance with the order, made a further order imposing penalties upon both cos. for their disobedience:—Held: the first order was invalid, & a prohibition must be granted to restrain the comrs. from enforcing it; for, assuming that they had jurisdiction to require each co. separately to give facilities according to its powers, they were not entitled to order two cos. to act jointly in doing what neither could do separately.

Sect. 1.—Reasonable facilities: Sub-sect. 5.]

C. W. Ry. Co. provided that seven other cos. should afford all proper & sufficient facilities, including through rates, to traffic passing to, from, or over the railway of the C. W. Co. from or to any railway of the seven cos., or any railway connected with them, & that the terms & conditions, pecuniary or otherwise, on which the traffic facilities should be afforded, & the amount and apportionment of the through rates should, failing agreement, be determined by arbn. under 1873 Act:—Held: (1) the Act requires facilities to be afforded to all traffic passing over the line of the C. W. Co. which either comes from or is destined to some point upon & which during its whole course passes uninterruptedly over railways belonging to one or more of the seven companies, or connected for purposes of management or working with one or more of them; (2) the Act does not grant through rates absolutely, & the sufficiency of through rates existing at any time & the propriety of granting others are among the matters which, failing agreement, are to be referred to arbn.; (3) "connected with," means connected for the purposes of management or working, & not merely physically connected; (4) the traffic facilities, including through rates, are, in the absence of agreement, to be determined by the Railway Comrs., who have full power to say whether it is proper that there should be a through rate.—GREAT WESTERN RY. CO. v. CENTRAL WALES & CARMARTHEN JUNCTION RY. CO. (1885), 5 Ry. & Can. Tr. Cas. 1.

1003. —— Working agreement—Whether route reasonable.] — (1) An agreement between the G. N. Ry. Co. & the M. S. & L. Ry. Co., confirmed by M. S. & L. Ry. (Extension to London, etc.) Act, 1893, provided for a complete system of through booking & through rates & fares by all reasonable & convenient routes & that each co. should conduct the through traffic of the other in good faith & by through trains, & should afford all such reasonable facilities & accommodation as regards traffic of all kinds as was usual between friendly railway cos. for the convenient conduct & exchange of traffic passing or destined to pass between the respective systems of the cos. Resps. having completed their line to London, certain fish traffic was handed to them at Grimsby for conveyance to London "viâ G. N. Ry." This had hitherto been so forwarded, but resps. conveyed it by their own route to London & delivered it themselves:—Held: the route being primâ facie a reasonable one, the G. N. Ry. Co. would have primâ facie the right of requiring traffic to be carried by it on reasonable terms; there being also primâ facie a contract to that effect, & as an interim injunction would not harm resps., provided accounts were kept, & the absence of it might seriously damage appcts. an interim injunction should be granted.

G. N. Ry. (Communication with the M. S. & L. Ry.) Act, 1851, ss. 14, 15, gave the G. N. Ry. Co. reasonable right of access to the tidal basin in Grimsby for fish traffic, & access to & accommodation at the docks for the goods traffic, including the right to rent a piece of land for warehouses, the sites, terms, & conditions, to be agreed upon by their engineers, & in the event of a difference to be settled by arbn. under Companies Clauses Act, 1845 (c. 16). West Riding & Grimsby Ry. (Transfer) Act, 1866, s. 31, gave the G. N. Ry. Co. running powers over certain railways situate between B. & Grimsby, including the docks at Grimsby & the railways leading thereto. The docks had been completely changed & the "tidal basin" no longer existed:—Held: (2) the Comrs. had jurisdiction under 1888 Act, s. 9 (a), to enforce the performance of the obligations imposed by the sects., & also to determine the warehouse site, under s. 9 (c), where the term "individual" means "any legal person not the general public"; (3) before the ct. would make an effective order, or grant an injunction under Act of 1851, appcts. must put forward a definite scheme to be considered by resps.; (4) the G. N. Ry. Co. could not then (1899) be considered in the same position as if they had asserted their rights immediately after the passing of the Act of 1851; they must show that their scheme was reasonably possible; (5) s. 31 of Act of 1866 gave appcts. the right to run over & use the whole of the railways in the docks & all the appurtenances thereto, as the term "docks" in the sect. could not reasonably be considered merely a definition of the terminus ad quem; but appcts. must first show that the exercise of those powers of user could be so regulated as not to interfere with the convenient conduct of the business of the docks; (6) the G. N. Ry. Co. were entitled under the Traffic Acts to have the trucks for their fish traffic placed in as favourable a position for loading as the trucks of the G. C. Ry. Co.

Semble: as regards s. 14 of Act of 1851, it was a condition precedent to the Comrs. having jurisdiction that the engineers of the two cos. should have considered the matter & disagreed.—GREAT NORTHERN RY. CO. v. GREAT CENTRAL RY. CO. (1899), 10 Ry. & Can. Tr. Cas. 266.

Ry. line over a short length of the M. Co.'s line. In 1908, the L. Co. with other cos., including the G. Co., obtained a direct route of their own to D. & refused to receive & forward at the junctions traffic consigned by the G. Co. to places on or beyond the L. Ry., claiming that by a

Where an agreement between two ry. cos. does not provide for carrying through passenger & coaching traffic, the comrs. have jurisdiction to entertain an application under 1854 Act, s. 2, for an order to afford reasonable facilities for such traffic. The fact that appcts. for such order are the owning ry. co. & defts. the working ry. co., does not of itself prevent such application being entertained.—SOLWAY JUNCTION RY. CO. v. CALEDONIAN RY. B. E. Co.—NORTH EASTERN RY. Co. v. NORTH BRITISH RY. Co. (1897), 10 Ry. & Can. Tr. Cas. 82.—SCOT.

custom recognised among railway cos. traffic from D. to places on their railway had since the opening of their own route become their local traffic & ought not to be the subject of competition by the G. Co. :—Held : (1) the practice as to local traffic being non-competitive had no force or validity in law ; & the L. Ry. must accept the traffic at the three junctions, but they were not bound to receive & forward it at A., as there were no sidings or other facilities for exchange at the point of junction ; (2) the fact that the G. 1005. —— Where continuous line exists.]—(1) Two railway cos. ran trains to T., & each had a station there. The stations were a mile apart from each other, but were connected by a line of railway, which was used for the transit of goods only. The two railway systems were intended by the Legislature to join at T. Upon complaint by the inhabitants of the district that no passengers were conveyed on the railway between the two stations, although there was a continuous line of railway :—Held : the case came within 1854 Act, s. 2, & the cos. should afford a continuous communication for passengers as well as for goods by means of their continuous lines.

(2) A railway co. received goods for conveyance to places on the railway of another co. with which their line was continuous, but only invoiced the goods to the end of their own railway where the goods were rebooked :—Held : through booking was a reasonable facility which the sending co. might be required to afford.

(3) Appcts. had resolved not to apply the public funds or rates under their control to the payment of the costs & expenses of the application but lent their name for the purposes of the appiication to persons against whom deft. cos. could have no remedy :—Held : they had nevertheless power to proceed.

(4) If such high rates are charged as to be prohibitive or obstructive they would come within 1854 Act, as obstructing or hindering the forwarding & delivering of traffic.—UCKFIELD LOCAL BOARD v. LONDON, BRIGHTON & SOUTH COAST RY. CO. & SOUTH EASTERN RY. CO. (1875), 2 Ry. & Can. Tr. Cas. 214.

(2) Appcts., lessees of a colliery, situated on the N. Ry., at a short distance from its junction with the M. Ry. to S., were prevented sending the traffic of their colliery to S. by the railways of the two cos., which formed a direct route, & in consequence had to send it by a circuitous route. The two railways formed a continuous line of communication, & physically, there was no difficulty in the traffic of the colliery being carried to S. by the direct route :—Held : appcts. were entitled, under 1854 Act, s. 2, to have their traffic conveyed by any route they pleased, & to use the two railways as if they were one continuous line.—VICTORIA COAL & IRON CO. v. NEATH & BRECON & MIDLAND RY. To permit of the exchange of traffic required by appcts., sidings & other accommodation at one of the junctions was necessary :—Held : (1) the failure to provide these during the time the cos. were considering the alterations which were necessary to enable the S. Co. to exercise their running powers over those connecting lines, was not a failure to provide facilities for the receiving, forwarding & delivery of traffic ; (2) the route, until so completed & sanctioned by the Board of Trade, was not a continuous line of railway communication.

SUB-SECT. 6.—CHEAP TRAINS.

See Cheap Trains Act, 1883 (c. 34); 1921 Act, s. 34.

1011. What are—Exemption of fares from duty—Weekly workmen's tickets—Dispensing power of Board of Trade.]—(1) Every train, running between the terminal stations from one end to the other of a line of railway, & conveying passengers to & from such terminal, & every intermediate ordinary passenger station, at fares not exceeding the Parliamentary rate, & complying with the several other conditions mentioned in Railway Regulation Act, 1844 (c. 85), s. 6, so far as they have not been dispensed with by the Board of Trade under s. 8 of the Act, is a cheap train within the Act, notwithstanding that there may be no third class carriage in such train.

(2) The fares of passengers by such cheap train are entitled to exemption from duty, under s. 9 if they do not exceed the Parliamentary rate, whether the tickets issued to such passengers are first, second, or third class tickets, or whether such passengers travel in first, second, or third class carriages.

(3) Such exemption is not lost by such passengers being required, for the convenience of traffic, to move, at any particular station, from one such cheap train to another, provided that there is no unreasonable detention at such station, so as to reduce the speed at which such passengers travel below the minimum speed required by the Act.

(4) No train is a cheap train within the Act, whether approved of by the Board of Trade as a "cheap train" or not, which does not stop at every intermediate ordinary passenger station between the terminal stations, & which does not convey some class of passengers to & from every station at fares not exceeding the Parliamentary rate; the fares of the passengers by any such train, notwithstanding that they may not exceed such rate, are not exempt from duty.

(5) The fares received for return tickets are not exempt from duty, unless the fares that would be charged to the same class of passengers for the single journey, over the same distance, would not exceed the Parliamentary rate.

(6) The fares received for weekly workmen's tickets, issued at fares which, if such tickets were fully used, would not exceed the Parliamentary rate, but which tickets are only used for trains running over a portion only of the entire line, & which are subject to a condition limiting the nature & also the amount of luggage to be carried without extra charge, contrary to the provisions of s. 6 of the Act, & without the dispensation of the Board of Trade, are not exempt from duty.

(7) Semble: The fares on such workmen's tickets would be within the exemption in s. 9, if the tickets were issued to passengers travelling by cheap trains, as above defined, & if the conditions as to luggage were dispensed with by the Board of Trade.

(8) The dispensing power of the Board of Trade, under s. 8 is confined to the conditions expressly so called, at the end of s. 6, relating to stations other than the ordinary passenger stations, & does not extend to the requirements in the previous part of the sect.; the Board, therefore, have no power to dispense with the condition requiring a cheap train to stop at every ordinary passenger station between the terminal stations, & to carry passengers to & from all such stations at the Parliamentary rate of fare.—NORTH LONDON RY. (4) A train is not the less a workmen's train within the Act because a railway co. run first & second class carriages with the third class carriages.—Re METROPOLITAN RY. CO. (1892), 8 Ry. & Can. Tr. Cas. 32.

1019. —— What court must consider.]—(1) The Ct. will only exercise their powers under Cheap Trains Act, 1883, where the demand for accommodation is sufficiently large to bear some relation to the difficulty of giving that accommodation, & where there is some comparison between the benefit which will be afforded by an order of the Ct. for the accommodation asked for & the cost to the railway co. of giving it.

(2) Semble: persons employed in the postal service as letter-sorters & postmen are workmen within the Act.

(3) A special service of trains is not to be provided for every section of every kind of employment.—Re FAWCETT ASSOCN. & LONDON, BRIGHTON & SOUTH COAST RY. CO. (1899), 10 Ry. & Can. Tr. Cas. 299.

1020. —— —— Number of first class coaches—Compartments for females.]—The Great Eastern Ry. Co. are required, by a private Act, to run one stopping train daily each way, not later than 7 a.m. inwards, between L. & E. & L. & W. respectively, for artisans, mechanics & daily labourers, both male & female, & having business daily in London, at fares not exceeding 1*d.* for the journey each way.

The Co. voluntarily extended the E. service to N., & ran a frequent service of trains between the hours of 5 a.m. & 8 a.m. at cheap rates for the benefit of workmen and other persons residing on the N., W. & S. branches & having employment in London. These trains were of two kinds, cheap trains run between the hours of 5 a.m. & 6.47 a.m., at a fare of 2*d.* for a return ticket, the last of these trains being timed to arrive at L. not later than 6.47 a.m., & cheap trains, by which workmen are allowed to travel at half the ordinary return fares (with a minimum of 4*d.*) timed to reach L. after 6.47 a.m. & before 8 a.m. The existing 2*d.* trains could not accommodate all the workpeople requiring to come to London for their work, & numbers of them had no alternative but to travel by the half-fare trains. Hours of labour had become later, in many cases not beginning until 8 a.m. or 9 a.m., so that workpeople in order to have the benefit of the cheapest trains had to travel by trains which brought them to London an hour, or even two hours, too soon. The Co. offered to add three new 2*d.* trains to arrive in London between 6.47 a.m. & 7 a.m.:—Held: (1) in addition, the co. must run as an experiment at least two trains from E., two trains from W., & one train from S., starting after 7 a.m., & arriving in London as near 8 a.m. as possible, at fares less than the half-fares then charged; a reasonable fare would be 3*d.* return, except between S. & L., which should be 2*d.* return; (2) every train which comprised three first-class coaches should contain only one first class coach; (3) compartments for females ought to be provided in all the trains, & a sufficient proportion of tickets assigned for them if any system of reserved trains or places was adopted. (4) The question of whether there is a remunerative profit from the fares by workmen's trains is not a matter which the Court will consider.—Re LONDON REFORM UNION & GREAT EASTERN RY. CO. (1899), 10 Ry. & Can. Tr. Cas. 280.

1021. —— —— Through service.]—(1) The Railway Comrs. will not order workmen's trains to be run under the Cheap Trains Act, 1883, unless there is proved to be in existence a class of workmen residing on the railway & requiring such a service. The fact that an improved workmen's train service might relieve a congested district in London by inducing workmen to reside outside the metropolis, does not justify the Comrs. in ordering such an improved service.

(2) Proof by a railway co. of no profit, or even a loss, on running workmen's trains, is not sufficient answer to a complaint of the non-provision of proper & sufficient workmen's trains.

(3) Semble: where two railway cos. maintain a through passenger service between their systems by agreement with each other, but have no statutory running powers over each other's lines, the Comrs. have jurisdiction to order a proper service of workmen's trains to be provided for that through service.—Re LONDON REFORM UNION & NATIONAL ASSOCN. FOR THE EXTENSION OF WORKMEN'S TRAINS & GREAT NORTHERN RY. CO. & NORTH LONDON RY. CO. (1899), 10 Ry. & Can. Tr. Cas. 293.

1022. —— —— Fixing reasonable fares.]—(1) In order to found their jurisdiction to make an order pursuant to the Cheap Trains Act, 1883, for the running of workmen's trains, the Comrs. must be satisfied that there is a reasonable existing demand for workmen's trains in the localities, & next, if this point is established, they must settle what are the reasonable fares to be charged.

(2) In fixing such fares they have to consider not only what the workmen can afford to pay, but also the circumstances of the railway co., such as the cost of running, & that of the construction and maintenance of the line & stations. It would not be reasonable to compel the railway co. to run at a permanent loss.

(3) It is no part of the duty of the Comrs. to aid a local authority to open out a new working class district; they can only deal with an existing demand.—LONDON COUNTY COUNCIL v. GREAT EASTERN RY. CO. (1911), 4 Ry. & Can. Tr. Cas. 224; 75 J. P. 301; 27 T. L. R. 317; 9 L. G. R. 1071.

Semble: if the overcharges were of such an amount & of such a nature that they had the effect, or it could be presumed that they were made with the intention, of preventing the use by passengers of particular trains & stations, the Comrs. might have jurisdiction to entertain a complaint in respect of them as being a refusal of facilities within the sect. SUB-SECT. 1.—WHO MAY APPLY.

1027. Who may apply—Railway company—Interested in through traffic.]—(1) Appcts., a railway co., owning a line which communicated at either end with two other railway systems, applied as against both cos. to the Railway Comrs. for an order for a through route & rate to be allowed for goods via their line from a station on the one co.'s line to a station on the other co.'s line. Appcts. had no rolling stock, & their line was wholly worked by another co. under an agreement by which the receipts for through traffic were apportioned according to mileage. They did, however, manage their own line & collect & forward their own traffic, the whole of the staff at the stations on their line being employed & paid by them:—Held: appcts. were entitled to the order, as (a) they were a railway co. within 1873 Act, s. 11, entitled to require through traffic to be forwarded, & (b) the traffic in question was "through traffic to or from their railway" as defined in the sect.

A proposed through route was fifty-six miles shorter than the route over which the traffic was being carried, & was worked not less conveniently as regards the railway cos. by whom the traffic was handled before it got to its destination; the proposed rate was of less amount, & presumably, therefore, more beneficial to the public, while, being more in proportion to distance than the rate by the other route, it yielded a larger sum per mile to the cos. carrying, and was, therefore, not obviously unreasonable as against them:—Held: (2) the route was reasonable, & the public were interested in the rate being granted; (3) where a good primâ facie case of public interest existed on general considerations, it was not necessary to bring evidence to prove a special case as well.

(4) The rate for flour by the existing route was 15*s.* a ton, & the through rate proposed was 13*s.* a ton in lots of two tons or more, station to station, at owner's risk:—Held: any traffic carried by this route at co.'s risk should go at the existing local rates, unless & until the cos. chose to make some other arrangement. The Comrs. had no power to alter the gross amount of a proposed through rate, & must therefore either refuse the rate, or alter the apportionment of the rate so as to neutralise as far as possible the effect of the proposed reduction upon the cos. then carrying the traffic.—GREAT WESTERN RY. 1028. —— —— ——.]—(1) To entitle a railway co. to apply for an order for through rates under 1873 Act, s. 11, it is enough that it is a co. with an interest in the through route, & it is not necessary to measure its interest & to refuse it a locus standi, even though its proposals should be more of detriment to the other railway cos. than a benefit to itself, the other conditions to which the granting of through rates is subject amply providing for the fair interests of all railway cos., large or small, being considered & allowed for. For the particular facility of through rates, an application by the smallest co. stands on a footing of equality with the largest.

(2) The method in which traffic is to be worked enters as much into the reasonableness of a route as the physical fitness or unfitness of a line.

A proposed through rate for coal traffic entailed a traffic being forced upon the carrying co. which they would have to work over twenty-six miles of line under running powers & upon the terms of paying all receipts, less only a percentage for working expenses, to the owning co., & which the co. who own the line & work & use it for every sort of traffic would be perfectly able to accommodate : —Held : the proposed route, which otherwise had many advantages, was not on the whole a reasonable route, owing to the mode in which the traffic was required to be worked over one portion of it.

(3) As a general rule, in apportioning through rates, it is reasonable that where a railway co. have a very short distance that it should have more in proportion than the co. which has a long distance.—SEVERN & WYE & SEVERN BRIDGE RY. (2) When a railway co. has agreed rates from a port to inland towns with other cos. in their joint interest, such rates should not be treated as local rates of that co., so as to compel them to carry to the common point from another port at rates equal, distance for distance, to such agreed rates. —MANCHESTER SHIP CANAL CO. v. MIDLAND RY. 1033. —— ——.]—Appcts. were the owners of a light railway constructed on an estate adjoining the Ship Canal at Manchester, & connected with the railway of the Cheshire Lines Committee at a certain junction. In 1906 appcts. entered into an agreement with the Committee & the M., G. N., & G. C. Ry. In 1915 appcts. were erecting on the estate a bonded warehouse which they intended to use for tobacco traffic, & they made to the Cheshire Lines Committee & to the M. Ry. The proposals were refused, & appcts. applied to the ct. for through routes & certain through rates for tobacco leaf from their bonded warehouse to London & to Bristol over the lines of the Committee & the M. 1038. Objection that maximum remuneration insufficient—Validity of.]—A railway co. were authorised by their special Act to charge a maximum sum for the conveyance of coal along their line, to include every expense incidental to the conveyance, but by a proviso they might charge in addition a reasonable sum for the delivery or collection of goods, & other incidental services to the business of a carrier:—Held: (1) shunting & marshalling the coal traffic, & the provision of siding accommodation & unloading platforms with approach roads were not services for which a charge could be made under the proviso; (2) invoicing & taking accounts of all consignments, & the expense of keeping a staff & offices for the purpose, & giving notice to the consignees of each consignment, were not services for which a charge could be made, but were services incidental to conveyance, & so included in the mileage rate.

(3) To a proposed through rate made up of a rate for the I. Ry. Co. at the maximum which the co. had the power to charge, the only objection was as regards the portion appropriated to the I. Ry. Co., viz. that their maximum was not sufficient:—Held: not a valid objection, & as the through rate was advisable in the interest of the public, it should be allowed.

(4) It would be unreasonable, that a railway co. should receive more out of the through rate than it could receive for carrying similar traffic at a local rate.—ISLE OF WIGHT (NEWPORT JUNCTION) RY. CO. v. ISLE OF WIGHT RY. CO. (1882), 4 Ry. & Can. Tr. Cas. 128.

1039. Desirability of alternative routes.]—To a proposed through rate by a route shorter by 57 miles than a route on which through rates already existed it was objected that the proposed rates were not in the public interest, because the quantity of traffic to which they could apply was small; because no time would be saved if the traffic were carried by the proposed route; & that the number of exchanges on the portion of the proposed through route worked by other companies was great:—Held: (1) these were not reasons for refusing through rates any more than they would be for withholding facilities under 1854 Act, s. 2. That through rates exist by an alternative route, & that to maintain competition by the proposed route a similar facility is necessary, is a reason for granting through rates; (2) that the distance between the points of arrival & departure of two through routes is the same, is too vague a ground for deciding that the rates charged in respect of these routes should be the same.—CENTRAL WALES & CARMARTHEN JUNCTION RY. CO. v. LONDON & NORTH WESTERN RY. CO. & GREAT WESTERN RY. CO. (1883), 4 Ry. & Can. Tr. Cas. 211.

1040. ——.]—A route, for which through rates are proposed, that would be a reasonable & serviceable route if worked throughout by one railway co., does not lose its serviceableness because two or more cos. are concerned in working it.

The S. Ry. formed an alternative route between certain stations on the G. W. Ry. & other stations on the S. W. Ry. The S. Ry. Co. applied for through rates between such stations viâ their railway, the rates to be the same as the existing rates between such stations by the competitive route, which were agreed through rates; the route proposed by the S. Ry. Co. would effect a great saving in time & distance; the transfers at junctions were the same by either route:—Held: (1) the through rates & route proposed should be allowed; the interests of the public were, in the circumstances, in favour of the existence of an alternative railway route at equal rates; (2) rates that excluded traffic from the shorter of these two routes, & confined it to the longer, could not but be at the expense of public policy; & though the quantity of traffic might be insignificant, & equal rates might not have much effect in developing through traffic by the route in question, it was a principle of importance to the public that a route between places offering the best opportunities for railway carriage, as far as distance was concerned, should not be placed at a disadvantage merely because portions of the route belonged to cos. which had an alternative route & made lower charges in favour of the latter.

(3) It would be an undue preference if a co., as to traffic of the same description going between the same places, worked it at through rates if the traffic passed off their line at one point, & refused that facility if it passed off their line at another point.—SWINDON, MARLBOROUGH & ANDOVER RY. 1043. ——.]—The railways or parts of the railways of the S. Ry. Co., the L. Ry. Co., the D. Ry. Co., & the H. Ry. Co. formed a continuous route from D. Colliery to the A. dock, Hull. The L. Ry. Co. were joint owners of the S. Ry. & had a controlling interest in the D. Ry., & were authorised by statute to fix & quote through rates over the former railway. A through rate for coal between the above points was already in operation by means of another route owned as to part by the G. Ry. Co., & as to part by the H. Ry. Co., four miles shorter than the proposed route, & the owning cos. worked the traffic over their own railways respectively. The existing rate was governed by the rate charged by another co. who owned a third competitive route to Hull (but not to the A. dock) 22 miles shorter than the existing G. & H. route. The annual coal traffic between the points in question was 80,000 to 90,000 tons. The L. Ry. Co. & D. Ry. Co. applied for a through rate for coal between the above points of the same amount as the existing through rates:—Held: (1) the proposed rate was a reasonable facility, & must be granted subject to the condition that defts., in view of the circumstances of the case, should be allowed the same tonnage apportionment thereof as they received out of the existing rate, over the alternative route of which they were part owners; (2) as defts. were not carrying throughout the entire alternative route, 1888 Act, s. 25 (9), did not apply to the application.—LANCASHIRE & YORKSHIRE RY. CO. & DEARNE VALLEY RY. CO. v. HULL & BARNSLEY RY. CO. (1912), 15 Ry. & Can. Tr. Cas. 59.

B. Reasonableness of Route.

See 1921 Act, s. 47 (3).

1044. Whether route reasonable—Considerations of distance.]—A sending co. having two alternative routes for through traffic, one eight miles longer than the other, proposed, for the purpose of a through rate, to carry by the longer one, at a double cost & labour in working & maintaining the junctions, with the object of making their own mileage more & the mileage of the forwarding co. less:—Held: (1) such longer route was not a reasonable route, within 1873 Act, s. 11 (5); (2) if the co. wished to take the through traffic by the longer route, it would be a fair arrangement to allow them that route, but to stipulate that they should not receive anything out of the through rate for the excess of distance & the gratuitous addition to the total mileage, though they would still receive a larger proportion of the through rate by such route than by the other.

(3) A "route," within 1873 Act, s. 11, is a route from the station on the sending line, where the traffic arises, to the station on the forwarding line where such traffic is delivered.

(4) The comrs. will judge of the reasonableness of a route by the circumstances for & against it, & upon a full consideration of all the circumstances to which their attention is called.—EAST & WEST JUNCTION RY. CO. v. GREAT WESTERN RY. CO. (1874), 1 Ry. & Can. Tr. Cas. 331; 31 L. T. 762.

1047. —— ——.]—A route proposed for the traffic for which through rates were asked, from S. to P., the London terminus of G. Co., was 15 miles longer than the route between S. & N. E. a terminus of L. Co., & contrasted unfavourably with the latter in method of working, but it had advantages in other ways in that parts of London were connected by rail with P. & not with N. E.:—Held: (1) the route was a reasonable route; (2) it was not for the benefit of the public that the carrying trade between two termini should be restricted to one railway co. to the exclusion of others, when one of such termini was in London, where no single station could possibly serve conveniently as its only centre for every part of the metropolis; (3) it was no answer to this application for through rates, so far as through booking or invoicing was involved in it, that it touched traffic which the L. Co. carried as local traffic, & claimed to be non-competitive, or that it set up a mixed control over rates to & from S., which, from the constant changes called for to meet special circumstances, or to get the best possible return for their outlay on the docks, the L. Co. considered they alone should be concerned with.

1049. —— Probability of efficiency.]—(1) 1854 Act, s. 2, gives a customer a right to require any number of railway cos. in Great Britain to combine to form a continuous route by which his traffic may be sent at a single booking & for a single payment.

(2) 1854 Act gives every customer the right to select what co. he pleases to deliver his traffic to & to require, without a second booking or payment, that the traffic shall be delivered at the station he desires, provided there are proper facilities for receiving it & delivering it at the stations he selects & that there is a continuous connecting route.

(3) Apart from a through rate, the charge for the transit is the total of the local rates of the various cos. over whose line the traffic passes.

(4) A railway co. may, apart from the question of through rates, collect what traffic it can, carry it as far as it can by its own line, & at the point

PART X. SECT. 2, SUB-SECT. 2.—B.

1044 i. Whether route unreasonable.]—A route is not unreasonable within 1873 Act, s. 11, because the delivering co. propose to hand over to the forwarding co. long distance competitive traffic, at a junction but a few miles from its destination on the forwarding co.'s line, where the delivering co.'s route between the two junctions is the shorter, because the forwarding co. could receive the traffic at another junction further distant from its destination & forward it thence by their own route.—CALEDONIAN RY. CO. v. NORTH BRITISH RY. CO. (No. 4) (1880), 3 Ry. & Can. Tr. Cas. 403.—SCOT.

Sect. 2.—Through rates: Sub-sect. 2, B. & C.]

most convenient to itself, hand it over to the co. which is to forward it.

(5) The Comrs. must, unless they refuse the rate altogether (which they will not do unless the rate is so high as to make it useless to the public, or so low as to prevent them from apportioning it equitably between the cos. or from complying with 1873 Act, s. 11), accept the amount proposed, although they may consider some other amount more equitable.

(6) Primâ facie it is in the interest of the public that there should be at least two railway routes open between any two given places, provided that those routes are practically independent of one another, fairly alternative, & reasonably calculated to keep one another in check.

(7) Held: a route capable of maintaining a competition with quicker or cheaper routes, & efficient enough to be likely to be preferred for some portion of the traffic was a reasonable one, within 1873 Act, s. 11.

(8) The question whether a condition as to a proposed rate is in the interest of the public is a question of fact on which the comrs. have no authority to state a case.

(9) The fact that a route, in other respects reasonable, is not so good as some other route between the same places does not, as far as provisions of 1873 Act are concerned, prevent the Comrs. making the former a through route at through rates.

(10) If the granting of a through rate is a due & reasonable facility in the interests of the public, & the route proposed is a reasonable route, the Comrs. must allow it; if the two conditions are not satisfied they must refuse it; the only discretion they have is that of apportionment.

(11) A co. cannot complain that a proposed rate is too low, when they are themselves charging the same rate for a longer distance.

(12) The question whether a through rate is reasonable in the interests of the public cannot be decided apart from the nature & character of a through route; in some cases evidence as to the through route may alone be sufficient to settle the question in favour of the through rate being in the interests of the public.—GREAT WESTERN RY. CO. v. SEVERN & WYE & SEVERN BRIDGE RY. CO. & MIDLAND RY. CO., SEVERN & WYE & SEVERN BRIDGE RY. CO. v. GREAT WESTERN RY. CO. (No. 2) (1887), 5 Ry. & Can. Tr. Cas. 170.

1050. —— Reasonable junctions.]—By a clause in an agreement made between two railway cos. & a third co., the two cos. agreed between themselves that they should agree upon through rates for coal & other traffic from & to certain works, collieries & places, such through rates to be vid a reasonable & convenient junction or junctions to be agreed upon between them or to be settled by arbn. as provided:—Held: the Commissioners in construing the clause, had power to find that certain stations specified were reasonable & convenient junctions although not on the line of the third railway.—Re MANCHESTER, SHEFFIELD & LINCOLNSHIRE RY. CO. & LONDON & NORTH WESTERN RY. CO. (1888), 4 T. L. R. 544, D. C.

1051. —— Point of exchange impracticable.]—(1) On an application for through rates, the fact that the station where it is proposed to exchange the traffic is not, in any reasonable sense, a practicable one for that purpose will go to show that the proposed route is not a reasonable route within 1888 Act, s. 25 (5).

(2) The Ct. will consider not only the public interest in a competitive route, but also the right of a railway co. to a long run in respect of traffic originating on its own system.

(3) A station, proposed as a station for the exchange of traffic, was constructed entirely for passenger traffic:—Held: having regard to this fact & to the bulk of the passenger traffic passing through it, to the time which must necessarily be occupied in exchanging trucks or transferring packages, & to the large traffic to be dealt with in a station not designed for that purpose, it was not a practicable station, in any reasonable sense, for the interchange of traffic.—PLYMOUTH, DEVONPORT & SOUTH WESTERN JUNCTION RY. C. Fixing, Apportionment and Rescission of Rate.

See 1921 Act, ss. 47, 51, 86, Sched. IX., Part II.

1052. Fixing—Effect on other rates.]—(1) Iron ore was sent from B. to W. by alternative routes, one of which was by the N. Ry. to K., & the other by the E. Ry. to D., the continuation in each case being by the G. W. Ry. The G. W. Company refused to agree to a lower through rate by the D. route, than that charged by the K. route, although the distance by the former was twenty miles shorter; the G. W. mileage being practically equal in both cases. The proposed through rates gave the G. W. Co. about ½*d.* per ton per mile:—Held: the apprehension of the G. W. Co. that a reduction of rates by the shorter route would entail a similar reduction of the rates by the longer route, & so render the traffic carried by the latter unprofitable, did not justify them in raising the rates by the shorter route above their natural & proper level; &, as the G. W. Co. carried the like traffic in similar circumstances for about ½*d.* per ton per mile, the rates proposed should be allowed, on condition that the E. Co. should maintain a traffic by their route averaging 500 tons a week.

PART X. SECT. 2, SUB-SECT. 2.—C.

r. Fixing—Whether remuneration reasonable.]—N. & A. Ry. Co. applied to the comrs. to authorise an abatement or deduction to be made from existing through rates with G. N. (Ireland) Ry. Co., to the amount of ½*d.* per ton per mile in the case of traffic carried in owners' waggons:—Held: the effect of making an order requiring the co. to pay 4 times as much as they had theretofore paid for the use of waggons, would be that the residue would not be sufficient to remunerate them for the working expenses of their line & for its maintenance. In these circumstances the rates could not be allowed.—NEWRY & ARMAGH RY. CO. v. GREAT NORTHERN RY. CO. OF IRELAND (1877), 3 Ry. & Can. Tr. Cas. 28.—IR.

s. —— —— Raising well established rate.]—The comrs. will not grant through rates which will have the effect of raising a long established rate & unsettling interests which have been founded on its continuing, unless the ry. co. asking for such through rates can show that an alteration is required to give them a fair return upon the traffic carried.—GREAT NORTHERN RY. CO. v. BELFAST CENTRAL RY. CO., BELFAST CENTRAL RY. CO. v. GREAT NORTHERN RY. CO. (1880), 3 Ry. & Can. Tr. Cas. 411.—IR.

t. —— —— Comparison of rates.]—An application was made by B. C. Ry. Co. to fix through rates for coal sent from B. quay over their railway to stations beyond A. on G. N. (Ireland) Co.'s railway, the rate as far as A. was fixed at 3*s.* 6*d.*; the extra distance involved no expense to G. N. Co. other than haulage:—Held: the question whether any proposed rates were or were not reasonable in the interests of the public depended upon whether the difference between the rate of 3*s.* 6*d.* & a proposed rate afforded a reasonable remuneration for the haulage for the extra distance.—BELFAST CENTRAL RY. CO. v. GREAT NORTHERN RY. CO. OF IRELAND (No. 2) (1880), 3 Ry. & Can. Tr. Cas. 419.—IR.

u. —— —— What costs material.]—The delay in unloading waggons at a particular station is not a cost which

(2) Where a line is opened by which distance & cost of carriage are lessened, it is a reasonable consequence that the rates charged to the public who are in a position to avail themselves of the shorter route should be also in some measure reduced. The quantity carried is an element in the cost of carriage, &, equally with distance, affects the rate at which the work can profitably be done.—EAST & WEST JUNCTION RY. CO. v. GREAT WESTERN RY. CO. (1875), 2 Ry. & Can. Tr. Cas. 147.

1053. —— Competing routes—Mileage proportions.]—(1) In an Act amalgamating three of the railway cos. in the Isle of Wight, a fourth co. had a clause inserted that the cos. should respectively afford to each other all reasonable facilities, including through booking & invoicing for the convenient working of the traffic, & the amount of such fares & rates, & that their apportionment as between the cos. should be determined by the Railway Comrs. as arbitrators. On an application by the fourth co. against the amalgamated co., asking for equal rates by either route:—Held: the routes were intended to be competing routes, & equal rates should be fixed by both routes.

(2) Appcts. were in some instances refused their full mileage proportion out of the traffic carried by the longer route.—ISLE OF WIGHT RY. CO. v. ISLE OF WIGHT CENTRAL RY. CO. (1888), 6 Ry. & Can. Tr. Cas. 35.

1054. —— Virtual existence of rate—Onus—Consideration of distance.]—(1) In allowing or fixing through rates the Railway Comrs. will consider all the circumstances of the case; one of the circumstances is, what powers the particular railway cos. whose lines are part of the through route have of demanding rates.

(2) On an application to allow a through rate, it was proved that there was in existence a rate arranged between the parties which was virtually a through rate, & was much lower than the sum of the local rates over the lines which constituted the through route. The through rate applied for involved a still further reduction of about 6*d.*:—Held: in the circumstances the onus was upon appcts. to prove that the through rate which they proposed was just & reasonable.

(3) A proposed rate was over a route composed of three lines, which carried for about six, forty-five & twenty-five miles respectively of the route. There was an alternative route composed of two lines, the same six miles as the proposed route, & a residue of seventy-five miles over lines of another co.; there was an existing rate by the alternative route of 6*d.* less than the existing rate over the route for which a through rate was proposed:—Held: the existing rate over the route composed of three railways, was not necessarily unreasonable, the conditions under which the two traffics were carried being totally different.—BIRMINGHAM CORPN. & SHEFFIELD COAL CO., LTD. v. MANCHESTER, SHEFFIELD & LINCOLNSHIRE RY. CO., MIDLAND RY. CO. & LONDON & NORTH WESTERN RY. CO. (1897), 10 Ry. & Can. Tr. Cas. 62.

1055. —— Amounting to reduction of existing rates.]—Appcts., owners of a private siding, asked for through rates for slack between certain collieries & their siding. The proposed route was ten miles shorter than that by which the traffic was ordinarily carried; through rates for slack were already in existence, & applied to traffic consigned by either route. The rates proposed were in each case 1*s.* 2*d.* per ton as compared with the existing rate of 1*s.* 11*d.* No evidence was given that the proposed rates were in the public interest:—Held: (1) the ct. could not assume without evidence that the proposed rates would be in the interest of the public; (2) 1888 Act, s. 25, was not intended to have the effect of reducing rates but only to enforce the granting of facilities; (3) in the absence of evidence that the existing through rates were unreasonable, there was no ground for fixing any other rate.

(4) A trader interested may apply for a through rate to a private siding.—BRUNNER, MOND & CO., LTD. v. CHESHIRE LINES COMMITTEE & LONDON & NORTH WESTERN RY. CO. (1909), 14 Ry. & Can. Tr. Cas. 124; 25 T. L. R. 618.

1056. Apportionment—Mileage proportion—Terminal costs.]—(1) The special Act of the C. railway Co., passed in 1883, provided for the provision of facilities for through traffic by C., G., & L. Cos., including through rates. Through rates were put in operation, but the cos. were unable to agree upon an apportionment, & the G. Co. contending for an apportionment by mileage according to the route which the traffic would take if sent in accordance with a statutory agreement made between the L. Co. & the G. Co. in 1863:—Held: through traffic passing by the C. Ry., under the special Act of 1883, between the L. Ry. & the G. Ry. was not traffic exchanged between the cos. within the statutory agreement of 1863, or subject to its provisions, as respects the apportionment between the cos. of the receipt for the traffic.

(2) The Comrs. in apportioning the rates took into consideration the fact that the special Act of 1883, to the distinct advantage of the L. Co., diverted traffic from the route agreed upon by the two cos. in 1863 for the traffic exchanged & directed that after payment of the usual clearing house terminals the residue should be divided between the cos. interested therein by mileage, according to the actual route, each two miles over the G. Ry. to be reckoned as three miles, the total sum received by the G. Co. out of each such through rate for mileage & terminals, exclusive of any extra charge for services permissible as against the public, not to exceed their maximum local rate for conveyance for the actual distance which the traffic was carried on their railway.—

1058. —— —— ——.]—In dividing the total amount of a through rate between two forwarding cos. where the traffic is carried on one of the railways a short distance, the charge which such a co. may make for short distances under their special Act is to be taken into account in favour of such a co.—TAL-Y-LLYN RY. CO. v. CAMBRIAN RY. CO. (1886), 5 Ry. & Can. Tr. Cas. 122.

1059. —— Comparison of services performed.]—The G. Co. had certain rates in force for traffic between their stations inland & their stations in P. at M. & S. lower than the rates at which similar traffic was carried between such inland stations as were within a radius of forty miles from P. & C. & T., stations in P. These last were stations of the S. Co., & short branch lines connecting them with the G. Ry. were also owned & worked by them. The rates at which goods were carried between C. or T. & the G. Co.'s inland stations were divided between that co. & the S. Co.

Upon a complaint against the railway cos. under 1888 Act, s. 30, of the difference between the S. & M. rates, & the C. & T. rates :—Held : (1) the G. Co. only had it in its power to give an undue preference within the sect., as that co. alone, or in conjunction with the S. Co., did carry between its own stations & all four ports or docks, but the S. Co., carrying only to its own ports, was not in any way limited as to the charges it chose to make at those ports, by what the railway charges might be to any of the other ports at P. ; (2) as to the G. Co.'s portion of the through rates between C. or T. & such co.'s inland stations, there ought to be between it & that co.'s local charges to & from its own termini, a difference corresponding with the difference in services performed ; (3) if the S. Co., having the usual powers of charging for services performed, fixed the charge for their part of the through rates so as to make it, when united with the G. Co.'s charge, into a charge to & from their ports higher than the charge to & from the G. Co.'s ports, it was not a contravention of the sect., for they showed no preference due or undue, having as respects the traffic in question nothing to do with any conveyance to & from any ports except their own two.

(4) However desirable a reduced rate may be in the interests of the public, it is always necessary to see whether there is a commensurate advantage to the railway co., who may be forced by the decision of the Comrs. to accept a lower scale of charge than that which it is actually making, & to which it is entitled (COLLINS, J.).—PLYMOUTH INCORPORATED CHAMBER OF COMMERCE v. GREAT WESTERN RY. 1064. Whether reasonable & in public interest—Primâ facie evidence.]—(1) 1854 Act, s. 2, the Railway Comrs. have power, upon proof that it is reasonable & in the interests of the public, to order through booking of both passengers & goods at the sum of the local rates charged on the two lines of railway constituting the through route (COLLINS, J.).

(2) If the demand for such through booking is made bonâ fide by a member of the public, & a fortiori by a community, there is ipso facto a strong primâ facie case of reasonableness & public interest (COLLINS, J.).

(3) In applications under 1888 Act, s. 25, the Comrs. require evidence of public interest & reasonableness in favour of the proposed through rate & route adequate to outweigh the interference with the vested legal rights of railway cos.

PART X. SECT. 2, SUB-SECT. 3.

c. On what basis ordered.]—G. S. Ry. Co. had with G. W. Ry. Co. of England established lower through fares & rates for a more extensive system of through booking by their new cross channel route via R. than the fares established by them for traffic passing over their system to cross channel stations via D. :—Held : a system of through booking & rates via D. based on the principle of equal rates where there was reasonable competitive routes must be put into force by G. S. Ry. Co.—DUBLIN PORT & DOCKS BOARD v. GREAT SOUTHERN & WESTERN RY. CO., LONDON & NORTH WESTERN RY. CO. v. GREAT SOUTHERN & WESTERN RY. CO. (1907), 13 Ry. & Can. Tr. Cas. 209. —IR.

D. Co. had a through route from Southampton to P., the London terminus of the G. Co., & proposed not only to carry traffic to & from P. at the same rate as that in force between Southampton & N. E., the London terminus of the L. Co., but also to carry to & from S. & R. Stations in London, four & ten miles further respectively, at the same rates. The route from Southampton to N. E. was sixteen miles shorter than that from Southampton to P., & the rate was admittedly low owing to sea competition. Both the G. Co. & L. Co. paid tolls to another co. for hauling traffic from R. to join their systems, & the G. Co. paid for carrying their traffic from S. to P.:—Held: (4) the through rate from R. must be not lower than that in force by the L. Co.'s route to R.; (5) the rate to S. must take adequately into account the difference in the cost of carriage between P. & S.—DIDCOT, NEWBURY & SOUTHAMPTON RY. CO. v. LONDON & SOUTH WESTERN RY. k. Steamships owned by railway company—Differential sea rates.]—The amalgamation of 2 Irish ry. cos. was authorised by an Act of Parliament whereby running powers & traffic facilities were given to a third ry. co. which by means of its line & the exercise of such running powers afforded a competing although longer route between stations on the railway of the amalgamated co. on the one hand & D. & cross-channel stations on the other hand.

The amalgamated co. had in conjunction with G. W. Ry. Co. of England established a new daily cross-channel service viâ R. In order to protect their interests the ports of D. & W. had obtained protective sects. in the Act authorising the amalgamation, which were to the effect that the amalgamated co. should not by their rates place those ports at an undue disadvantage & that there should be through rates viâ those ports, with power in the case of W. to fix group rates for W. &-R.

Certain long sea differential through rates via W. to E. & S. ports were in existence prior to the amalgamation, & it was further proposed to establish a new differential rate viâ W. to F. which was only 106 miles from W.:—Held: the existing long sea differential rates viâ W. to the more distant ports were justified in view of the distance & the frequency of the service, but the proposed differential rate viâ W. to F. on which route there were 6 sailings per week was not justified.—GREAT SOUTHERN & WESTERN RY. 1073. Railway authorised to use steamers.]—A railway co. incorporated for the conveyance of passengers & goods from London to Folkestone under Acts of Parliament which prohibited them from making unequal charges, obtained another Act enabling them to establish a communication by steam-vessels with Boulogne, which contained no provision as to equality of rates for the carriage of goods. There was nothing in the law of France which disabled the co. as public carriers from making such contracts for that purpose as they might think most for their own interest. o. Application of 1845 Act, s. 90 —Non-perishable goods carried by passenger trains—Carrier bound by profession.]—In an action brought under above sect. complaining of inequality of charge in respect of news-papers carried by defts. by passenger trains from D., as compared with newspapers carried from B., the rate was a flat rate, irrespective of distance, for carriage over defts.' railway & the train times & average length that the respective papers were carried were different :—Held : though there was no statutory charge prescribed, & though defts. were not bound to carry papers by passenger trains, still, as they professed so to do, the above sect. applied to preferential treatment in respect of such papers.—Independent Newspapers, Ltd. v. Great Northern Ry. Co. of Ireland, [1913] 2 I. R. 255.—IR.

p. Application of 1845 (Scotland) Act, s. 13*—Goods passing between same points of departure & arrival.*]—Held : to justify proceedings under above sect. by a person complaining of an undue preference in the rates charged to another trader, the goods of the over the same portion of the line of railway in the same circumstances, applies only to goods passing between the same points of departure & arrival, & passing over no other part of the line. Mere inequality in the rate of charge when unequal distances are traversed does not constitute a preference inconsistent with the concluding words of that sect.

A railway co. carried coals from a group of collieries situate at different points along their line, & charged all the collieries with one uniform set of rates in respect of such carriage; the owners of the colliery lying nearest to the point of arrival brought an action for overcharges:—Held: (1) the railway co. had not infringed 1845 Act, s. 90; (2) in this case an action did not lie for breach of 1854 Act, s. 2, undue or unreasonable preference or prejudice not having being made out.

(3) Qu.: whether in any circumstances an action lies for breach of that sect.

Where goods are carried for different customers over the same portion of the line of railway, the fact that the goods carried for one customer are to be shipped to certain ports in order to develop a new trade, or open up new markets, & so to increase the tonnage carried, does not constitute a difference in the circumstances so as to justify inequality of rates.

A railway co. carried coals over the same portion only of the line to G., both for applts. & also for B., & allowed B. 8*d.* per ton in respect of all coal carried to G. & there shipped for the W. market; & also allowed B. 6*d.* per ton in respect of all coal carried to G., & there shipped by him to certain ports, in consideration of a bonâ fide undertaking by B. to develop the trade to those ports, to provide the vessels, & to run the risks incidental to the working of such a traffic:—Held: (4) the coals were carried in the same circumstances, & the allowances were breaches of 1845 Act, s. 90; (5) applts. were entitled to recover the overcharges by action against the co., the amount to be ascertained by finding what quantity of coal carried in the same circumstances & over the same portion only of the line was charged at the higher rate to applts. at the time the lower rate was charged to B.

A railway co. which carried coals for applts. & also for B. & J., over the same portion of their line of railway, & made allowances & a rebate to B. & J., proved that they carried for B. & J. at a less cost to the co., but did not show that the allowances & rebate were adequately represented by the saving to the co.:—Held: (6) the difference in cost constituted a real difference in the circumstances; (7) there being nothing to show any want of good faith, the co. were not bound to prove that the allowance & rebate were adequately represented by the saving; (8) there was no breach of 1845 Act, s. 90, & applts. could not maintain an action for overcharges under that sect.—DENABY MAIN COLLIERY CO., LTD. v. MANCHESTER, SHEFFIELD & LINCOLNSHIRE RY. 1077. —— Non-perishable goods carried by passenger train.]—(1) Midland Railway Company (Rates & Charges) Order Confirmation Act, 1891, provides (inter alia) that the co. shall not be under obligation to convey by passenger train any merchandise other than perishables. A firm of carriers delivered to the co. at one of their stations certain non-perishable goods for conveyance by passenger train, & the co. duly forwarded them, charging a rate including collection, the co. making no rate for such goods by passenger train which did not include collection. In an action by the carriers to recover that portion of the rate which represented the cost of collection:—Held: as the co. were under no statutory obligation to carry the goods by passenger train, & no rate was imposed by statute in respect of such carriage, the co., who at the same time were not debarred from so carrying the goods, & had the right so to carry them, did not fall with respect to the carriage of the goods within the "equality" proviso of 1845 Act, s. 90, & the carriers were therefore not entitled to recover back the cost of collection.

(2) The expression "all tolls for the use of the railway" in Midland Railway Act, 1844, s. 203, means all the tolls referred to in the group of sects. in which that sect. is placed, & not all tolls in fact charged by the co. for the use of the railway; the sect. is no wider in its application than 1845 Act, s. 90.—STONE & Co. v. MIDLAND RY. A ry. co. charged a rate per mile, every incomplete mile being reckoned a mile. & took proceedings to challenge them. These proceedings were compromised by an agreement whereby (1) for traffic after Dec. 31, 1915, the colliery owners were to pay a rate of ½*d.* per ton above the original rate on all coal & coke they should send from their collieries to places beyond the railway; (2) for traffic from July 1, 1913, to Jan. 1, 1916, the colliery owners were to pay a rate of ½*d.* per ton above the original rate on all coal & coke they had sent carriage paid by them to places beyond the railway. These payments were to be in satisfaction of the increased rates & of increased charges for services at the private sidings of the colliery owners. The rates specified in the agreement were less than the increased rates. The railway co. also agreed to repay to two of the colliery owners amounts which had been paid by them in excess of the amounts specified in the agreement. A coal merchant who sent coal & coke from the collieries of the owners to places beyond the railway, & who was no party to the agreement, had also objected to & refused to pay the increased rates. The railway co. sued him for the full amount of the increase:—Held: (1) the increased rate was not charged equally to all persons in the same circumstances, & was not authorised by 1845 Act, s. 90; (2) the inequality was not justifiable merely as being due to a compromise; (3) pltfs. could recover no more than was being charged to the colliery owners under the agreement.—NORTH STAFFORDSHIRE RY. 1079. Breach of duty—Other carriers charged more than public—Several parcels in one consignment.]—(1) Defts. by their private Acts, were authorised to carry passengers & goods on their own line & other railways at reasonable charges, & to fix the rates for carrying small parcels not exceeding 500 lbs. in weight. By another private Act the charges for the carriage of passengers or goods were at all times to be charged equally & after the same rate in respect of all passengers, goods, etc., conveyed or propelled by a like carriage or engine, passing on the same portion of the line, & in the same circumstances. Defts. published a list of rates for the carriage of merchandise divided into seven classes, of which the lowest was 16*s.* & the highest 60*s.* per ton: & for "boxes, bales, hampers or other packages, when they contained parcels or other packages or things under 112 lbs. weight each, directed, consigned or intended for different persons, or for more than one person," they imposed a charge of 1*d.* per lb. weight:—Held: this last was not a reasonable charge in the case of a package above 500 lbs. weight, made up by a carrier & directed to one person, although containing a number of parcels under 112 lbs. weight each, consigned or directed to different persons.

(2) Defts. also became carriers on the L. & B. line, & published a list of charges for the carriage of goods from M. to L., among which "M. packs" were charged 3*s.* 3*d.* per cwt. or 65*s.* per ton. At the foot of this list was a notice, that "goods were brought to the station at C. T. [in L.] without extra charge," & that there was "no charge for booking or delivery in L." Defts. made an agreement with C. & H. that the latter should carry from the station at C. T. & deliver in L. all such goods carried by the railway & for so doing should receive 10*s.* per ton out of the entire charge of 65*s.* per ton:—Held: in the circumstances the charge of 65*s.* per ton, when made to any other persons who were ready to receive their goods at the station at C. T., was both unreasonable & unequal.—PICKFORD v. GRAND JUNCTION RY. CO. (1842), 10 M. & W. 399; 3 Ry. & Can. Cas. 193; 152 E. R. 525. S. C. in equity (1844), 3 Ry. & Can. Cas. 538, L. C.

1080. —— —— ——.]—By the Acts of Parliament under which a railway co. was incorporated, it was provided, that the charges for the carriage of goods should be reasonable & equal to all persons, & that no reduction or advance should be made, either directly or indirectly, in favour of or against any particular person. The co. acted themselves as carriers for the public, & they issued certain scales of their charges for carriage of goods, including the collection, loading, unloading, & delivery of parcels. They also carried goods for other carriers, to whom they made certain allowances, as an equivalent for the trouble of the collection, &c. of parcels, such collection, &c. being performed by the carriers. But in their dealings with A., a particular carrier, they refused to make such allowances, but were willing to perform for him all the things which formed the consideration for such allowances:—Held: (1) the charges to A. were not equal or reasonable.

The co., in their transactions with the public & with carriers, made the following distinction as to their charges for carriage. In the case of the public, if there were several packages from one consignor to several consignees, or from several consignors to one consignee, the charge was upon the aggregate weight. In the case of carriers, if there were several packages for several consignees, the charge was upon the separate weight of each package, unless more than one package belonged to the same consignor, not being the carrier, or was going to the same consignee, in either of which cases the charge was upon the aggregate weight. But in such cases the co. recognised the carrier only as the consignor & consignee of the goods, the agent of such carrier in fact receiving the goods at the end of the transit:—Held: (2) the co. were bound to treat a carrier as consignor & consignee, for all purposes, including the mode of charging in the aggregate; (3) A. having paid the extra charges in both of the instances above mentioned, might recover the amount of such payments in an action for money had & received against the co., such payments not being voluntary, but made in order to induce the co. to do that which they were bound to do without requiring such payments.

(4) Acts of Parliament which confer privileges upon a co., & profess to give the public certain advantages in return, are to be construed strictly against the co., & liberally in favour of the public.—PARKER v. GREAT WESTERN RY. 1082. —— —— ——.]—(1) The G. Ry. Co., before 7 & 8 Vict. c. iii. came into operation, was obliged by 2 & 3 Vict. c. xxvii., s. 24 to charge for carriage to all persons equally; they charged P., a carrier, differently from & more than the public:—Held: the overcharge was recoverable as money received to the carrier's use.

(2) 7 & 8 Vict. c. iii., ss. 48, 49, & 50 repealed 2 & 3 Vict. c. xxvii., s. 24 & re-enacted it, with the difference that in s. 50, the words "under like circumstances" were introduced. The co. continued to charge P. more than the public:—Held: he might recover the overcharge, the fact of his being a carrier only not rendering the circumstances unlike.

(3) Under the co.'s original Act 5 & 6 Will. 4, c. cvii., s. 171 they were authorised to fix the sums to be charged for small parcels, provided they were not sent in large aggregate quantities made up of separate & distinct parcels. The co. published scale-bills in which they specified divers classes, containing different kinds of goods, & one class comprised miscellaneous goods, "not being aggregate of one class or kind" which were charged at a higher tonnage rate, with an extra charge for each parcel. The co. charged P. under the miscellaneous class for aggregate goods, which though of different kinds were within the same class in the scale-bills:—Held: this was an overcharge; the word "class" must be taken to mean something more than "kind" & to apply to the classes mentioned in the scale-hills.

(4) With regard to all the foregoing overcharges:—Held: it made no difference that the separate parcels, which were all to be delivered to the carrier or his agents at the end of the journey, were destined for different ultimate consignees.

(5) P.'s servants assisted the co.'s servants in loading, unloading, & weighing, but not at the co.'s request, & the public gave no such assistance. The co., before the decision of Parker v. Great Western Ry. Co. (No. 1085, post), had allowed carriers 10 per cent. for such assistance & P. in this case claimed a similar deduction:—Held: P. was not entitled to any deduction on this ground.

(6) The co., before the decision in Parker v. Great Western Ry. Co. (No. 1085, post), had entered into an agreement with K. to allow him 10 per cent. discount, but after that decision they refused to make the allowance. K. brought an action & recovered a verdict for 10 per cent., which the co. paid accordingly: P. claimed the 10 per cent. on the ground that he & K. had been charged unequally, K. having been allowed that amount:—Held: this was not an allowance which made the charge unequal.—EDWARDS v. GREAT WESTERN RY. 1084. —— —— ——.]—(1) Defts., a railway co., incorporated by a special Act of Parliament, containing an equality clause, in the ordinary form, requiring them to take the same rates & tolls from all persons in the same or similar circumstances, were in the habit of charging a tonnage-rate upon packages weighing more than 1 cwt., & a higher rate upon packages weighing less. When several parcels were delivered by the same person in one consignment, addressed to the same consignee, they were not weighed & charged for separately, but were weighed together, & a tonnage-rate charged for the whole consignment, if the gross weight exceeded 1 cwt. Pltfs. were common carriers, trading under the name of "P. & Co.," & were in the habit of collecting parcels in L. & forwarding them to customers in the country. Each parcel was addressed to the person to whom it was ultimately to be delivered; but it was labelled with the name of "P. & Co." and that of the station to which it was to be sent; & all the parcels for the same station were delivered in one consignment consigned to pltfs. at that station. Defts. refused to charge pltfs. for the carriage of their parcels at a tonnage-rate upon the gross weight, & charged for each parcel separately according to its individual weight:—Held: this created an inequality.

(2) Defts. were in the habit of carrying goods from L. to I., by their own railway from L. to S., & thence by tramway & steamer. Pltfs. also were in the habit of carrying goods from L. to I., using defts.' line from L. to S., & thence conveying them by carts & steamer. Pltfs. claimed to have their goods carried by defts. from L. to S. at a sum equivalent to defts.' through-charge from London to I., less a fair charge for collection in London, & for carrying from S. station to I.:—Held: they were not entitled to this; the delivery by defts. beyond the limits of their line not being a delivery auxiliary or subsidiary to their business as carriers on their own line, but to their general business as common carriers, & differing from a case of delivery in the immediate neighbourhood of a station.—BAXENDALE v. LONDON & SOUTH WESTERN RY. rates & tolls should be charged equally & after the same rate in respect of the same articles & that no reduction or advance in the said rates & tolls should, either directly or indirectly, be made partially or in favour of or against any particular person or co., &c., & 7 & 8 Vict. c. iii. s. 50 provided that, in whatever way the charges, which the co. were authorised to make, were made, they should be made equally to all passengers & to all persons in respect of all goods, &c., & things of a like description & quality, & conveyed in or propelled by a like carriage or engine passing only over the same portion of, & over the same distance along, the railway, & in the like circumstances; & that no reduction, or advance in any of such charges should be made partially, either directly or indirectly, in favour of or against any particular co. or person. The co. required carriers who brought goods to them for conveyance on the railway, to deliver with them a printed note filled up with the description, contents, & weight of the several packages to be carried, without which the co. refused to receive them. In consideration of this additional trouble, the co. formerly allowed the carriers a discount of 10 per cent. on the sums paid by them for carriage:—Held: the discontinuance of this allowance did not constitute an inequality of charge, as between carriers & the rest of the public, so as to give the carrier a claim for money had & received, whatever other remedy he might have against the co.

(2) The co. had entered into an agreement with S., a carrier, to collect & deliver parcels for them in L., for which service they paid him £1000 per annum, he on his part relinquishing the customary carrier's charge for "booking":—Held: this did not constitute an inequality of charge, within 5 & 6 W. 4, c. cvii., s. 175.

(3) 5 & 6 W. 4, c. cvii. s. 171 empowered the co. to fix the sum to be charged by them in respect of small parcels, not exceeding 500 lbs. weight, but that provision did not extend to articles sent in large aggregate quantities, although made up of separate & distinct parcels, such as, bags of sugar, coffee, meal, & the like, but only to single parcels unconnected with parcels of a like nature, which might be sent upon the railway at the same time. The co. had, during the period embraced by this action issued three printed bills of charges, called "scale-bills," the first & third of which contained four, & the second five, classifications of goods, & at the end an intimation that "packed parcels" would be charged by the co. 50 per cent. in addition to the highest class, that is, the fourth class in the first & third, & the fifth class in the second scale-bill. This additional charge of 50 per cent. was imposed upon pltf. & other carriers only, & not upon the public:—Held: a violation of the equality clauses, 5 & 6 W. 4, c. cvii., s. 175, & 7 & 8 Vict. c. iii., s. 50, & pltf. was entitled to recover back the overcharge.

(4) According to the co.'s scale-bills, all packages of less than a given weight were to be charged, in their respective class, according to the parcel-rate, & all above that weight in their respective class, according to the tonnage-rate. The co. did not treat carriers as consignor & consignee of the goods carried for them, for the purpose of calculating the charge to be made for their carriage, but when several packages of goods of different descriptions, but of one class, appeared to be intended for the same ultimate consignee, all such goods were lumped together & charged at one gross weight, so as to bring them into the tonnage-rate, although severally the packages might be of such weight as would have brought them into the parcel-rate; but, if such goods, though in the same class were not intended for the same ultimate consignee, each package or number of packages going to each ultimate consignee, was charged separately, & according to the tonnage or parcel-rate, according as the weight was above or below the dividing point between the one rate & the other:—Held: this was an inequality of charge, within 5 & 6 W. 4, c. cvii., s. 171; the fact that pltf. was a carrier, & not the ultimate consignee of the goods, did not show that the goods were not carried in the same circumstances, within 7 & 8 Vict. c. iii., s. 50.

(5) By the first scale-bill, the co. intimated, that, on miscellaneous goods, not being aggregate of one kind or class, an additional charge of 2*d.* per package or article, up to 2 cwt., would be made. On some occasions, when packages sent by pltf., in manner before mentioned, contained goods of one class, & each package was of a weight less than the limited weight for the parcel-rate, & was intended for a different ultimate consignee, but the several packages together exceeded the limit, the co. charged them as miscellaneous goods, on which, in addition to the higher rate of charge, this further charge of 2*d.* per package was imposed:—Held: the words "kind" & "class" being used synonymously, this additional charge was, in the circumstances, unjustifiable.

(6) Where the carrier has collected from several original consignors several parcels intended for several ultimate consignees, the whole of which together do not in weight exceed the dividing point between parcel & tonnage-rates, according to the scale-bill, & do not amount to 500 lbs. in weight, & has delivered them to, & received them from, the co. in one lot:—Held: if the nature of the parcels be such that the co. are entitled to charge them to the public at the parcel-rate, under 5 & 6 W. 4, c. cvii., s. 171, the fact of the contents being goods of the same "class" in the scale-bill, for a different purpose, does not disentitle the co. so to charge them to the carrier.—PARKER v. GREAT WESTERN RY. 1086. —— —— ——.]—A declaration by a carrier against a railway co. for not carrying a parcel to D. in a reasonable time, & for not delivering it, laid, as damages, that pltf. was injured in his trade as a collector of parcels, & lost the custom of several persons. Pltf., a carrier in L., was in the habit of collecting in L. small parcels from different persons to be sent to various persons in the country. After collecting them, he used to make them into one parcel, called a "packed parcel," which he directed to his agent in the country, and brought to defts. to be carried. Pltf. was also in the habit of bringing to defts. for carriage into the country parcels, containing other small parcels, belonging to one individual in L., & sent by him to one individual in the country. These parcels were called "enclosures." Defts. charged pltf. at a higher rate for "packed parcels" than for "enclosures," & they also charged him at a higher rate than the rest of the public:—Held: (1) an action of trover against defts. could not be brought by each of the owners of the packages contained in the "packed parcels," in the event of loss or misdelivery, although an action might lie by each owner for the destruction of the packages by defts., independently & beyond their duty as carriers; (2) it was rightly left to the jury to say whether there was a difference as regarded the risk between carrying "packed parcels" & "enclosures," the question of risk as regarded the two kinds of parcels being a question of fact, and not of law.

(3) The jury having found for pltf. with damages at £200 on the ground that pltf. had sustained injury in his trade & loss of custom to that extent in consequence of defts.' acts:—Held: as the declaration was framed, pltf. was not entitled to recover the 200*l.* as damages for the injury to his trade and loss of custom.—CROUCH v. GREAT NORTHERN RY. 1087. —— —— ——.]—Pltf., a "packed parcel" carrier, having been charged by defts., & having paid to them under protest, a sum for the carriage of his packed parcels beyond the sum charged by them to certain wholesale houses for the carriage of goods of a similar description, brought an action against them to recover the amount of the overcharge, & obtained a verdict. Defts. continued, however, to make the same charges, & to receive the same sums of money from pltf. for the carriage of his goods, as before, & he therefore issued a fresh writ to recover the money paid by him during another & more recent interval of time. After issuing the writ, he applied, under C. L. P. Act, 1854 (c. 125), ss. 79, 82, for an injunction to restrain defts. from charging him for the carriage of his goods otherwise than equally with all other persons, & after the same rate, in respect of goods of the like description in the like circumstances:—Held: the case was not one in which the ct. would exercise their statutory power to grant an injunction.—SUTTON v. SOUTH EASTERN RY. 1088. —— —— ——.]—Pltf., a carrier, was in the habit of collecting small parcels & sending them together in large packages by defts.' railway. Defts. charged different rates of carriage for different classes of goods, the highest charge being for packed parcels. A declaration was required from pltf. as to the description of his parcels. He declared them as "packed parcels," & was charged & paid accordingly. Pltf., finding that other firms sent packed parcels, from whom no declaration was required, & who were charged for them at a less rate, sued the co. in assumpsit to recover the alleged excess as for money had & received. On the trial he gave evidence that the practice of the other firms in sending "packed parcels" was notorious:—Held: (1) the evidence produced was admissible, & was sufficient to show that defts. knew of the practice of the other firms to pack their parcels, & that with such knowledge they had improperly charged pltf. with a higher rate of charge, & had thus infringed the equality clauses; (2) pltf. was entitled to recover the amount so charged in excess in an action for money had & received.—GREAT WESTERN RY. 1093. —— ——.]—(1) By special Acts a railway co. was entitled to charge for goods carried on their line at rates not exceeding certain rates per ton. They were permitted to charge a higher rate for small parcels not exceeding 500 lbs. weight, provided that articles sent in large aggregate quantities, although made up of separate parcels, such as bags of sugar, coffee, meal, & the like, should not be deemed small parcels, but such term should apply only to single parcels in separate packages. Pltf., a carrier, sent to the co. at once many packages, all consigned to one consignee, each less than 500 lbs., of articles of similar classes, but not being separate packages of one article. The co. charged for them as separate parcels:—Held: they were justified in so doing; the proviso applying only to articles that were of such a nature that a large quantity was generally made up in separate packages.

(2) Pltf. also sent a parcel of coffee less than 500 lbs. weight; & afterwards, on the same day, another parcel of coffee, both consigned to himself, & for the same train. When the first was left, notice was given that pltf. probably would send more; but it was not received on any special terms. The co. charged for these as separate parcels:—Held: they were justified in doing so.

(3) The co. were entitled to charge a certain rate "for all cotton & other wools, drugs, & manufactured goods":—Held: this meant, not all goods on which human skill was employed, but those articles made in what are in popular language called manufactories.

(4) The co. agreed with agents to collect & deliver goods for them, charging the public a small charge for doing so in addition to the charge for conveyance on the railway; to those agents the co. allowed in addition a sum out of the receipts of the co. Pltf., who collected & delivered his own parcels but was charged as highly as the rest of the public, complained that in effect this arrangement caused his goods to be charged higher than those sent through the agents, & that the difference was an overcharge. By their Act the co. were to charge all persons equally for conveyance, but there was a proviso that they might make agreements as to the collection & delivery of merchandise; there was an appeal given by the Act to Quarter Sessions by any one prejudiced against any arrangement giving special facilities to others:—Held: under these enactments, the agreement with the agents, against which there had been no appeal, did not render the charges to pltf. overcharges.—PARKER v. GREAT WESTERN RY. Co. leased a branch line, on which F. a coalowner resided; they made two tables of rates for coals, one applicable to the main line, & the other to the branch line, the latter being the higher of the two rates. When F. sent his coals along the branch line, he was charged at the branch rates, but when his coals got to the main line, then at the main rates; whereas, when coalowners, living on the main line, sent their coals from the main line on to the branch line, they were charged for the whole distance (i.e. both on the branch & the main line) at the main line rates only. The special Act applicable to the branch line, which also incorporated 1845 Act, provided that the rates should be made equally to all persons, in respect of goods passing over the same portion of, & over the same distance along the railway & in the like circumstances, & that no reduction or advance should be made partially, either directly or indirectly, in favour of or against any particular person:—Held: the rate charged upon F. was no violation of the equal rates clause.

By Canal Tolls Act, 1845 (c. 28), proprietors of canals were empowered from time to time to alter or vary the tolls granted to them, either upon the whole or for any particular portion or portions of such canals, according to local circumstances, or the quantity of traffic, or otherwise as they should think fit, with a proviso that such tolls were to be charged equally to all persons, & after the same rate, whether per mile, or per ton per mile, in respect of all boats, etc., of the like description passing along or using the same portion of the canal, & all goods, etc., of the like description conveyed or propelled in a like boat, etc., passing along or using the same portion of the said canal, etc., in the like circumstances, etc.:—Held: (1) it was competent to the co. to take a proportionately less toll per ton per mile for goods carried a given distance (five miles) along any part of the canal, than for goods carried less than that distance; (2) it was competent to the co. to agree to carry at a lower rate for a particular individual, in consideration of a large guaranteed minimum toll, in order to enable them to enter into a successful competition with a rival line of railway.—STRICK v. SWANSEA CANAL CO. The charge of 8*s.* did not exceed the charge allowed by statute:—Held: (1) the equality clause was only meant to prevent the exercise of a monopoly to the prejudice of one passenger or carrier & in favour of another; (2) even if the Ct. of Ch. had jurisdiction in such a case, it would not interfere, unless it were clear that the public interest required it, & it being admitted that the higher charge was not more than the Act permitted, it did not appear that the public were prejudiced by the arrangement.—A.-G. v. BIRMINGHAM & DERBY JUNCTION RY. 1103. Railway acting as carrier—Differentiation between other carriers and public—Rate including collection and delivery.]—(1) It is competent to this ct., under 1854 Act, s. 2, to interfere to prevent a railway co. from fixing the rate of tolls to be taken on the railway with a view to the promotion of their own interests, where their so doing subjects others to unreasonable disadvantage, or operates to their prejudice by giving undue preference to third parties.

(2) A railway co. formerly charged a uniform rate of 3*s.* 6*d.* per ton on all goods conveyed on their line between R. & P. The goods were collected & delivered both by the co. & B. at a charge of 4*s.* 10*d.* per ton. The co., who had power under their Acts to impose their own rates of charge for carrying, but no power to impose tolls for collecting & delivering, raised the charge for carrying to 8*s.* 4*d.*, being the aggregate of the above two charges, with an intimation to the public that they would collect & deliver goods free of all charge. The real purpose of this arrangement was to compel persons desiring to have their goods conveyed by the railway to employ the co. to collect & deliver such goods, & thus to secure this business & the profits upon it to the co., as well as to exclude B. from competing with them in this department of business:—Held: this arrangement was an undue preference to the co. in their separate capacity of carriers other than on the line of railway; & also an undue prejudice to B.—Re BAXENDALE & GREAT WESTERN RY. The co., who had formerly allowed a deduction in respect of goods delivered & received at P. & B. stations, as the expense of carting to & from such stations was thereby saved to the company, discontinued making such allowance, in order to induce persons who sent goods by the railway to employ the co. to collect & deliver such goods, & to exclude common carriers from competing in this with the co.:—Held: though no profit was made by collecting & delivering the goods, the system of charge was an undue prejudice to those persons who did not wish to have their goods collected & delivered for them by the co.—GARTON v. GREAT WESTERN RY. 1107. —— ——.]—The S. Ry. Co. undertook to carry goods between L. & S., & also to collect & deliver them at each terminus; they had no goods rate for that traffic except carted rates, which included the collection & delivery by road as well as the carriage by railway; they allowed a deduction off the rate where they were only employed to carry on the railway, & not to cart to & from the station besides, but it was alleged that the amount of this deduction was insufficient, as it was less than the cartage portion of the gross rate & less than the cost of carting:—Held: (1) the co. had given themselves & their agents an undue preference; (2) as it was not shown how much of the gross or compound rate was for cartage, it was not a case for an injunction; (3) the above facts would support a proceeding under 1873 Act, s. 14.

(4) Conveyance on the railway is in practice a monopoly of the railway co., but the service of collection & delivery is open to competition, & the public common carriers can all engage in it.

(5) It is not a ground of complaint that a co. give credit to or have a monthly ledger account with certain of their customers & refuse it to persons for whom the goods are collected & delivered by carriers, unless it be shown that the difference was made for the purpose of preventing competition or of otherwise injuring complainant. —GODDARD v. LONDON & SOUTH WESTERN RY. 1108. —— ——.]—For several years appcts., who were carriers and carters, had been forwarding over defts.' railway goods collected from different traders & they carted the goods to & from defts.' stations. The goods were generally conveyed by the railway co. at C. & D. class or exceptional rates, which included collection & delivery. As appts. performed their own cartage services of collection & delivery they thereby became entitled to rebates from the inclusive C. & D. rates charged by the co. in respect of the railway cartage service of which appcts. did not avail themselves. Appcts. alleged that defts., who were also cartage competitors, did not allow by way of rebate what they really charged & included in the C. & D. rates for cartage:—Held: appcts. had not established any case against defts. of unduly preferring themselves or of unduly prejudicing appcts. by reason of the insufficiency of the rebates allowed; (per BIGHAM, J.) on the ground that the proper measure of the rebate in such cases was the sum which the trader saved the railway co. by dispensing with the co.'s cartage service & doing the cartage service himself, with or without some measure of profit, if any, which the railway co. would have earned if they had done the cartage themselves, & that appcts. had not shown that the rebates allowed were less than the sum so estimated; (per MR. The time (6.30 p.m.) fixed by the company as that after which they would not receive goods to be forwarded the same night, was reasonable. The co., in admitting their own vans later acted bonâ fide, & not with the intention of gaining an undue advantage over other collecting carriers; they admitted B.'s vans in consequence of an injunction obtained by him. In two similar cases (Nos. 1109, ante, 1117, post) injunctions under 1854 Act, s. 3, had been granted by this ct. to restrain railway cos. from admitting their own vans into their station with goods to be dispatched the same night at a later hour than those of other persons. On an application by A. for a similar injunction against the present defts.:—Held: (1) (ERLE, C.J., & MONTAGUE SMITH, J.) the exercise of this special jurisdiction by the ct. being subject to no review, & depending in each instance on the special facts of the case, cases previously decided under it are not binding on the ct. in the same manner that precedents in law are binding; the injunction prayed would interfere with the transport of traffic, which it was the object of the Legislature to facilitate, & it ought not to be granted; (2) (WILLES & KEATING, JJ.) the above cases were precedents binding on the ct., & also were rightly decided, & the injunction ought to be granted.—Re PALMER & LONDON & SOUTH WESTERN RY. 1111. —— ——.]—(1) A railway co. fixed an hour in the evening as the latest time at which goods were to be received at their station for dispatch the same night, but although the goods brought by A., a carrier, were never allowed to enter the station after such prescribed time, the railway co. constantly admitted their own vans from their own receiving houses an hour or two later, & forwarded the goods they brought by trains of the same night:—Held: A. was entitled to an injunction under 1854 Act to restrain the railway co. from continuing such undue preference to themselves.

(2) Qu.: whether the railway co. would have been justified in giving such preference to themselves to the exclusion of other carriers, if it were necessary in order to enable the general public to have the benefit of sending late parcels.—Re PALMER & LONDON, BRIGHTON & SOUTH COAST RY. CO. (1871), L. R. 6 C. P. 194; 1 Ry. & Can. Tr. Cas. 271; 40 L. J. C. P. 133; 24 L. T. 135; 19 W. R. 627.

1112. —— —— Regulation of admission of vans.]—A railway co. refused to allow carriers' vans with goods for conveyance by railway to enter the goods yard after 8 p.m., by which hour all the co.'s vans, whether their own or hired, were timed to arrive at the yard, unless from any cause, any of the co.'s vans, containing goods to be forwarded the same night were detained, & arrived at the yard after that hour, in which case all the carriers' vans which reached the yard before the arrival of the co.'s last van were admitted, or unless the vans contained goods which were perishable, or for shipment, or travellers' patterns, in which case they were admitted, even after the arrival of the co.'s last van, if the goods could be forwarded the same night. It was one of the co.'s regulations that any carman, other than one in charge of the co.'s vans, who arrived at the yard after 8.30 p.m. should produce his papers to an official of the co., who was appointed to give, & did give to the carman, a pass in either of the two above mentioned events.

The co. after 8 p.m. could not deal with traffic unless the documents relating to the goods were perfectly in order, which was the case with co.'s own vans:—Held: the regulation was reasonable, & the co. had not given an undue preference to the goods collected by themselves over those collected by other carriers.—PALMER v. LONDON & SOUTH WESTERN RY. 1114. Duty as to worked line—Comparison of facilities — Costs of working.]— Appcts.' railway, a single line about eight miles in length, formed an alternative route to defts.' main line between E. & N. Appcts. agreed with defts. that defts. were to work the railway so as to fairly develop the traffic to be accommodated thereby. Appcts.' line had steep gradients & rather sharp curves, & in this respect compared unfavourably with defts.' main line :—Held : (1) the fact that defts.' line was longer between two places than appcts.' route, the same rates being charged by both routes, did not compel defts. to work the goods traffic along the new route where their own route could be worked more cheaply ; (2) defts. were entitled to exercise their discretion as to the running of Sunday trains on appcts.' line.

With regard to all goods traffic coming from appcts.' line & from two local lines connected therewith, defts. "grouped" appcts.' terminus station at E. with their own station situated in the same town, but with regard to the goods traffic from defts.' own system, they charged more for goods consigned to appcts.' terminus than for goods consigned to their own station, a difference of charge which was not based on any mileage calculation :—Held : (3) the difference in charge complained of fairly represented the additional cost of working traffic into appcts.' station, & defts. could not be compelled to "group" the two stations for all purposes ; (4) the fact that the additional charge exceeded the statutory mileage rate for the very short distance between the two stations did not make it illegal, the total statutory charge for the transit of the whole distance not being exceeded, inasmuch as the rates for goods going to defts.' station & those for goods going beyond defts.' station to that of appcts. were for different journeys & to different termini & might be fixed independently of each other ; it was immaterial that the rates did not work out at the same sum per mile over such distances as were common to both journeys.

(5) Under the working agreement the gross amount of all tolls was to be divided equally between the parties ; appcts. contended that, after deducting the terminals, the amount charged in a through rate from a third line which represented the special tolls chargeable on their line ought to be retained by them in such division :—Held : appcts. were only entitled to their terminal & the mileage proportion of the whole through rate, without considering how far the various portions of the route over which the journey was taken had contributed to earn the toll.

(6) The agreement provided for the division of receipts on interchanged traffic, defined as traffic arising at or destined for places on appcts.' railway, & carried to or from places on defts.' railway, but exclusive of any proportion due to lines worked jointly or worked by defts. :—Held : the words "carried to or from places on the defts.' railway" applied also to traffic which did not terminate or arise at such places, but was there handed to or received from another co.—EXETER RY. CO. v. GREAT WESTERN RY. CO. (1905), 12 Ry. & Can. Tr. Cas. 182.

1115. Comparison of through & local rates.]—Appcts. who were carriers, conveyed goods in their own steamers between D. & M., the goods being carried on deft. co.'s railway between M. & certain towns in England. Defts. carried goods at a through rate between the same towns in England & D. viâ H., the land transit being over defts.' railway, & the sea transit being performed by their steamers. Defts. by allowing rebates to the consignors of goods reduced the rate per mile for the land carriage viâ H. so that it was less than the rate for the land carriage viâ M. :—Held : the reduction was the natural result of, & necessary for, fair competition, & did not, therefore, constitute an undue preference by defts. of themselves.

(2) Defts.' rate-book at D. contained a notice that the sea proportion of rates in the book between D. & English stations was represented by a mileage share as for 70 miles of the throughout distance :—Held : this notice was a sufficient compliance with 1888 Act, s. 33 (5).

(3) Held : the particulars of the proportion of a through rate appropriated to the conveyance by sea need not appear in the rate-book kept at a port at which the merchandise is received for conveyance but is a port of call only.—DUBLIN & MANCHESTER S.S. 1116. Increased rates—If goods not consigned through agent.]—(1) A railway co. possessed of a line from B. to C., advertised to convey goods from A. to C., in conjunction with another co., at the rate of 50*s.* per ton, provided they were consigned by & to their own agents at those respective places ; but, if consigned through any one else, they charged 2*s.* 6*s.* per ton more :—Held : a ground for an injunction under 1854 Act.

(2) The rule was made absolute with costs, although it prayed a writ injoining the co. to charge an equal rate for the carriage from A. to C. & the writ was granted as from B. to C. only.

1117. Delivery facilities to agent.]—(1) A railway co. has no right to impose a charge for the conveyance of goods to or from their station, where the customer does not require such service to be performed by them.

(2) The B. & E. Ry. Co. closed their goods station at B. at 5.15 p.m. against all persons except their agent W., who had a receiving house about a mile distant from the station, & from whom the co. received goods up to 8 p.m. For the conveyance of goods from the receiving-house to the station, W. charged 1*s.* 8*d.* per ton on all goods above 3 cwt., & 3*d.* for each package below that weight :—Held : the refusal to receive goods sent by a rival carrier to the station after 5.15 p.m., unless sent through W.'s receiving-house, was imposing upon him an undue prejudice, within 1854 Act, s. 2, although it was sworn on the part of the co. that the goods so brought to the station by W. came there properly classified, weighed, & prepared for loading.

(3) A preference with respect to a reduced rate of carriage of certain goods given by a railway co. to certain individuals in consideration of their contracting to have all such goods consigned to them through the railway, & not by water or other means, is an undue preference within 1854 Act, unless it be clearly shown that it is done in order to prevent a competition with the railway, or that there is secured thereby to the co. such an amount of traffic as to compensate for making the

1118. Waiver of conditions.] — A railway co. permitted a carrier, who also acted as superintendent of their goods traffic, to hold himself out as their agent for the receipt of goods to be carried on their line, & his office as the receiving-office of the co.; goods were received by him at that place without requiring the senders to sign conditions which the co. required all other carriers who brought goods to their stations to sign :—Held : an undue preference, & the subject of an injunction under 1854 Act.—Re BAXENDALE v. BRISTOL & EXETER RY. Many parcels had, however, in fact never been delivered to F., but to C., who acted as the co.'s agents in I., & who sent them direct to F.'s customers. C. were carriers on their own account besides being agents of the co. The co. charged F. full rates, but at the same time they kept a "favoured list," & those whose names appeared on it were charged lower rates. C. delivered the parcels in question to F.'s customers at the lower rates, but as between themselves & the co. it was understood that if they did so in the course of their employment as agents they must pay the difference to the co. :—Held : as between F.'s customers & themselves, the co. were delivering to the customer at a lower price than they charged to F.; & this was an undue preference.—FORD & CO. v. LONDON & SOUTH WESTERN RY. This practice they discontinued, refusing to allow their servants to unload the trucks without an extra charge for such service, except in the case of P., whose goods they continued to unload as before, the smallness of their quantity, & the fact of their being carried intermixed with the co.'s own traffic, rendering it, as the co. alleged, more convenient to themselves so to do. C., however, another carrier, was denied the aid of the co.'s servants in the unloading of his goods of the same description, & coming from the same place, the co. alleging that the same reasons did not apply to his goods as to P.'s, inasmuch as the former came in large quantities, & in separate trucks :—Held : an injunction under 1854 Act,

The co. refused to pay appct. anything at all in respect of such cartage :—Held : if the ry. co. chose to protect themselves by charging only the rate, less the fair allowance for collection, they could do so; but if the goods were carried & charged for at a collection & delivery rate they were bound to pay a reasonable sum to the person who had performed the collecting service.—MENZIES v. CALEDONIAN RY. The ry. co. refused to recognise these words, & delivered the goods to the consignees by their own agents or other carriers :—Held : (1) the words "to the care of F." imported that the goods on their arrival at the terminal stations were to be given to F. or his agents for delivery to the consignees; (2) as between the ry. co. & F. the latter was the consignee, & the ry. co. accepted the goods upon the terms stated in the consignment note; (3) the ry. co. were precluded by the consignment note from being at liberty to employ their own or other carriers to deliver the goods from their railway to the consignees, & should have delivered same to F. or his agents. —FISHBOURNE v. GREAT SOUTHERN & WESTERN RY. defts., was permitted to drive his carriages into the station yard to take up passengers from every train which arrived; applts. were compelled to keep their carriages outside the gates, 300 yards from the station, but were subsequently allowed to enter the station yard to meet only two of the five daily trains. No demand had been made upon defts. to grant the extended accommodation sought:—Held: an injunction for the removal of the restriction should be refused.

Semble: it is much for the convenience of the public that railway cos. should make arrangements for the attendance of a sufficient number of carriages for the conveyance of passengers arriving at their stations, whether in town or country; if anyone indiscriminately might bring his carriages for that purpose, it would give rise to great confusion and obstruction; in all such cases, therefore, it must be clearly shown that the course complained of occasions inconvenience to the public; & regard must be had to the general convenience of the public rather than to the wishes or interests of individual job-masters.—ILFRACOMBE PUBLIC CONVEYANCE CO. v. LONDON & SOUTH WESTERN RY. Co., under 1854 Act, to compel them to issue season-tickets between C. & L. on the same terms as they issued them between H. & L., upon a mere suggestion that the granting the latter, the distance being considerably greater, at a much lower rate than the former, was an undue & unreasonable preference of the inhabitants of H. over those of C.—Re JONES & EASTERN COUNTIES RY. F. Of Traders.

(a) Charges Varying with Locality.

See 1921 Act, ss. 36–39.

1132. Natural advantages of geographical position destroyed—Reduced expense of carriage.]—(1) The mere fact that the state of a person's trade, who requires goods in the way of his trade to be carried by a railway co., is such that it happens not to accommodate itself to a scale & system of rates adopted by the co., which scale & system of rates does not appear to be disadvantageous to the public at large or objectionable in other respects, is no ground for a writ of injunction under 1854 Act.

(2) Where the effect of a scale of charges adopted by a railway co. is such as to diminish the natural advantage which the local position of certain dealers in articles, required by such dealers to be carried in the way of their trade by the railway, gives them over certain other dealers from the greater proximity of the local position of the first mentioned dealers to certain districts in respect of the traffic at those districts, by annihilating in point of expense of carriage a certain portion of the distance between the local position of the last mentioned dealers & these districts, this is an undue preference, & the subject for an injunction under 1854 Act.—Re RANSOME v. EASTERN COUNTIES RY. 1133. —— Constructional or working costs—Whether similar conditions — Equal terms.]—(1) Where there is a competition of interests, & the circumstances in other respects are not dissimilar, the traffic of two localities, both on the same system of railways, although at a distance from each other, is as much within 1854 Act, as regards equality of rates as the traffic of two or more individuals in the same locality.

(2) A railway co. carried beer from B. at lower rates than from N., which was forty miles distant from B. The co. charged all brewers at B. a uniform rate per ton per mile, station to station, with an abatement for loading or unloading, & for haulage when the brewers did those services

k. Same fares for same journeys—Higher rates for intermediate journeys—Competition of interests—Personal disadvantage.]—A ry. co. fixed the rates for passengers travelling between the termini of the line according to a much lower scale than the rates exigible from passengers travelling between intermediate stations:—Held: no one has a title to complain of such proportional rating unless there be a competition of interest, or unless the complainer set forth personal disadvantages to himself.—HOZIER v. CALEDONIAN RY. l. —— Reduced rates to traders—Business considerations.]—A ry. co. issued season tickets to traders who sent or received traffic yielding annually £250 or over at a cheaper rate than to ordinary passengers, the cost of such traders' season tickets being about one-third of the cost of an ordinary season ticket. To traders whose traffic yielded over £1,000 the ry. co. gave a still greater reduction on the season ticket rate. Upon a complaint that the ry. co. were unduly preferring traders who sent or received large quantities of traffic to those sending or receiving small amounts of traffic:—Held: it was entirely a matter of fact whether the preference given was undue; & where such preference was given to all persons alike upon purely business considerations, there was a strong presumption that the preference was not undue.—INVERNESS CHAMBER OF COMMERCE v. HIGHLAND RY. 1133 i. Natural advantages of geographical position destroyed—Constructional or working costs.]—Upon complaint that a ry. co. did not give the traders of N. the benefit of the geographical position of the town with themselves instead of employing the co. to do them:—Held: the lower charges for carrying beer from B. were justified by the special advantages the co. received in dealing with such traffic as compared with appcts.' traffic.

(3) The railway co. carried beer for brewers at B., at one rate per cwt. regardless of the weight of the consignment; at N. they had one tariff for consignments over 500 lbs., another on a higher scale, & higher than their tonnage rates at B., for consignments of 500 lbs. or under in weight:—Held: an undue & unreasonable preference to the brewers at B. over the brewers at N.

(4) The co. carried beer sent from B. in cask by their railway to any place thereon where B. brewers had an agency, & thence, in bottle, to any station on their railway, at a lower rate than that charged for beer in bottle not brewed at B., & also lower than that for beer in bottle from N.:—Held: an undue & unreasonable preference.

(5) The co. carried to B. from other places on their line malt, hops & barley, at lower rates than they carried similar traffic to N.:—Held: they must carry malt, hops & barley to N. on equal terms with the terms on which similar traffic was carried to B., with due regard to any circumstances, which might render the cost of carrying such traffic to N. greater than the cost of carrying to B.—RICHARDSON v. MIDLAND RY. 1135. —— Similar charges for similar services—Cartage rebates.]—(1) Railway cos. charged for certain traffic the same rates from G. & H. to various inland towns, although there was a saving of about one-fifth of the total distance to them from H. in respect of G. The cos. failed to prove that if the same mileage rate per ton were applied to G. as was applied to H. any injustice would follow, or that the maintenance of the existing G. rate was necessary to the maintenance of the H. traffic:—Held: they had given an undue preference to the traders at H.

(2) Where no reason is shown to the contrary the ct. will act on the principle that similar charges should be made for similar services.

(3) The cos. collected in H., free of charge, goods consigned by their railways, or allowed rebates when the cartage was performed by the consignors, but refused to collect the traffic of appcts. at G. free of charge, or to allow them similar rebates:—Held: an undue prejudice & disadvantage to appcts.—TIMM & SON v. NORTH EASTERN RY. 1136. Guarantee of volume—At regular periods—Special agreement—Adequate consideration.]—It is competent to a railway co. to enter into special agreements whereby advantages may be secured to individuals in the carriage of goods upon the railway, where it is made clearly to appear, that, in entering into such agreements, the co. have only the interests of the proprietors & the legitimate increase of the profits of the railway in view, & the consideration given to the co. in return for the advantages afforded by them be adequate, & the co. are willing to afford the same facilities to all others upon the same terms.

1854 Act, s. 2 is not contravened by a railway co. carrying at a lower rate, in consideration of a guarantee of large quantities & full train-loads at regular periods, provided the real object of the co. be to obtain thereby a greater remunerative profit, by the diminished cost of carriage, although the effect may be to exclude from the lower rate those persons who cannot give such a guarantee.—Re NICHOLSON v. GREAT WESTERN RY. (3) Semble: if a trader engages to supply traffic with regularity & in certain quantities for the accommodation of a railway co., so that a lower rate in his case is as remunerative to the co. as a higher rate on similar traffic in the case of others, such an arrangement is not an inequality within 1854 Act.—GREENOP v. SOUTH EASTERN RY. 1139. —— —— ——.]—(1) A railway co. agreed with certain quarry owners, for a term of fourteen years, to carry slates for them over the railway at 2*s.* 6*d.* per ton, the quarry owners on their part agreeing to send their slates by no other mode of transit during that term; subsequently a fresh agreement was entered into with one of the quarry owners for a term of thirty years, reducing the rate to 2*s.* 1½*d.*:—Held: there was nothing which would justify the difference in rate, & such difference was an undue preference & prejudice.

(2) The railway co. alleged that appcts., being obliged to use smaller waggons for their slates than those used by the favoured quarry owner, & sending slates of a lighter description occasioned the co. greater cost for carriage:—Held: 1*d.* per ton would be a reasonable allowance for such increased cost.—HOLLAND v. FESTINIOG RY. 1140. —— Percentage of traffic.]—(1) An agreement between one trader & a railway co. which secures to the trader rates unequal when compared with those of another trader having similar traffic which is carried by the railway co. to the same place is primâ facie an undue preference, & the circumstance that the railway co. have offered the same agreement as to rates & rebates to the competing trader will not necessarily justify the inequality.

(2) Large & regular traffic not being secured by a railway co. under the agreement, the rates & rebates were not justified by the circumstance that a certain percentage of the preferred trader's traffic was agreed to be sent by the railway co.'s line.

(3) If A.'s traffic can be worked more cheaply than B.'s traffic, rates or rebates in proportion to that difference in cost would be justified.—RHYMNEY IRON CO., LTD. v. RHYMNEY RY. CO. (1888), 6 Ry. & Can. Tr. Cas. 60; 4 T. L. R. 717; 5 T. L. R. 28, 102.

Co., guaranteeing 200,000 tons & actually sending 500,000 tons yearly by defts.' line to A. Dock over a slightly longer distance were charged 2*d.* per ton less up to 200,000 tons & less for quantities in excess of that figure. In the case of shipment coal a large & constant supply was necessary so that the railway co. could make their shipment arrangements with certainty & regularity. The railway co. were willing to carry appcts.' coal at the lower rate if they would give a like guarantee as D. Co. as to quantity:—Held: the difference in the rate was justified.

(2) Semble: such a difference of charge would not be justified if appcts. sent quantities of coal comparable to those which the D. Co. sent, & promised from month to month, without any guarantee, a sufficient continuance of supply to enable the railway co. to make all necessary arrangements for shipment.

(3) Under 1888 Act, s. 27, the ct. will take into consideration any circumstances which makes it better worth the while of the railway co. to carry the traffic of one trader rather than the traffic of another.—HICKLETON MAIN COLLIERY CO., LTD. v. HULL, BARNSLEY & WEST RIDING JUNCTION RY. & DOCK CO. 1142. Consignment of minimum quantities—Reduced rate for—Convenience of carriage.]—A railway co. published a reduced rate for the carriage of coals in quantities of not less than 35 trucks, consigned to certain specified districts. In carrying coal to one of such districts, the co. for their own convenience, in consequence of steep gradients, detached some of the trucks at C., & sent them on afterwards by other trains to which they might be advantageously attached. All the coals were carried to the district to which they had been so consigned:—Held: (1) not an undue preference to the consignors; (2) to have left part of the coals for consumption at C., & carried the residue on at the lower rate of charge, would have been an infringement of the tariff.—Re RANSOME v. EASTERN COUNTIES RY. E. stations in a year & pay for the carriage of the same punctually every month. In the rate books at various stations on the M. Ry. Co.'s line was inserted on the fly-leaf at the beginning of the book a printed slip stating that "rebates are allowed to coal merchants from certain rates to stations in the Eastern Counties & upon certain conditions, the particulars of which may be obtained on application to the general manager":—Held: not a sufficient publication to relieve the railway co. from liability under 1888 Act, s. 13.

(2) Midland Ry. Co. allowed to certain coal merchants having coal depots on the system of the G. E. Ry. Co. in respect of coal coming from collieries on the system of the M. Ry. Co., a rebate of 3*d.* per ton off the rate charged for the carriage of coal, but alleged that this was done only on condition that the coal merchants to whom such rebate was allowed sent in the course of a year from such collieries over the line of the M. Ry. Co. not less than a specified number of tons of coal, & also rendered the co. certain services in paying carriage for such traffic:—Held: the circumstances justified a difference of 1*d.* per ton only.—DALDY & CO. v. MIDLAND RY. Fair interests of company—Purpose of preference—Allowance for trucks.]—(1) In determining, under 1854 Act, s. 2, whether a railway co. have given an undue & unreasonable preference to a particular person, co. or traffic, or subjected a particular person, co. or traffic to an undue or unreasonable prejudice or disadvantage, the ct. may take into consideration the fair interests of the railway itself, & entertain such questions as whether the co. might not carry larger quantities, or for longer distances, at lower rates per ton per mile, than smaller quantities, or for shorter distances, so as to derive equal profits to itself.

(2) Defts. entered into an agreement with P. to convey his inland-borne coals over their line at certain rates, to various places. Pltf., a coal merchant, bringing sea-borne coals to a point on defts.' line, sent such coals over defts.' railway to various places, but was charged a much larger sum per ton per mile, in proportion to the distance the coal was carried, than was charged to P., the manifest object of this differential charge being to enable railway-borne to compete with sea-borne coals:—Held: defts. by their agreement with P., gave him an undue preference & advantage over pltf., within 1854 Act, s. 2; & an injunction should issue restraining defts. from giving P. such preference, & enjoining them to carry coals for pltf. & P. on equal terms, having due regard to the circumstances, if any, which render the cost in carrying for the one party less than that of carrying for the other.—Re RANSOME v. EASTERN COUNTIES RY. 1149. —— Whether interests too remote.]—(1) A railway co., in consideration of their customers signing an agreement, one of the conditions of which was that the customers would not send their produce by any other railway than that of the contracting co., agreed to convey their produce at a reduced rate per ton:—Held: the granting of the lower charges in the circumstances created inequalities which contravened the provisions of 1854 Act, & an injunction would be granted to prevent a railway creating such inequalities in the future, for a railway co. cannot compel the public to purchase equality of treatment by imposing conditions of that character.

(2) Equal treatment does not consist in all being offered a similar agreement; for if the agreement is not for the public benefit, or if it goes beyond the fair regard which a company may pay to its own interests, it leaves untouched the right of all under the Act to be upon equal terms. Although a co. may consult its own fair interests, this does not extend to interests remote from present transactions, & from any profits to be made out of them.

(3) Deft. co. charged appcts. for the use of their waggons off the line, & demurrage if they detained them more than twenty hours; quarry owners who entered into the above-mentioned agreement were charged nothing for use of waggons & were not charged demurrage until after the expiration of thirty hours:—Held: the service off the line was incidental to the forwarding, etc. of the traffic, & the circumstance of the favour shown being in respect of something done off the line did not take the case out of 1854 Act, s. 2.

(4) Defts. charged appcts. for shunting goods on to a siding the property of appcts., but did not charge other quarry owners for shunting on sidings, the property of defts., connecting their quarries with defts.' line. The service was not more onerous to defts. in one case than the other:—Held: an undue preference within 1854 Act, s. 2.

s. Fair interests of company—Charges proportionate to cost & labour—Incidence of special service.]—A ry. co. agreed with colliery owners to carry their coal at rates lower than those charged to other colliery owners, with whom they had no agreement. The co. attempted to justify the preference on the ground that the traffic not covered by the agreement was more costly to carry in consequence of a steep descending incline from the collieries to the main line. The higher rate was imposed whichever direction the coal traffic took, while it passed down the incline in going in one direction only:—Held: a charge purporting to be in respect of a special service, such as in respect of the incline, should not have its incidence extended to traffic for which that service was not performed, & payment in respect of such incline should take the form of a fixed reasonable toll payable only for the traffic using the incline. A ry. co. pay no more than a due regard to their own interests if they charge for their services in proportion to their necessary cost, & have only such variation in their rates as there is in the circumstances of their customers affecting the cost & labour of conveyance.—BELLSDYKE COAL CO. v. NORTH BRITISH RY. 1150. Economic arrangement—Rebate in excess of saving.]—When the rebate allowed to one customer for haulage represents, in addition to the actual locomotive expenses, the value to the cos. of being able to discharge their loaded trucks outside their station, & in the goods yards of other persons, such rebate is not an undue preference, but a part of a traffic arrangement of general convenience and economy.

Where, on the other hand, a rebate allowed to a customer is clearly in excess of the value of the service of which he relieves a railway co., such rebate is an undue preference, & will not be allowed by the ct.—BELL v. LONDON & NORTH WESTERN RY. 1153. Canal traffic—Less cost & trouble.]—The D. Colliery, were charged 13½*d.*; the coal traffic on the canal between D. Colliery & K. was worked with less expense & trouble to the canal owners than the traffic between the other collieries & K. :—Held : the D. Colliery Co. were subjected to an undue & unreasonable prejudice & disadvantage by being charged a toll only one half-penny less than the other colliery proprietors.—DENABY MAIN COLLIERY CO. v. MANCHESTER, SHEFFIELD & LINCOLNSHIRE RY. CO. (1881), 4 Ry. & Can. Tr. Cas. 28.

1154. Junction charge—No statutory authority.]—Charges which a railway co. have no statutory power to make, & which are intended or calculated to prevent, & do in fact prevent the conveyance of traffic on the railway, are a violation of 1854 Act, s. 2.

Deft. co. alleged that 2*d.*, part of a rate charged to appct. was justified as a junction charge to cover a special cost of working, in that, at the junction, traffic passed from one line to another by a steep incline. The incline was not, in fact, as steep as another incline in respect of which no special charge was made & the co. had no statutory authority for making a special charge in respect of the incline :—Held : the charge was unjustified & subjected appct. to an unreasonable disadvantage.—YOUNG v. GWENDRAETH VALLEYS RY. CO. (1883), 4 Ry. & Can. Tr. Cas. 247.

1155. Average weight of loads—Certainty of return loads—Higher cost of station staff.]—A railway co. sought to justify an inequality in the rates for barley carried to D. & B. respectively on the grounds that (a) the traffic of the two places differed greatly in amount, the total traffic of B. being 600,000 tons per annum, of which 55,000 tons were barley, & that of D. 220,000 tons, of which 6,900 tons were barley; (b) the truck loads conveyed to D. did not weigh as much per truck as to B., the earnings on the extra weight being all clear profit; (c) a considerable proportion of the trucks sent to D. came away empty on the outward journey, whereas loaded waggons into B. were practically certain of a back load; (d) the cost of the goods station staff at D. was higher than at B. :—Held : (1) a difference of charge could not be sustained on the general ground that the aggregate traffic of the one place exceeded that of the other; (2) some difference might be allowed in respect of the average weight of truck loads; (3) some difference might be allowed in respect of the certainty of back loads from B.; (4) as barley was not a part of the merchandise handled in the goods station either at B. or at D., the cost of the goods staff was no part of the working charges in carrying it; (5) subject to the above allowances & to any other circumstances which might render the one traffic more costly to the co. than the other, the co. must carry on equally favourable terms to B. & D.—GIRARDOT, FLINN & CO. v. MIDLAND RY. 1156. Mode of packing—Unfair competition.]—Tomatoes were carried by defts. from D. viâ N. to B. & from G. viâ N. to B. at through rates. There was a considerable difference in the rates in favour of D. which was explained by the D. traffic being packed in crates & the G. traffic being packed in baskets, with the result that nearly twice the quantity of tomatoes could be carried in a railway truck if packed in crates :—Held : (1) the difference in the mode of packing justified the preference given to the D. traffic; (2) the fact that the steamers carrying between D. & N. & belonging to a French railway co., although one of deft. railway cos. was also interested in them, were carrying at too low & probably at an unremunerative freight afforded appcts. no ground for relief.—GUERNSEY MUTUAL TRANSPORT CO., LTD. & ENTWISTLE v. LONDON, BRIGHTON & SOUTH COAST RY. No such classification was made on the other branch :—Held : if by reason of the gradients or otherwise the cost of conveyance of the coal to the ry. co. on the one branch was different from the cost on the other, a proportionate difference might be made by the ry. co. in the mileage rate.—NITSHILL & LESMAHAGOW COAL CO. v. CALEDONIAN RY. (e) Grouping.

Acts amounting to breach of "equality clause."] —See No. 1075, ante.

1159. Whether places unreasonably distant—Long route—Practically in same district.]—(1) A trader was charged the same through rates to certain places, for traffic from his siding, as was charged for traffic from a siding situated two or three miles farther from them. Both sidings were situated in the same district, & had been grouped together by the railway co. for through rate purposes:—Held: as a through rate was a gross sum of a small amount for conveyance over a long route, it was enough if places that were practically in the same district had the same rate, & no undue prejudice was caused to appct. by the same rate being applicable to both the sidings.

(2) Upon proof that a railway co. had charged more than they were entitled to take under the maximum clause of their special Act, the Comrs. made an order under 1854 Act, s. 2, enjoining the co. to desist in future from exceeding the limit prescribed by their special Act.—LLOYD v. NORTHAMPTON & BANBURY JUNCTION RY. CO. (1878), 3 Ry. & Can. Tr. Cas. 259.

1160. 1888 Act, s. 29—Measure of preference.]—(1) Where there is a group rate which is justified on the grounds of commercial convenience, the measure of what amount of preference amounts to an "undue" preference is different from that applicable where no such rate exists.

(2) Appcts.' works were situated at a point on the line of the F. Ry. Co. 18 miles from the junction of the line of that co. with the line of the L. Ry. Co.; other works in the district were situated on the F. Ry. at distances of 27, 28, & 38 miles respectively from that junction. All these works obtained iron ore & coke from the same sources, made the same description of pig iron & sent it to the same markets. The railway cos. grouped all these works together, & charged them a uniform rate of carriage, except that appcts. were charged 6*d.* a ton less than the owners of the other works in respect of the coke:—Held: so far as the rate for coke was concerned the railway cos. had made sufficient allowance for the difference in distance between the works; but as regards the pig-iron rates, some of the places grouped together were at such distances as to create an undue preference.—NORTH LONSDALE IRON & STEEL CO., LTD. v. FURNESS RY. CO., LONDON & NORTH WESTERN RY. CO., MIDLAND RY. CO., & NORTH EASTERN RY. CO. (1891), 7 Ry. & Can. Tr. Cas. 146; 60 L. J. Q. B. 419; 64 L. T. 122.

1161. —— Application for group rates—What evidence necessary—Public advantage.]—The M. colliery was equidistant from the main line of the T. Ry. Co., appcts., & that of the R. Ry. Co. Both cos. charged uniform mileage rates over their systems, but, owing to the T. Co.'s rate being the higher, traffic sent to C. by that line, though the shorter, cost ½*d.* per ton more. T. Ry. Act, 1879, s. 24, incorporated 1845 Act, s. 90, with a proviso that appcts. should not give any undue advantages to the traffic of any one of the valleys traversed by the co.'s system. Appcts. proposed to reduce their rates from M. colliery to C. to the same sum as charged by the R. Ry. Co., on the ground that while the geographical position of the colliery entitled the colliery owners to a competitive service by the two routes, & appcts. to a share of the traffic, the other collieries on appcts.' line would not be thereby affected in any way:—Held: (1) there was not sufficient evidence to break in upon the uniform mileage system established over appcts.' & neighbouring railways, taking into consideration T. Ry. Act, 1879, s. 24, as well as Railway & Canal Traffic Acts.

Semble: (2) no public advantage would be served by the proposed lowering of rate, as the coal would come to C. in any event; (3) no public interest would be served by a particular colliery having an improved train service.

(4) In the exercise of jurisdiction under 1888 Act, s. 29 (3), no order should be made unless the Comrs. are of opinion that all the interests are before the ct., & then only on the fullest possible evidence.—Re TAFF VALE RY. CO. (1900), 11 Ry. & Can. Tr. Cas. 89.

1162. —— Dissolution & regrouping.]—(1) A railway co. carried coke to certain ironworks & grouped them, & the grouping had been held by the Comrs. to be reasonable. Subsequently the railway co. took one of the ironworks out of the group:—Held: 1888 Act, s. 29, does not prevent a railway co. from grouping de novo, or dissolving a group, or taking one place out of it in the sense of leaving the others in, & not putting that one in.

(2) Qu.: whether under 1894 Act, s. 1, a railway co. can be called upon to justify the increase of rates which have been lowered since Dec. 31, 1892, but re-raised to a point not exceeding the level of 1892.—MILLOM & ASKAM HEMATITE IRON CO., LTD. v. FURNESS RY. 1163. On same footing as home goods—1888 Act, s. 27.]—All inequalities in rates as between home & foreign merchandise are not prohibited; but if the railway co. can justify the admitted differences had the goods in both cases been home goods, the co. are not debarred from relying on those facts as an answer merely because the goods in question are of foreign origin.—MANSION HOUSE ASSOCN. 1167. Coal storage cells—Higher charges where cells not rented.]—(1) The N. E. Railway Co. carried coals to certain stations on their line for colliery owners only, and at such stations there were cells for the receipt and sale of the coal let to colliery owners for their separate use, at rents averaging less than 3*d.* per ton on the coal sold, & also unappropriated cells for the receipt of coal sent by colliery owners not renting cells. The latter were charged a higher rate of carriage than the colliery owners renting cells, & in addition a charge of 3*d.* per ton in lieu of rent. The rent & charge respectively covered all terminal services, but the services rendered the colliery owners renting cells exceeded those rendered at the unappropriated cells:—Held: the extra charge for carriage, & the charge of 3*d.* per ton in lieu of rent, occasioned an undue prejudice to the colliery owners not renting cells.

(2) Semble: a railway co. cannot make any terminal charge for merely unloading into a depot where they have no sidings for delivery.—LOCKE v. NORTH EASTERN RY. CO. (1877), 3 Ry. & Can. Tr. Cas. 44.

1168. Considerations of distance.]—A difference in the distance the traffic is carried is not of itself a valid answer to a complaint of undue preference under 1854 Act, s. 2, & no conclusive inference is to be drawn either on the one hand from a railway co. not carrying at an equal mileage rate, or not making an equal mileage rate, or not making an equal profit per mile, nor, on the other hand, from the rate for the longer distance, though less per mile, amounting to more for the whole distance, or leaving a larger sum as profit after payment of expenses; & in determining the question whether the lower mileage rate is or is not an undue advantage, it is necessary to consider whether either traffic is able to be carried at a less cost to the railway co. than the other, or whether either traffic is under different conditions as regards competition of routes or other special circumstances.—BROUGHTON & PLAS POWER COAL CO. LTD. v. GREAT WESTERN RY. CO. (1883), 4 Ry. & Can. Tr. Cas. 191.

1169. ——.]—(1) Where relatively to distance the rates as between traders are fairly adjusted, but the maximum applicable to the line over which the traffic of one of these is carried is higher than the maximum under other Acts of Parliament applicable to the line over which the traffic of the other is carried, but in both cases the rates charged are below the maximum, the fact that there is not a ratable reduction of the authorised rates below the maximum does not constitute an undue preference of the trader whose traffic is carried on the line to which the higher statutory maximum is applicable, under 1854 Act, s. 2.

(2) The difference in the rates charged to two ironworks situate at different distances from the market to which the traffic of each was sent was a sum insufficient to pay the cost of earning the difference in the two rates; the only reason was that a low rate was necessary to enable the further works to compete with the works nearer to the market:—Held: an undue preference to the owners of the further works.

(3) Appcts., except those coming within 1873 Act, s. 13, must show that they are damaged by the undue preference complained of.

(4) If a customer to whom credit has been allowed retains a balance due to a railway co. as a set-off against a balance in dispute on another account, the co. are justified in refusing such customer a further ledger account, without contravening 1854 Act, s. 2.—SKINNINGROVE IRON CO. v. NORTH EASTERN RY. 1173. —— Railway & steamers.]—(1) Steamers were provided & worked for the conveyance of mails & passengers between H. & K. by D. Steamboat Co., under statutory powers & agreements obtained & made between that co. & N. W. Ry. Co. The charges for the conveyance of passenger traffic by such route (called the mail route) between K. & L. etc., were fixed as regards the through rates by N. W. Ry. Co. The N. W. Ry. Co. subsequently established a service of steamers for passengers between H. & D. called the N. route. The effect of the statutory agreement between the two cos. was to give N. W. Ry. Co. a complete control over the fares of both routes, as if they were sole owners of both, & the provisions of the 1854 Act (which were made expressly applicable to both those lines of steamers) applied to both routes as if they had been parts of the same system. The N. W. Ry. Co's. service of steamers was almost equal to the mail service in point of speed & accommodation, & its fares were much lower. The services between H. & D., the mileages, adding that from K. to D., the accommodation by, & the working costs of the vessels of the two cos. were all substantially the same :—Held : on the facts, the amounts by which the fares by the mail route were more than those by the N. route, whether in regard, to the fares charged for the entire service to D. or the portions due to the land journey only, were excessive & an undue prejudice to the traffic by the former route.

(2) The D. Steam Packet Co. applied for through rates for passengers between K. & L., viâ the co's. steamers & N. W. Co's. railway :—Held : the D. Steam Packet Co. having agreed, under statutory powers, that the charges for the conveyance of passengers traffic between L. & K. were to be fixed from time to time, as regards the through rates, by the railway co., the application must be refused.

(3) A passenger desiring to use an ordinary train for part of a journey, for which he has taken a through ticket entitling him to travel by express is not entitled to any deduction from the through fare on account of the difference of the service.—CITY OF DUBLIN STEAM PACKET CO. v. LONDON & NORTH WESTERN RY. Co. (1881), 4 Ry. & Can. Tr. Cas. 10.

1174. —— Consignor's right of choice—Consignor's directions.]—A railway co. who had two routes by which they could carry appct.'s traffic, disregarded the consignor's orders by carrying by a different route from that by which the traffic was consigned. This change of the route did not affect the rate which the co. charged for the conveyance of the traffic, & appct. was not in any worse position than he would have been put in if the co. had carried the traffic over the desired route :—Held : the co. had not contravened 1854 Act, s. 2.—DONALD v. NORTH EASTERN RY. Co. (1888), 6 Ry. & Can. Tr. Cas. 53.

1175. Alternative forwarding routes—Indirect compulsion.]—Appcts.' line & the G. N. line each formed with defts.' line a continuous line of railway from certain collieries to stations on defts.' line, & were in competition with each other. The through rates by each were equal but the apportionment as to the traffic coming over the G. N. line was the more favourable to defts. The G. N. Co. handled traffic in as convenient a manner as did appcts. Defts. let land at the above stations for use as coal wharves, imposing & enforcing on each of their tenants, as part of the terms of letting, a condition that, the rates being equal, traffic consigned to these wharves should travel over the G. N. route :—Held : this did not constitute an undue & unreasonable preference of or advantage to the G. N. Co., & did not deprive appcts. of reasonable facilities for conveying their traffic within 1854 Act, s. 2.—LONDON & NORTH WESTERN

c. —— —— Through booking—Timing of trains—Advertisement of routes.]—Under a working agreement the working co. was to work the railway of the worked co. as part of their system of railways, & "convey traffic thereo in a proper & convenient manner, so as fairly to develop the traffic of the district" :—Held : (1) the trains on the worked line must be timed, so as to correspond with the trains on the lines of the working co. rather than with the trains of another co. with which they might be made to connect ; (2) the working co. must as fully advertise a competitive route over the line of the worked co. as they did the route on their own line which competed with it ; (3) the working co. must give equal facilities as to through booking viâ the worked line, as viâ their own, must not prefer their own route in the matter of rates, & must not fix the rates on the worked line too high in proportion to the rates on their own line.—CLONMEL TRADERS (DWYER, HAYES, & MCCARTHY) & SOUTHERN RY. Co. v. WATERFORD & LIMERICK RY. Co. (1881), 4 Ry. & Can. Tr. Cas. 92.—IR.

d. —— —— Arrangement of services.]—Where a ry. co. are owners of 2 or more lines forming parts of alternative routes between the same places it is their duty to see that the service is as good one way as it is the other, subject to what may be required for the general purposes of their traffic. They are at perfect liberty to send all the traffic they have the control of in whichever direction they like, & to canvass as much as they please for consignments in the direction which suits themselves best. But so far as & to whatever extent, they, without sufficient excuse, give a worse service in one direction, than they supply in the other, they are guilty under 1854 Act, s. 2, of an undue prejudice to the traffic desirous of using the route in which the service is worse.—AYRSHIRE & WIGTOWNSHIRE RY. 1176. Contract with steamboat owner—To detriment of other owners.]—(1) The S. Co. & the R. Co. respectively owned passenger steamboats plying between S. & R.; & the B. Ry. Co. carried passengers by their own line to S., & entered into a traffic arrangement with the R. Co. that their vessels should run between S. & R. in connection with the line of the railway co., & issued through tickets to passengers from places on their line to R., available by the boats of the R. Co., to the exclusion of the boats of the S. Co.:—Held: in the circumstances this arrangement did not amount to an undue preference of the R. Co.

(2) The S. Co. alleged that the fares charged by the railway co. in respect of the part of the journey performed on the boats of the R. Co. were unreasonably high:—Held: this was a question which could not be raised by the S. Co. against the railway co.—SOUTHSEA & ISLE OF WIGHT STEAM FERRY CO. v. LONDON & SOUTH WESTERN RY. 1177. 1854 Act, s. 2—Alleged preference not per se detrimental to complainant.]—The test of the character of an act which is alleged to be undue preference under 1854 Act, s. 2 is, where the alleged preference is not, per se, detrimental to complainant, its tendency in respect of public benefit & convenience.—LEES v. LANCASHIRE & YORKSHIRE RY. 1178. 1888 Act, s. 27 — "The public."] — (1) Semble: the effect of 1888 Act, s. 27 is not to limit the ct. in dealing with questions of alleged undue preference to the consideration whether the lower charge is necessary for the interests of the public.

(2) An association of traders in grain & flour at L. complained against deft. co. for undue preference by charging lower rates from C. to B. in comparison with those charged from L. to B., a shorter distance. The lower rates had been fixed with reference to competition with other lines for traffic from C. to B.:—Held: on the facts of the traffic, there was undue preference.

(3) However difficult it may be in any particular case to say what is or what is not in the interests of the public, the public must be a wider one than that of one of the two localities concerned (WILLS, J.)

(4) It is enough to warrant an application under 1888 Act, s. 7, calling upon the ct. to interfere, if the practices complained of, whether their present effect be serious or trivial, are in themselves objectionable, & if they may lead to consequences legally injurious to the interests of those represented by appcts.—LIVERPOOL CORN TRADE ASSOCN. v. LONDON & NORTH WESTERN RY. 1179. —— —— In district affected.] — The public referred to in 1888 Act, s. 27 is the public of the locality or district affected, & any considerable proportion of the population in general, as opposed to an individual or association of individuals, will satisfy the description. Appcts. complained that the rates charged by the defts. for the carriage of grain and flour from the neighbouring ports to B. were lower than those charged for similar merchandise from K. to B., a shorter distance, & amounted to an undue preference. It was proved (a) that traders using K. were able notwithstanding the difference of rates to compete effectively at B. with traders who sent grain traffic from C.; (b) that the rates from C. to B. had been fixed with reference to an effective competition, & that without them defts. would lose the traffic from C. altogether; (c) that the existing inequality in rates must be maintained if B. was to have the benefit of both sources of supply:—Held: (1) the preference was justified; (2) the proper construction of s. 27 was that the Comrs. could take the matters mentioned therein into consideration only so far as they thought reasonable; they could therefore decline to take them into consideration at all, or take them into consideration wholly, or take part of them into consideration, & to take a thing into consideration did not bind them to apply it; they might think whether they would apply them or not, but they might come to the conclusion that they could not apply them: (3) it would be contrary to the benefit of the public to raise the rates complained of; (4) the inequality which existed in the case was not an inequality, but was such that it should be maintained.—LIVERPOOL CORN TRADERS' ASSOCN. v. GREAT WESTERN RY. improving the navigation of the river O., charged L., a competitor in trade with appcts., a less sum by way of toll for the use of the river O. navigation than they charged appcts.

Resps. had agreed to accept a maximum annual payment of £600 from L. in place of the tolls which would otherwise have been payable, & sought to justify the agreement on the ground that at the date it was entered into L. contemplated transferring his business to H., which would have seriously diminished the tolls & would even have imperilled the maintenance of the navigation, & that such a removal would also have caused a serious loss to the ratepayers of the city, &, moreover, that L.'s business had increased to a far greater extent than was contemplated when the agreement was entered into. Resps. got no benefit of any increase of traffic produced by the lowering of the traffic rate; if the traffic increased they were not to get any benefit beyond the £600; if the traffic fell off the payment was to be reduced below £600 unless there was sufficient traffic to make up that sum:—Held: the difference in the charge was an undue preference.—FAIRWEATHER & Co. v. YORK CORPN. 1182. —— Securing competition—Of collieries.]—(1) A railway co., under an agreement, allowed a certain rebate upon the total annual carriage accounts paid by R. in respect of the carriage of coal from collieries situated on the railway co.'s system to all stations or places in the United Kingdom, other than stations on the G. E. Ry. outside L., but did not allow the same rebate on similar traffic of appcts. who were trade competitors of R.:—Held: the terms & conditions contained in the agreement with R. did not afford a justification for the railway co. making a difference between R. & appcts. as regards rebate to the extent complained of.

(2) The words "Rebates are allowed to coal merchants off their coal traffic accounts in certain cases & upon certain conditions, where the annual tonnage carried exceeds 25,000 tons. Particulars of the conditions qualifying merchants to this allowance may be obtained on application to the general manager," inserted in the rate-books were not sufficient to disclose the existence of the rebate in accordance with 1873 Act, s. 14.—CHARRINGTON, SELLS, DALE & Co. v. MIDLAND RY. 1183. —— —— Of fishing markets—Prosperity of local industry.]—Appcts., fish trawlers at S., complained of the railway rates for fish by passenger train from S. to L., alleging that those rates in relation to those charged for the same class of traffic from M. to L. constituted an undue preference to the M. traders. M. is 69 miles farther from L. than S. but the rates charged for the conveyance of fish by passenger train from M. were the same as charged for the like traffic from S. The rates from M. were fixed having regard to competition with the other fishing ports in the British Isles. The railway co. ran a fast goods train from S. by which fish could be sent at lower rates than from M. whence all the fish must be sent by passenger train. From M. to S. there was competition by sea with the railway transit by land:—Held: (1) the existing M. rates were justified inasmuch as it was in the public interest that as many avenues of approach as possible should be kept open to L. for fishing markets & also inasmuch as it was in the interest of a considerable community at & around M. that its fish industry should be enabled to continue to thrive; (2) there was no evidence to show that the existing S. rates were in relation to those from M. unreasonable or excessive.

(3) The ct. has no general power to reduce rates, & can make an order only where they are so high in relation to other rates as to amount to an undue prejudice.

(4) The expression "the public" in 1888 Act, s. 27 (2), includes any considerable portion of the population not being the parties or their servants, & therefore includes the inhabitants of any district dependent for its prosperity on any given industry or trade.—CASTLE STEAM TRAWLERS, LTD. v. GREAT WESTERN RY. Co. (1908), 13 Ry. & Can. Tr. Cas. 145; 24 T. L. R. 317.

1184. —— Difference in shipment & works rate.]—(1) The mere fact that a railway co. carrying coal from a colliery charge a higher rate for carriage of coal over the same length of line to traders' works, all traders being charged an equal rate, than they do for coal for shipment, is not of itself sufficient to give a trader a right to apply to the court for reduction of the works rate, & such difference between the works rate & the shipment rate does not necessarily show an undue preference or an undue prejudice within Railway & Canal Traffic Acts.

(2) Semble: in such case, the fact that the rates are charged by the railway co. to & paid by the colliery co., & not directly charged to or paid by a trader himself in the first instance, does not prevent the trader from applying to the ct. under the Railway & Canal Traffic Acts, if in substance the charge is made so as to affect the trader's interest.—SPILLERS, BAKER & Co. v. TAFF VALE RY. 1185. —— Development of new industry.]—A complaint was made that railway rates constituted an undue preference in favour of certain cos.:—Held: (1) it was no defence that the rates were originally fixed with a view to the development of a new industry, or that the traffic of appcts., who were merchants, was not comparable with that of the cos., who were manufacturers; (2) the rates complained of could not be justified, & consituted an undue preference; (3) the proviso in 1888 Act, s. 12, applied to a claim for damages in respect of undue preference.—ANGLO-AMERICAN OIL Co., LTD. v. CALEDONIAN RY. miles were charged, up to twenty 1*d.*, up to sixty, about ½*d.*, over sixty, about ¼*d.*, per mile, with a difference of not less than 1*d.* between two consecutive rates. The rates of the scale were lower than the local coal rates of the co. It did not appear that there was a greater disproportion in relation to distance in the charges than in the cost of carriage to the co. or than was justified by sea competition, but it did appear that in some instances the scale was not equally applied:—Held: if the principle on which the scale was graduated was a fair consideration of the cost to the co. of carrying coals for the different distances, or was justified by sea competition, it was not a valid objection to the scale that it was better adapted to the business of some merchants than of others, & that its low rates for long distances were useless to those who dealt in the seaborne coal.

(2) 1854 Act does not prevent a railway co. from having special rates of charge to a terminus to which traffic can be carried by other modes of carriage with which theirs is in competition.—FOREMAN v. GREAT EASTERN RY. CO. (1875), 2 Ry. & Can. Tr. Cas. 202.

1188. —— ——.]—Pltf. was a registered officer of a co., the proprietors of iron & tinplate works, situate near defts.' railway, & 12 miles distant from the port of S. on defts.' railway to L. Defts. charged the co. for the carriage of iron & tin plates over their line from the co.'s works to L. more than they charged other manufacturers of iron & tin plates, whose works were situate within a radius of six miles of S., & further, therefore, from L. than pltf.'s co.'s works. The lower rate was fixed by defts. as the charge for the carriage of the goods of these manufacturers within the six miles' radius in order to enable defts. to compete with the sea carriage between S. & L.; by reason of the lesser charge these manufacturers who were thus favoured were enabled to sell their plates at a lower price than pltf.'s co.:—Held: the lower rate for a longer distance was an undue & unreasonable preference & contravened 1854 Act, s. 2; & (2) pltf. was entitled to maintain an action to recover the amounts paid by his co. to defts. in excess of the lower rate.—BUDD v. LONDON & NORTH WESTERN RY. 1191. —— Adequate consideration.]—(1) The N. W. Ry. Co. carried goods by their railway for complainants, brewers at B., & charged them & the public generally for cartage & terminal services there. T. & C., who were also brewers at B., had breweries connected with the M. R. Co.'s station at that place by continuous railway communication; the goods which they sent or received by the M. line were loaded & unloaded on their own premises by their servants, & they were consequently not charged by the M. R. Co. any rate for cartage or terminal services.

The N. W. Ry. Co., in order to compete with the M. Ry. Co. for the carriage of the goods of T. & C., carted & loaded their goods gratuitously. There was nothing to show that there was a saving of cost to the co. by reason of the quantity of goods carried for T. & C. to compensate for the loss of the cartage & terminal charges, & T. & C. were the only firms not charged:—Held: there was no sufficient ground for the arrangements made in their favour.

(2) To justify a difference made by a railway co. in favour of one or more individual members of their general class of customers there must be an adequate consideration to the co. lessening the costs to them of the services rendered to such individual members of the general class; it is not sufficient that the co. merely desire to attract the traffic from another line to themselves, especially where the favour thus shown to a few is prejudicial to many others in the same trade as the favoured persons.—THOMPSON v. LONDON & NORTH WESTERN RY. 1192. —— Cartage rebates.]—(1) 1845 Act, s. 90, requires equality of tolls for similar services rendered by railway cos. to all persons, & 1854 Act, s. 2, forbids the giving of any undue or unreasonable preference or advantage to any particular person or co. A charge made by a railway against A. for services rendered by that co. to him must not, therefore, be greater than the charge made by the same co. against B. for rendering him services of the like nature.

E. was a brewer at B., where three railways had their stations. With one of these railways, M., certain brewers in the town had direct communication by sidings, which enabled the goods to be sent to the trains, & taken from the trains of railway M. with greater ease & less loss of time than by the way of ordinary cartage. M. charged them nothing for cartage, & made a rebate in the charge for station to station conveyance. These brewers had no such communication with Railway N. W., but it was often convenient for them to send by that railway; & the directors of that railway, in order to compete with railway M., allowed these particular brewers the same advantages as to cartage rebate as railway M. did. As to all others in the same trade, the directors of the railway N. W. made the ordinary charge for cartage, & allowed no rebate on the charge for conveyance on the line:—Held: this was an inequality & an undue preference.

(2) E., one of the persons thus paying the higher rate, had for some time paid it in ignorance of the facts, but afterwards, on finding that he was subject to the higher charge, paid it under protest:—Held: he was entitled to recover back in an action for money had & received the difference he had so paid under protest.—LONDON & NORTH WESTERN RY. 1194. —— Shorter competing route.]—(1) Appcts. consigned coal from their collieries by way of defts.' railway to W., a distance of 31 miles. E. also consigned coal from his collieries by way of defts.' railway to W., a distance of 33 miles. Defts. charged the appcts. for the conveyance of the coal traffic between the two points 2*s.* 1*d.* a ton, & E. 1*s.* 9*d.* a ton. Both appcts. & E. had an alternative route to W. by the line of another co. By the alternative route the distance between E.'s collieries was 20 miles, & between appcts.' colliery & W., 27 miles, & the rate of 1*s.* 9*d.* per ton was also the rate charged by the other co. to E. by such shorter route. Defts. contended that the existence of that shorter alternative route gave E. a geographical competitive position which justified the lower rate, & that to apply the mileage principle, where competitive routes exist, would shut up the longer route, which was not in the interests of the public :—Held : the difference of 4*d.* per ton in favour of E. was an undue preference, there not being sufficient public interest to justify so great a difference.

(2) Subsequently defts. reduced the rate charged to appcts. to 2*s.* per ton :—Held : the preference of 3*d.* per ton given to E. was neither undue nor reasonable.—ABRAM COAL CO. v. GREAT CENTRAL RY. CO. (1905), 12 Ry. & Can. Tr. Cas. 125 ; 21 T. L. R. 264.

SUB-SECT. 4.—EFFECT OF AGREEMENT.

See 1921 Act, s. 44 (3).

1198. With complainant—Authority of agent—Effect of subsequent statute.]—A contract was made between the agents of a railway co. & the owners of a coal mine, to carry the coals at a stated tonnage for twenty-one years, & it was agreed that the contract should be reduced into a more formal instrument, & should contain all the terms stated in the "correspondence," which was one that had taken place between the parties & their agents respecting the same. The coals were so carried, & after a time the co.'s business passed to, & the co. was consolidated with, a new co., formed under an Act of Parliament, who continued the carriage of the coals at the same rate. They then alleged, that the agents for the old co. had exceeded their authority in making the contract for twenty-one years, & demanded an increased rate of tonnage, which was paid, under protest, by the owners of the coal mine :—Held : whether at the date of agreement there was authority in the agent to accede to such a term as twenty-one years or not, looking at the acts of the parties, the co. were bound for that time while they subsisted as a co., & before the Act of Parliament passed, even if they were not bound by it at the date of the agreement.—SOWERBY v. PONTOP & SOUTH SHIELDS RY. CO. (1846), 8 L. T. O. S. 114; 10 Jur. 942.

1199. —— Construction of.]—A railway co. agreed with A. & B., coalowners, that they would carry their coal, subject to clause 11, at certain charges given in the schedule; & they also agreed (clause 9) that in the event of their charging any other trader for the same description of traffic lower rates than those stipulated to any station, A. & B. were to have a corresponding reduction in the rates payable by them to such station. Clause 11 was to the effect that notwithstanding the rates or charges before specified, they were entitled to charge A. & B. rates or charges similar to those charged & paid by the E. Co.; & in the event of any consideration being given to the E. Co. for raising them, a similar consideration should be given to A. & B. The railway co. charged D., another coalowner, not a party to the agreement, a lower rate per ton, taking into account the greater distance the coal was carried. The agreement with the E. Co. was not in evidence. It was alleged the rate charged A. & B. was not higher than that charged to the E. Co.:—Held: there was nothing in clause 11 to supersede the effect of clause 9, & upon the true construction of the latter clause, A. & B. were entitled to a corresponding reduction with D., & repayment of over-charges; "lower rates" meaning proportionately lower rates per ton per mile, & not a less sum per ton irrespective of the distance carried.—GLASGOW & SOUTH WESTERN RY. 1200. —— 1854 Act, s. 2—Station to station services.]—A private siding, connecting appcts.' premises at D. with the goods-station of the railway co. in that town, was constructed under an agreement which contained a clause giving the railway co. the right, which they had duly exercised, to terminate it at any time on three months' notice, & at the expiry of such notice, to take up the rails. It was alleged that the sole object of the railway co. in taking up the siding was to compel appcts. to pay the D. station to station rates, & that if appcts. would consent to pay such rates for the traffic delivered over their siding, they might have the siding restored at any moment. Appcts. alleged that by the refusal of the railway co. to continue the accommodation of the siding, they failed to afford all reasonable facilities for the receiving, forwarding, & delivery of appcts.' traffic:—Held: appcts. were entitled to be given siding accommodation as before, but, in the circumstances, the railway co. might require that before they gave it there should be an agreement which, besides having such terms as are the common form of their siding agreements, should provide that appcts. should pay the D. station to station rates for the time being, without rebate or deduction, assuming those rates to be in themselves unobjectionable.—GIRARDOT, FLINN & CO. v. MIDLAND RY. Appcts., who were traders at S. & were competitors of the H. traders, made an agreement with resps. by which they obtained from resps. a siding, & the rates of traffic to & from the siding were ascertained. At the time of the agreement appcts. knew of the practice at H. On an application for an order that resps. should desist from giving an undue preference to the H. traders:—Held: in view of the agreement, the complaint was not as to rates but as to treatment &, on the facts, there was no undue preference.—OLYMPIA OIL & CAKE CO., LTD. v. NORTH EASTERN RY. Co. were authorised by statute to lease the K. line, & to impose a toll on minerals not exceeding 3½*d.* per mile per ton. By the lease afterwards executed the G. Co. agreed to pay the K. Co. 1½*d.* per ton on all minerals raised from lands on the line of K.; & the G. Co. & the K. Co. were to fix in concert the tolls to be charged. The K. Co. afterwards agreed to take 1½*d.* per ton, whereon F., one of the mineowners on the line of K. applied for an injunction to restrain the G. Co. from charging him more than 1½*d.* on the ground that they had fixed this toll in concert:—Held: the agreement was not to reduce the toll as such, but merely the rent payable from the G. Co. to the K. Co., & that F. had no right to interfere by injunction or otherwise in respect of this private arrangement.—FINNIE v. GLASGOW & SOUTH WESTERN RY. CO. (1857), 3 Macq. 75; 30 L. T. O. 1199 i. With complainant—Construction of.]—A ry. co. agreed with an iron co. to carry upon their railway system the whole mineral & other traffic which the iron co. might send, of the description & at rates & charges specified in the agreement. In the agreement the traffic was divided into 2 classes, of which class A. included "pig iron, coke, hewing-stone, bricks, & tiles," & class B. included "rubble-stone, iron ore, coal," etc. The ry. co. further undertook not to carry traffic for any other trader at lower proportionate rates than those charged to the iron co., & to place the latter on the same footing as that enjoyed by the most favoured traders on the line. In an action by the iron co.:—Held: (1) the agreement imposed an obligation on the ry. co. not to carry traffic, inwards or outwards, for any other traders at lower proportionate rates per ton per mile than those charged to the iron co., irrespective of the terminus from or to which the traffic was carried; (2) in the case of lower rates being charged to other traders, for pig iron, the iron 1205. —— —— Purchase of railway—Consideration partly in lower charge for services.]—(1) In order to establish a case of undue preference against a railway co. appcts. must satisfy the ct. that there is something undue, unreasonable, or unfair in the railway co.'s treatment of the parties under investigation relatively to one another. A mere inequality in charge raises a presumption that this is so; but that presumption may be rebutted. When the inequality is the result of a fair & honest bargain, the consideration for which has been duly executed & enjoyed by the railway co., it is not an undue preference. Such bargains, however, must be looked upon with suspicion, &, in case of such an agreement of modern date, with great suspicion.

(2) Appcts. complained that certain traders, the S. Co., whose works were situate at S. on defts.' main line, & who were rivals in trade of appcts., were unduly preferred by defts. in the following respects: (a) that defts. did all the terminal services & provided all the terminal accommodation at the S. Co.'s works free of charge; (b) that they hauled all the inward traffic from their main line to the S. Co.'s works & did the internal shunting at a low fixed charge of 1½*d.* per ton, & carried the outward traffic from the works to the main line at a fixed charge of 1*d.* per ton, which charges were lower than those laid upon appcts. in respect of their traffic; (c) that for coal & coke brought to the S. Co.'s works from certain named collieries a lower mileage rate per ton was charged than in case of coal brought to appcts.' works. As a justification defts. pleaded that, being empowered by statute to acquire by compulsion or agreement certain private railways & sidings of the S. Co., they had agreed to purchase the same for a fixed sum of money; that as part of the consideration of the agreement the S. Co. agreed to pay at the rate of 1½*d.* per ton for the carriage of all minerals & other goods traffic from the purchased railways to the S. Co.'s sidings, & to pay 1*d.* per ton & no more for the working of coal traffic from a certain colliery to defts.' main line at S.; that all castings & manufactured goods & all materials sent from the S. Co.'s works were to be carried by defts. to their main line at S. at the same rate; & that all goods & materials carried by defts. for the S. Co. were to be delivered into the S. Co.'s works without any material charge for the delivery thereof :—Held : as the agreement was bonâ fide, the consideration above stated, being good & adequate, justified the charges made, & there was no undue preference.

(3) Appcts. also complained of certain rebates allowed by defts. to rival traders whose works were situate at various stations on defts.' railway. In these cases the traders performed services in hauling their traffic over their intervening sidings to & from defts.' railway. They were served by other railway cos., in competition with defts., & having in each case better access to the works of the traders than defts. had. In order to secure a share of the traffic defts. were compelled to make the rebates complained of, which were not in excess of a reasonable remuneration for the services performed by the traders :—Held : in view of the competition of the other railway cos. these rebates were justified.

(4) At other places on defts.' railway rebates had been allowed to traders in competition with appcts. in respect of services performed by them at their private sidings. Defts. alleged, but failed to prove, that the rates charged to these traders were station to station & not merely station to siding rates. For over two years appcts. had with full knowledge of the facts paid the rate charged to them without claiming any rebate, but stating at the time of payment in every case that payment was made without prejudice to their right to a similar rebate. In an action to recover as damages the amount which they might have claimed as rebate :—Held : 1888 Act, s. 12, precluded appcts. from recovering.—HOLWELL IRON CO., LTD. v. MIDLAND RY. From time to time coke breeze was delivered to pltf. at the station in question, & payments at the agreed rate were made by him to defts. as collecting agents for the M. Ry. The money so paid was paid over by defts. to that co. or settled for in account. Pltf. subsequently discovered that in the M. Ry.'s book of rates there was a lower through rate between the same stations for coke breeze for fuel purposes, & he thereupon brought an action against defts. to recover the amount of the over-charges, on the ground that the coke breeze delivered to him was used for fuel. The coke breeze was not, in fact, used for fuel:—Held: (1) in the circumstances, there had been no breach of 1845 Act, s. 90, as, in order to establish a contravention of that sect., it would have been necessary for pltf. to show that some other persons had in fact been charged at the lower rate; (2) in any case the action was not maintainable against defts., who had received the money merely as agents for the M. 1219. —— —— ——.]—The Railway Comrs. having decided, under 1854 Act, ss. 2, 3, that pltfs., a railway co., were giving an undue preference over defts.' co. to another co., by charging such other co. lower rates for the carriage of coal to certain docks than they charged defts. for similar traffic, defts. sought, in an action brought against them by pltfs., to set off or counterclaim, as being overcharges, amounts by which charges paid by them to pltfs. under protest for such carriage of coal, previously to the decision of the Comrs., exceeded the rates paid by the other co.:—Held: no action will lie in respect of a breach of 1854 Act, s. 2, & the set-off or counter-claim failed.—RHYMNEY RY. i. —— Whether action for breach maintainable.]—In 1888 a ry. co. sued a firm for sums due in respect of the carriage of their goods over the co.'s line. Defenders pleaded that the rates sued for were illegal, & averred in their defences, as originally lodged, that the co. had conceded to other traders mileage rates for the carriage of their goods which they refused to concede to defenders, although the goods were of the same description. Subsequently they added an averment that the co. had charged them with higher rates than other traders for the carriage of the same class of goods over precisely the same journey:—Held: the preference set forth in defenders' original averment was only struck at by 1854 Act, & interdict was the only remedy provided by that statute.—CALEDONIAN RY. SECT. 4.—MAXIMUM RATES.

See 1921 Act, ss. 30–35, 55, Sched. V. 1, 2, 8, 12.

SUB-SECT. 1.—IN GENERAL.

1225. Application of—To whole system—Or junction & branch lines only.]—The words "the railway" found in an Act passed to amend previous railway Acts of the same co., & to authorise the making of a junction railway co., were construed to mean the original line, its branches & the new junction railway, & were not confined to the junction railway alone.—BRISTOL & EXETER RY. CO. v. GARTON (1860), 8 H. L. Cas. 477; 30 L. J. Ex. 241; 3 L. T. 251; 7 Jur. N. S. 173; 11 E. R. 515, H. L.

1226. —— —— Effect of amalgamation of companies.]—By their original Act a railway co. had a scale of authorised charges for passengers according to distance. By a subsequent Act the co. were empowered to make a short extension line, & charge a lump sum for passengers over that extension. A still later Act allowed the co. to amalgamate with another existing co., on condition of their reducing their charges to the same scale as that of the other co. That scale was 1*d.* a mile for each third-class passenger. Pltf. travelled over the co.'s line, including the short extension, & was charged a sum which was at the rate of more than 1*d.* per mile calculated over the whole distance travelled, but of not more than 1*d.* per mile over the distance exclusive of the extension, assuming that the co. could also charge the lump sum for the latter piece. To this fare the co. added five per cent for. Govt. duty:—Held: (1) the effect of the later Act was to restrict the charge of the co. as carriers to the same charges over the whole line as the amalgamated co. could make, & pltf. was entitled to recover the excess above 1*d.* per mile over the whole distance; (2) the co. were entitled to add the Government duty.

(3) By the original Act authorising the construction of a railway the co. were empowered to demand certain tolls for the carriage of passengers & goods, & upon payment of the tolls demandable all persons should be entitled to use the railway. The co. were required to set up mile posts along the whole line at the distance of one quarter of a mile from each other, & it was enacted that no tolls should be demanded or taken by the co. during any time at which the mile posts should not be set up & maintained. Pltf., having travelled in one of the co.'s trains along their line at a time when two of the mile posts had been removed, sued to recover the fare which he had been compelled to pay for his journeys, on the ground that it was not, for that reason, demandable:—Held: he could not recover, because the provisions as to mile posts applied to tolls strictly so called, & not to passenger rates.—BROWN v. GREAT WESTERN RY. CO. (1882), 9 Q. B. D. 744; 51 L. J. Q. B. 529; 47 L. T. 216; 46 J. P. 803; 30 W. R. 671, C. A.

1228. —— To railway worked by horse power.]—Appcts.' private incorporating Act authorised them to make a railway to be worked by horse power only & also a railway to be worked in the ordinary way by locomotive steam engines, & provided that the maximum rate of charge for conveyance on the railway, including the toll for the use thereof & of carriages, & for locomotive power & every other expense incidental to such conveyance, should not exceed certain amounts:—Held: the railway to be worked by horse power was subject to this enactment, although higher rates might be reasonable having regard to the increased expense of working the railway by horse power.—BUCKFASTLEIGH, TOTNES & SOUTH DEVON RY. CO. v. SOUTH DEVON RY. CO. (1874), 1 Ry. & Can. Tr. Cas. 321.

1230. —— —— Parcels exceeding 112 lbs.]—A railway co. by s. 149 of their special Act, were empowered to demand rates & tolls for the tonnage of all articles, matters & things carried on their line not exceeding certain sums; by s. 155 they might fix the sums to be charged or taken in respect of small parcels (not exceeding 500 lbs. in weight); provided that the provisions thereinbefore contained as to parcels should not extend to goods, articles, matters, & things sent in large aggregate quantities, although made up of separate & distinct parcels, but only to single & undivided parcels. The co. had two systems of charging. For packages exceeding 112 lbs. in weight they charged a tonnage rate, & for packages under 112 lbs., known as small parcels, they charged a higher rate. In both cases the goods were divided into classes, & the charge varied according to the class. Pltf. sent goods, consisting partly of packages exceeding 112 lbs., & partly of packages under 112 lbs., both belonging to the same class:—Held: defts., were only bound to aggregate the small parcels, & charge tonnage rates for them, if, when aggregated, they exceeded 112 lbs. in weight.—SUTTON v. LONDON & SOUTH WESTERN RY. CO. (1877), 37 L. T. 158.

1231. —— —— Authorising special agreements.]—A railway co., by its Act, was empowered to "demand . . . for the use of the railway any tolls not exceeding . . . [for] the conveyance of . . . coals . . . per ton per mile, three farthings." A subsequent sect. of the same Act provided that, nothing in the Act contained should prevent the co. from taking any increased charges, over and above the charges limited by the Act, for the conveyance of goods of any descriptions by agreement with the owners of, or persons in charge of, the goods either with the respect to the conveyance thereof, except small parcels by passenger trains, or by reason of any other special service performed by the co. in relation thereto:—Held: the latter sect. empowered the co. to agree with any persons to carry coals at a higher rate than three farthings per ton per mile, notwithstanding that there were no special services involved in the conveyance of the coal.—WREXHAM RY. CO. v. LITTLE MOUNTAIN, ETC. CO. (1877), 38 L. T. 290.

Sect. 4.—Maximum rates: Sub-sects. 1, 2, 3 & 4.]

1233. —— —— Limiting rates between two companies—Enforceable by public.]—(1) A clause in a railway co.'s special Act limiting the rates for certain traffic, the result of a parliamentary contest between two railway cos., has the effect, not merely of a contract between the two cos., but of a statutory obligation which may be enforced by any person chargeable with the rates for such traffic.

The B. Co. promoted a bill in Parliament to give them (inter alia) running powers over part of the T. Co.'s system with which the B. Co.'s line formed junctions. The bill was passed into an Act without the running powers but with a clause enacting that the T. Co. should forward traffic destined for or coming from the B. Co.'s line, at rates per mile not greater than the lowest rate which should for the time being be charged by the T. Co. for like traffic between certain places. The T. Co. forwarded coal for applts. destined for the B. Co.'s line, charging rates in excess of the limit imposed by that clause in the B. Co.'s Act, but within the maximum allowed by the T. Co.'s special Acts, & sued the applts. for the amount:—Held: the obligations imposed by that clause were not merely contractual as between the two co.'s, but were statutory obligations for the benefit of & enforceable by consignors of traffic, & applts. could set up the clause as a defence to that part of the claim which exceeded the limit.

(2) The power conferred by 1888 Act, s. 29, to fix group rates "notwithstanding any provision in any general or special Act," cannot affect the rate chargeable, under express statutory provisions, for the conveyance of traffic to any terminus which is not included in the group.—DAVIS & SONS v. TAFF VALE RY. 1234. Calculation of mileage—By most direct route.]—By pltfs.' private Act (9 & 10 Vict. c. cxxxi.), s. 13, the maximum charge for carriage is limited to a certain sum per mile:—Held: the mileage is not necessarily to be counted by the most direct & shortest route; if the route adopted by the co. in the carriage of the goods entrusted to them, as common carriers be a reasonable one in the circumstances, they are entitled to charge the maximum rate for the number of miles over which they actually carry the goods.—MYERS v. LONDON & SOUTH WESTERN RY. Defts., although objecting to these terms, yet without any departure by the co. therefrom, continued to send such commodities, sometimes in quantities of less than three tons, & claimed to be charged at the minimum rate per ton, 1232 i. Application of—Toll charges controlled—By general clause limiting maximum charges.]—A co., by its special Act, was bound not to charge for goods conveyed any greater sum, including the charges for use of carriages, waggons, or trucks, & for locomotive power, & all other charges incidental to such conveyance, than certain rates. By the "toll clauses" the co. were empowered to charge other rates per ton of merchandise, with additional rates if the co.'s carriages were used, & for the use of engines. The co. gave notice that they would not act as carriers of manure, but on special order for such carriage of manure provided waggons, which they attached to their ordinary goods trains, making charges for the use of the waggons & locomotive power, & in name of toll for use of the railway:—Held: the ry. co. were acting as carriers, & were not entitled to charge rates higher than those allowed to them as carriers, though the rates which they proposed to charge were within the amount allowed by the toll clauses for conveyance & use of carriages & engines.—ABERDEEN COMMERCIAL CO. v. GREAT NORTH OF SCOTLAND RY. Appcts. sorted them out, & sold a portion for export to the East to be used as files. Defts., who had formerly charged for their carriage as scrap steel, claimed to be entitled to charge a higher rate for their carriage as coming within the description "old files." Appcts. also bought & broke up old ships, & they consigned by defts.' railway old propeller shafts to customers, described as scrap steel. Sometimes the propeller shafts were cut down & used as portions of new hydraulic machinery, but they were never used as propeller shafts. The railway co. eventually claimed that the shafts were not scrap steel, & that they were entitled to charge for the carriage of the shafts a higher rate than the rate for the carriage of scrap steel :—Held : on the facts, both the old files & the disused propeller shafts were scrap steel, & must be carried at the rates for scrap steel.—WARD (THOS. 1249. —— Loading & unloading—At request of person supplying his own trucks.]—The Act of incorporation (5 & 6 W. 4, c. cvii.) of the G. W. Ry. Co., s. 163, provided that all persons should have free liberty to use the railway, with carriages properly constructed, upon payment of such rates & tolls as the co. should demand, not exceeding the rates or tolls by that Act authorised. S. 164 empowered the co. to demand & receive for the tonnage of goods conveyed upon the railway certain rates or tolls, the highest rate being 3*d.* per ton per mile. S. 166 authorised the co. to provide locomotive or other power for drawing goods, etc., upon the railway, & to receive for the use of such engines or other power such sums as they should think proper, in addition to the rates or tolls authorised to be taken by the Act. S. 167 empowered the co. to employ engines & carriages for the conveyance of goods, etc., on the railway, & to make such reasonable charges for such conveyance as they might determine upon in addition to the rates or tolls authorised by the Act. By 1 Vict. c. xcii., s. 44, the co. were empowered to demand & receive a reasonable charge for the loading, unloading, or weighing any articles, matters, or things which they might be required to load, unload or weigh:—Held: the last-mentioned provision did not apply where the co., as carriers, undertook the conveyance of goods of other persons, but only where the duty of loading, unloading, etc., was performed by them at the request of persons supplying their own trucks; &, consequently, they were not entitled to make a charge for loading, unloading, etc. in addition to the rates charged for carriage, where they acted as carriers under 5 & 6 W. 4, c. cvii., s. 167; & a party intrusting goods to them to be carried, & paying this charge in order to obtain the carriage & delivery of them, might recover back the amount in an action for money had & received.

(2) Assuming, as the arbitrator by whom the case was stated had found, that the co. were entitled, under 7 & 8 Vict. c. iii., s. 50, in addition to the rate of 3*d.* per ton per mile which they were authorised to charge by 5 & 6 W. 4, c. cvii., s. 164, to charge for locomotive or steam power, & for carriages, such sum as they thought expedient:—Held: the co. were not bound in their charge specifically to demand so much per ton under 5 & 6 W. 4, c. cvii., s. 164, & so much per mile for the use of the locomotive power & carriages under 7 & 8 Vict. c. iii., s. 50, but were entitled to charge, as carriers, for the conveyance, including loading, unloading, etc., of the goods, under 5 & 6 W. 4, c. cvii., s. 167, a reasonable sum beyond such tonnage & mileage.—PARKER v. GREAT WESTERN RY. 1251. —— —— Meaning of.]—(1) The withdrawal of rates by a railway co., after an application has been made to the Railway Comrs., will not disentitle an appct. to an order under 1873 Act, s. 14, calling on the co. to distinguish how the rate is made up.

A railway co. were authorised by their special Act to charge a maximum rate for hops to include conveyance and any other expenses incidental to such conveyance, except a reasonable charge for loading & unloading, when performed by the co.

The co. charged considerably more than the mileage rate, the excess being alleged to be for delivery & cartage in L., for loading & assistance in & supervision of loading, for unloading, & as part of the expense of loading & unloading, for weighing, checking, clerkage, & watching; for sheeting; for use of siding & station accommodation:—Held: (2) cartage & delivery & loading & unloading were matters for additional charges; (3) loading & unloading did not comprehend more than the labour of packing & unpacking a goods train or a goods truck whether done by hand or by machinery; (4) the services claimed to be part of loading & unloading were services incidental to conveyance, & were not chargeable.—BERRY v. LONDON, CHATHAM & DOVER RY. CO. (1884), 4 Ry. & Can. Tr. Cas. 310.

1252. —— —— ——.]—The special Acts of a railway co. authorised them to demand, in addition to the maximum mileage rates for conveyance a reasonable sum for loading, unloading, & covering, & the delivery & collection of goods, & other services incidental to the business of a carrier, when performed by the co., & warehousing, wharfage, & any other extraordinary services reasonably & properly performed by the co. The co. charged in addition for (a) loading & unloading; (b) station accommodation; (c) shunting & placing waggons in position for loading & unloading, including use of & expense of working junctions, & also haulage of the loaded waggons to where they were picked up by the train; (d) advising appcts. of the receipt of each consignment at the sending stations to appcts.' order, & asking for their instructions, with incidental clerkage, stationery & stamps; (e) weighing, checking, clerkage, watching & labelling at sending station; (f) advising appcts. at their request of the arrival of their goods at the receiving station, consigned there to their order, with clerkage, stationery & stamps; (g) clerkage, checking, & watching at receiving stations:—Held: (1) services (b), (c), (e), (f), & (g), were services incidental to conveyance, & were not chargeable; (2) the legal meaning in the special Acts of railway cos. of the words "load" & "unload" is no other than the sense in which they are used in ordinary English, & the words are not applicable to things which have their own proper words to describe them; (3) in the passage "services incidental to the business of a carrier," the words "a carrier" did not mean a carrier by railway, but a carrier who collected & delivered goods, & carted from door to door; & (4) the word "incidental" did not refer to the terminal services above set out, which are performed by a railway co., but rather to such subsidiary services as would, according to the nature of a carrier's employment, ordinarily attach to it; (5) where the loading & unloading of certain goods was done partly by the senders & receivers of the goods but the co.'s porters performed the larger share of the work, at a cost to the co., at the sending station of 4½*d.* a ton, & at the receiving station of 4*d.* a ton, a reasonable charge for such assistance was 5*d.* a ton; (6) service (e), checking, was a service not properly embraced in the term loading, & should not be reckoned as part of the expense of loading; (7) service (d) was proved to be a service only occasionally requiring to be rendered, & ought not to be taken into account in fixing the amount of a general rate, & only those for whom things have to be done out of the usual course should bear the reasonable charge that may be made for the doing of them.

(8) The co. carried appcts.' goods at a carted rate of so much a ton, including delivery in B. in a district, within a fixed radius, without regard to distance within that radius. Appcts., who were nearer to the station than were some points in the district, claimed a rebate:—Held: a uniformity of charge for this service was for the benefit of the public.

(9) Semble: in some circumstances the charge made by a railway co. for cartage may properly be of a higher amount than the sum they allow as a rebate to their customers who cart for themselves.—KEMPSON v. GREAT WESTERN RY. CO. (1885), 4 Ry. & Can. Tr. Cas. 426; 1 T. L. R. 218.

1253. —— Stopping.]—By 8 & 9 Vict. c. clxix. ss. 104, 105, the M. Ry. Co. were empowered to demand maximum rates for the carriage of coals &, in addition, for articles conveyed for a less distance than four miles, a reasonable charge for the expense of stopping, loading, & unloading.

24 & 25 Vict. c. ccxvii. s. 26, provided for a maximum rate for the conveyance of all things, to include every expense incidental to conveyance, except a reasonable sum for loading, covering, & unloading of goods at any terminal station of such goods, & for delivery & collection, & any other services incidental to the business or duty of a carrier.

Defts., colliery owners, sent their loaded trucks by the B. & M. T. Ry. to a terminal junction on pltfs.' line, whereupon pltfs. sent an engine to fetch the train of trucks thence, & to draw it along their own line to its destination. Pltfs.' engine had to stop at the junction & occasionally wait there during a period of about half an hour, for the arrival of defts.' trucks:—Held: (1) this was a "stopping" for which a reasonable charge might be legally made by pltfs., under s. 105, in addition to the tolls for conveyance; (2) it was not a service incidental to the conveyance of the goods within 24 & 25 Vict. c. ccxxiii. s. 26.—MONMOUTHSHIRE RY. & CANAL CO. v. WILLIAMS (1872), 27 L. T. 134, Ex. Ch.

1254. —— ——.]—(1) A co. obtained an Act (8 & 9 Vict. c. clxix.), authorising it to construct a railway & to demand tolls for the conveyance of passengers & goods thereon. The charge for the conveyance of goods was generally thus expressed, "per ton per mile not exceeding," &c. One clause provided that "for articles or persons conveyed on the railway for a less distance than four miles" there might be, "in addition to the prescribed tolls for conveyance, a reasonable charge for the expense of stopping, loading, & unloading." No publication of this charge in the form of a "toll" had been made upon the toll-board:—Held: this "charge" for stopping was not properly a "toll," & the non-publication of it on the toll-board in the form required by 1845 Act, ss. 93, 95, did not prevent the co. from demanding it.

(2) The 105th clause granted tolls for "a fraction of a mile beyond four miles," &c.; the co. claimed such tolls when the whole distance traversed was less than four miles:—Held: (1) (LORD CAIRNS, C., & LORD SELBORNE) the charge was, on the whole, warranted by the words of the Act; (2) (LORD PENZANCE & LORD O'HAGAN) applying the principle that no charge could be imposed on the public but by the clearly expressed intention of the Legislature, in this case the Legislature had not clearly expressed an intention, nor had intended, to authorise such a charge.—PRYCE v. MONMOUTHSHIRE CANAL & RY. (3) A co.'s Act fixed the maximum rates of charge to be made by the co., including tolls, for the use of the railway, & of waggons or trucks & locomotive power, & every expense incidental to such conveyance, except loading & unloading:—Held: no extra charge could properly be made under a sect. giving the co. power "to charge for terminal services" for mere use of sidings in shunting or unloading, so long as there was no delay in unloading.—CHATTERLEY IRON CO. v. NORTH STAFFORDSHIRE RY. 1263. —— Covering & uncovering—What is reasonable sum for.]—(1) The special Act of a railway co. authorised them to charge, in addition to the maximum mileage rates, a "reasonable sum for loading, unloading, collecting, receiving, or delivering, & for providing covers for minerals, goods, articles, or animals":—Held: the words "providing covers" included not only the supply of sheets, but also the labour of covering waggons with them.

(2) A railway co. at the sending station provided a truck & two sheets for covering a load of hay or straw, which amounted to one & a half tons; a railway porter assisted the consignor's servant in loading & drawing the sheets over the load & fastening them; at the receiving station a porter untied the sheets, & then the consignee unloaded the truck & removed the hay or straw; if he detained the truck beyond three clear days he was charged demurrage. The railway porter covered the loaded waggon in 20 minutes, & with the assistance of the consignor's servant he was able to load also in the same space of time; the uncovering at the receiving station took 10 minutes; but as the unloading was generally spread over two or three days, & the uncovering & recovering the load had to be repeated, another 10 minutes should be added to that account:—Held: (2) 9*d.* a sheet was a reasonable sum for providing covering, assuming that a sheet used in that traffic would not make more than one journey a week; a reasonable charge for labour of covering the loaded waggon was 2*d.* a ton; for assistance in loading 2*d.* a ton; for uncovering & recovering the load at the receiving station 2*d.* per ton.

(3) The amount of time a railway co. ought to allow a consignee to unload & remove a consignment depends upon the varying circumstances of each particular case.

Semble: 48 hours after a consignee receives notice of the arrival of his goods is a reasonable time on the average. A charge for the use & detention of waggons caused by exceeding the time allowed by a railway co. to unload in, should not, except where the permission to occupy an extra time for unloading forms part of the original contract, be included in the rate for conveyance.—COXON v. NORTH EASTERN RY. 1276. —— Haulage—From reception sidings to private sidings.]—The special Act of a railway co. provided that the maximum rate for conveyance was the maximum rate which the co. might charge for the conveyance of merchandise by merchandise train; & that the co. might charge for services rendered to a trader at his request or for his convenience a reasonable sum, by way of addition to the tonnage rate.

The question was whether the co. were entitled to charge for services rendered in hauling the traders' trucks to their private sidings from the co.'s reception sidings, where they were in the first instance deposited after being detached from the merchandise train which hauled them to the station:—Held: (1) "conveyance" for the purpose of rates might or might not coincide with the contractual conveyance but that it could not be said as a matter of law that it did. The point at which it ended would be ascertained primâ facie by the point at which the goods train detached & deposited the trucks, but if they were so detached & deposited for the convenience of the railway co. at a point short of that to which as conveyers they would be bound to take them for the purpose of delivery to a distributing carrier in times when such carriers existed, a charge could not be made for haulage between those points. This applied to station traders as well as to private siding owners although they, as using the station, were liable to terminal charges to which siding owners were not liable; (2) if Manchester, Sheffield & Lincolnshire Ry. Co. v. Pidcock & Co. (No. 1279, post) laid down as a proposition of law applicable to all cases that conveyance for the purpose of charge stopped at the point where it was reasonable to use the train engine, that decision could not be supported; (3) the use of trucks paid for in the conveyance rate did not end until a reasonable time had been afforded to the consignee to take delivery of his goods, & that when that reasonable time had been exceeded demurrage began.—FOSTER v. GREAT EASTERN RY. C., the railway co. claimed under their Rates & Charges Order Confirmation Act, to set off or counterclaim for an equivalent sum as the value of services rendered to appcts. " at their request, at or in connection with " appcts.' private siding. These services were alleged to be the hauling of appcts.' trucks from the co.'s reception sidings at C. station, where the trucks were deposited after the train had reached C., up to certain other sidings of the co. to which appcts.' trucks were hauled along with the trucks of the station traders, &, after sorting them, hauling them from there to the private siding of appcts. Appcts. contended that these services were incidental to conveyance & covered by the rate for conveyance & were undertaken for the co.'s own convenience & for railway purposes, & also that they were so undertaken under a written sidings agreement between the railway co. & appcts. The Railway Comrs. having decided in favour of appcts. & allowed the rebate, the railway co. appealed, & the ct. remitted the case for further consideration, with a direction that, in considering what services were incidental to conveyance & covered by the rate for conveyance, the proper test to be applied was whether, under the earlier conditions of railway practice, an independent carrier, as distinct from the railway co. as conveyers, if he had been carrying on business at the station in question, would have done the work for which a separate charge was claimed by the co., or whether the co., acting as conveyers, would have done it:—Held: (1) the onus of proving that the independent carrier would have done the work was upon the railway co., & the co. had not produced sufficient evidence to discharge the onus; (2) the independent carrier would not in former times have performed the services in question; (3) the hauling & shunting of the trucks, after their detachment from the goods train, over the station sidings to appcts.' private siding, were not services rendered at appcts.' request, & were covered by the conveyance rate, no extraordinary burden being placed on the railway co. by any peculiar characteristic or condition of the private siding; (4) the contention of the railway co. failed & the rebate must stand.—FOSTER BROTHERS v. GREAT EASTERN RY. 1278. Haulage—New waggons containing goods—Waggons sent by maker to purchasers—Ordinary rate charged for conveyance of goods.]—(1) Newly built railway waggons sent by the manufacturers from their building-yard, over the lines of the M. Ry. Co.'s system, for delivery at their customer's works or collieries, are not, if wholly or partially loaded, a description of traffic for which the co. can, under their Act of 1846, make a charge for haulage.

(2) The circumstance that the goods carried are the property of third parties, & admittedly loaded as a device or expedient to escape the charge for haulage of empty waggons, does not entitle the co. to a double charge, one charge for the carriage of the goods, & another for the haulage of the waggons. —HARRISON & CAMM v. MIDLAND RY. 1279. Services at or in connection with sidings—Not belonging to company.]—Appcts.' Railway Rates & Charges Order Confirmation Act, 1892, Sched., s. 2, enacts that the maximum rate for conveyance includes the provision of locomotive power & trucks by the railway company, & every other expense incidental to conveyance not thereinafter provided for in the schedule. S. 3 enacts that the maximum station terminal is the maximum charge which the co. may make to a trader for the use of the accommodation provided, & for the duties undertaken by the co. for which no other provision is made in the schedule, at the terminal station for or in dealing with merchandise, as carriers thereof, before or after conveyance. S. 5 enacts that the co. may charge a reasonable sum, by way of addition to the tonnage rate, for services rendered to a trader at his request, or for his convenience, at or in connection with sidings not belonging to the co. . . . provided that where, before any service is rendered to a trader, he has given notice in writing to the co. that he does not require it, the service shall not be deemed to have been rendered at the trader's request, or for his convenience:—Held: (1) the tonnage rate authorised by s. 2 is for conveyance by merchandise train & any work incidental to such conveyance, & for the performance of which it is reasonable to use the train engine (e.g. when at a junction with the main line of either a station siding or a private siding, the train has to pick up or throw off trucks, the work of hauling or shunting the trucks over the points at the junction & over so much of the siding as the keeping of the main line clear of obstruction may require); but conveyance other than this off the main line does not come within s. 2; (2) a station terminal is for use of the accommodation or staff of a terminal station after conveyance is at an end; goods arriving at a station to which they are consigned for delivery, & which upon arrival have to be hauled a greater or less distance to be in a position where they can be unloaded & delivery given, are liable to a terminal charge.

Resps. were the owners of a siding not belonging to the railway co. The siding had no direct connection with the up and down main lines, being separated from them by the railway co.'s goods yard at R. station. Traffic, therefore, to & from the siding had to pass over the station sidings, & the service of taking it across was done by the railway co. This service was claimed to be one performed " at or in connection with " the traders' siding, & the railway co. asked to be allowed to charge for it the same sum that they charged as a station terminal to traders who came under s. 3:—Held: (3) such service might be charged for under s. 5, even though it was a service which was involved in delivery, & which the trader could not himself perform; (4) the railway co. being relieved, by the provision of the siding, from the expense of finding standing room for trucks & space for loading & unloading, three-fourths of the sum which they charged as a station terminal at their R. station, in respect of merchandise similar to resps.' & liable to such terminal charge, was a reasonable sum to be charged to resps. for services rendered by the railway co. at or in connection with resps.' siding at R.

(5) The word " conveyance " means such work only as in the early days of railways was performed by a railway co. acting as conveyers only & not as carriers as well, & as was capable of being measured by a reference to distance travelled.—

1280. —— ——.]—A railway co. cannot charge beyond the conveyance rate for anything done on their own lines which is properly incidental to conveyance or collection of traffic to or from private sidings, no matter how much the cost & trouble may be increased by the inconvenience of the sidings or the nature of the traffic, unless the defects or inconveniences are such as to relieve the railway co. from their duty to deliver & collect. But a railway co. may be entitled to make a service charge if they are required for the convenience of the siding owner to do work on his siding, & where they are so required, then, if by reason of the insufficiency of the siding or otherwise, that work involves extra work on their own line, that extra work may be a ground for an extra charge.

N. S. Ry. Rates, &c. Order Confirmation Act, 1892, Sched., s. 5, enacts that the co. may charge in addition to the tonnage rate a reasonable sum for certain services rendered to a trader at his request or for his convenience, including (inter alia) services rendered by the co. at or in connection with sidings not belonging to the co. & the collection or delivery of merchandise outside the terminal station.

Appcts. claimed payment for shunting services performed by them in respect of defts.' traffic to or from their sidings at M. & W. Owing to the construction of the sidings, & the nature of the traffic, the business of delivering full trucks & of bringing back & taking away empties, was considerable. Appcts. calculated that the time their goods trains were detained while the train engine was occupied in uncoupling trucks intended for delivery at the junctions, & in picking up trucks ready to go in the direction in which the train was travelling, averaged per diem at W. one hour, & at M. one hour & some minutes :—Held : (1) if the time occupied by appcts.' engine at defts.' request or for their convenience in shunting their traffic to or from their M. sidings exceeded for each train twelve minutes, & to or from W. sidings exceeded six minutes, appcts. might charge defts. for the excess time at the rate of 7*s.* per hour.

Appcts. maintained a small staff at M. to look after the siding traffic, & to superintend the working of it to & from the main line. The traffic was partly defts.' & partly that of another firm of traders, & appcts. claimed that the expense should be borne by the two firms in the proportion of the tonnage dealt with :—Held : (2) appcts. were entitled to be paid by defts. the expense they claimed from them.

(3) By s. 7 of the Schedule to the Act, appcts. may charge by way of rent or otherwise for sidings or other structural accommodation provided for the private use of traders & not required by the company for dealing with the traffic for the purposes of conveyance, provided that the amount of such charges or payments is fixed by an agreement.

The premises of defts. were connected at M. & W. with appcts.' railway by means of sidings not belonging to appcts. Appcts. claimed to charge defts. under that sect. for the erection of signal cabins, signals & other structural appliances for the private use of defts. at M. & W. When defts. made their junctions, & for long after, the branch railway on which they were situated was only a goods & mineral line. In 1893, appcts. converted the branch into a passenger line, & the works in question were provided by them to meet the Board of Trade requirement that home & distant signals should be provided at siding junctions before a railway co. were allowed to carry passengers :—Held : (4) appcts. could not recover from defts. the expense of providing such signals at M. & W. ; (5) the signals were not within s. 7, not being works provided for the trader's private use, & " not required by the co. for dealing with the traffic for the purpose of conveyance."

(6) Semble : such works belong to the railway & are charged for in the rate of conveyance, as part of that rate is for " the use of the railway."

(7) Appcts. also claimed under s. 5 of the Schedule to the Act, to be repaid the cost of working such signals in connection with defts.' sidings : —Held : the reasons stated by the ct. for not allowing a charge to be made for the cost of providing the signals extended to the working of them, but that if defts. paid anything for signalling or signalmen before 1893, when the railway was converted into a passenger line, they should continue to do the same for the time since.—NORTH STAFFORDSHIRE RY. 1281. —— ——.]—(1) By s. 5 (1) of the Schedule to their Railway Rates & Charges Order Confirmation Acts, 1891 & 1892, a railway co. may charge a reasonable sum for services rendered at, or in connection with, sidings not belonging to the co., & the collection or delivery of merchandise outside the terminal station ; & by s. 7 the co. may charge by way of rent, or otherwise for sidings or other structural accommodation provided for the private use of traders, & not required by the co. for dealing with the traffic for the purposes of conveyance :—Held : as regards s. 5, services at or in connection with sidings not belonging to the co. include any service done by a railway co. in the delivery of traffic which is not incidental to conveyance, & which is occasioned by the place of delivery being at a private siding.

(2) V.'s coal traffic, on arrival at the B. goods station on the F. Ry. Co.'s line, was shunted off the running line by the train engine. It was then attached to a yard engine & taken to sidings whence it was daily, at regular intervals, hauled over a branch line by the railway co., & delivered to V. at the junction of their private sidings with the branch. The engine was specially employed on that work, & when not engaged on those journeys, it was occupied in the B. goods yard in shunting V.'s traffic, & otherwise preparing it for removal, & in one way or another, hauling or shunting, the whole day's time of one engine throughout the year was spent upon this traffic :—Held : 6*d.* per ton was a reasonable charge for haulage of trucks of coal, shunting, working signals, & for clerkage & checking, for the delivery of the coal traffic from B. goods station to V.'s sidings.—FURNESS RY. 1283. Sending back empty waggons.]—(1) Held: a demand of the sum actually due for tolls is a condition precedent to the right to sell under 1845 Act, s. 97.

(2) By 9 & 10 Vict. c. cciii., s. 29, a railway co. were empowered to take tolls for the use of their railway in respect of the tonnage of articles conveyed upon the railway certain sums per ton, & a further sum if conveyed in the carriages of the co.; & by s. 30, tolls for the use of engines. S. 35 fixed a maximum rate of charge, including the charges for the use of carriages, waggons or trucks, & for locomotive power, and all other charges incident to such conveyance. By s. 37, the co. were empowered to take increased charges for the conveyance of goods, by agreement with the owners of goods, by reason of any special service. The co. having for a considerable time carried on their line coals in carriages belonging to pltf., from P. to H., made a demand of a gross sum equal to the amount of the tonnage rates for coals & use of engines; & also of a sum claimed by them for sending back pltf.'s empty carriages from H. to P. They gave no explanation of the items making up the gross sum claimed. Pltf. having omitted to pay the amount claimed, the co. sold pltf.'s carriages, etc., to satisfy the amount due:—Held: the sum claimed for sending back the return waggons was not toll, & the co. having demanded a larger sum than that due for tolls, the sale was unlawful. (3) Semble: the co. might be entitled to charge for sending back the waggons by agreement as for special services under s. 37.—FIELD v. NEWPORT, ABERGAVENNY & HEREFORD RY. CO. Weighing out coals — By company's machine.]—A railway co. carried coals on their line for defts., who were coal merchants, & delivered them at defts.' wharf which adjoined a siding at one of the co.'s stations, & they allowed defts., in consideration of paying a specified reasonable charge, to weigh out the coals to customers by a machine belonging to the co. placed in the station yard. The co. had no express statutory power to make charges for the use of their weighing-machines:—Held: the charges were not ultra vires, & the co. could maintain an action to recover them from defts.—LONDON & NORTH WESTERN RY. 1285. Exceptional accommodation — Keeping waggons on "wait order" sidings.]—Defts., coal merchants, consigned coal from certain collieries by pltfs.' railway to pltfs.' sidings at W., there to await further orders as to the ultimate destination of the coal to the purchasers, & when the coal was sent on to the ultimate destination pltfs. charged a through rate from the colliery station to the station of the purchaser. Pltfs. had previously given defts. notice that they would charge siding rent at the rate of 6*d.* per waggon per day or part of a day on the "wait order" waggons after the first two clear days. Two clear days afforded sufficient time to enable defts. to furnish instructions to the ultimate destination of the coal:—Held: pltfs. were entitled to recover the siding rent, either (1) upon a common law contract to pay, keeping the coal at W. after two days not being an incident of the contract to carry; or (2) under pltfs.' (Rates & Charges) Order Confirmation Act, 1891, Sched., Part IV., as accommodation provided at the desire of defts. for which no provision was made elsewhere in the schedule.—LONDON & NORTH WESTERN RY. Deft., a trader, was the owner of certain coal waggons, which he was in the habit of consigning to a destination on the co.'s line. shunted into their sidings for the purpose of repair a charge would be made for such services, & a siding rent charged on the waggons when detained at the sidings for more than three days. When deft.'s waggons got out of repair the co. shunted them to a siding known as "the crippled waggon siding" & sent him an advice note, & deft. then sent his repairers to the siding, & the waggons were there repaired. When the account for plffs.' charges was sent to deft. he refused to pay it on the ground that he was not liable. The Schedule, Part IV. of the Act, under the heading "Exceptional Class," contains provisions for payment for any accommodation or services provided or rendered by the co. within the scope of their undertaking by the desire of a trader, & in respect of which no provisions are made by the schedule. Held: the services in respect of which the charges were made had been rendered by the desire of a trader within Part IV. of the schedule, & defts. were entitled to recover.—LONDON & NORTH WESTERN RY. v. DUERDEN (1916), 85 L. 1288. Carriage over foreign line—Rates governed by foreign company's Act.]—Under the G. W. Ry. Co. (Rates & Charges) Order Confirmation Act, 1891, the co. are not bound to carry pitwood for mining purposes by measurement weight at the rates specified in the schedule thereto as applicable to goods in Class C. If the customer claims the benefit of the Class C. rates, the co. may charge those rates on the actual machine weight; on the other hand, if the pitwood be consigned at measurement weight, the co. are entitled to charge the rates applicable to goods in Class I.

The maximum rates which under the Act the co. are entitled to charge for the carriage of goods, & which maximum rates vary inversely with the distance carried, apply only to carriage over the co.'s own lines; & where goods are carried under a through contract with the co. from a point on their own line to a point on another co.'s line, the portion of the journey which is over the foreign co.'s line is to be treated as a separate journey, in respect of which the co. are entitled to charge the maximum rate authorised by the foreign co.'s Act as applicable to a journey of that distance, irrespective of the distance which the goods may have previously been carried over the co.'s own line.—GREAT WESTERN RY. Special Act—Short distance rate—"Conveyed."]—A special Act of the A. railway co. & a similar Act of the B. railway co. each contained a clause enacting that where merchandise was "conveyed" for an entire distance which did not exceed six miles the railway co. might make the charge authorised by the Act as for six miles; provided that where merchandise was "conveyed" by the co. partly on its own railway & partly on the railway of another co. both railways should, for the purpose of reckoning such short distance, be considered as one railway. Pursuant to a contract between a colliery association & the A. co., that co. took consignments of coal from the colliery sidings on their own line to a station on the line of the B. co. In the case of two of these sidings the distance to that station was less than six miles; in the case of the third siding the distance to that station, & even to the junction between the lines of the two cos., was more than six miles. For the first portion of the distance over the line of the A. co. the traffic was taken by the locomotives of that co., & for the latter portion of that distance & the entire distance over the line of the B. co. the traffic was taken by the locomotives of the B. co.:—Held: the word "conveyed" in the clause meant actually carried, & not carried under a contract of carriage; the traffic in question was not "conveyed" by the A. co. on both railways within the proviso, but only on its own railway, & a separate charge for conveyance might be made in respect of the distance for which the traffic was actually taken by each co.—LANCASHIRE & CHESHIRE COAL ASSOCN. v. LONDON & NORTH WESTERN RY. No books of mineral rates were kept at any other stations, although many of such stations were close to large ironworks, quarries, & coal mines, and a very considerable traffic in coal was brought down by rail to the main line, & sent forward from such stations, or from sidings near them. The mineral traffic from the local stations was charged & booked at the central stations only :—Held : a contravention of 1873 Act, s. 14.

The co. gave notice to deft., a trader, that they would allow him four days, free of charge, within which to unload goods consigned to him arriving at their station, & that after the expiration of the four days they would charge him 6*d.* per day siding rent for each waggon allowed to remain unloaded. In an action by the co. to recover from deft. siding rent at the rate of 6*d.* per day in respect of waggons which, after receiving that notice, he had allowed to remain unloaded after the four days, deft. disputed his liability to pay the amount charged :—Held : the jurisdiction of the ct. was ousted, because under s. 5 of the statute an arbitrator appointed by the Board of Trade is the only tribunal for the settlement of any differences arising under that sect.—LONDON & NORTH WESTERN RY. The consignment note described the goods as "bearers," and stated that they were to be sent at owner's risk. The rate between B. & D. for "bearers" at owner's risk was published in the rate book of the railway co. as 9*s.* 2*d.* a ton, & the rate for generators in parts at co.'s risk was published at 22*s.* 9*d.* No rate was in force for generators in parts at owner's risk. The false account alleged was that the weight of a dust extractor was given on a consignment note which stated the weight to be 1 cwt. 3 qrs., whereas the weight was found to be 3 cwt. The loaded waggons were weighed there, & the weight notes given to appcts. Considerable detention took place in the dispatch of the waggons to their destination & also in unloading the waggons at their points of destination. Deft. co. made a charge for demurrage:—Held: (1) a period of one clear day after the day on which the coal had been loaded in D. was a reasonable time for the use of the waggons before conveyance; (2) a period of three days reckoned from 6 a.m. of the day after receipt of notice by the consignee of arrival of the waggon was a reasonable time to take delivery & unload the traffic; (3) at charged under the sect. the cost of maintenance should only be considered where it exceeds that which would be incurred if delivery were taken within the four days, & only those services in excess of those which would be otherwise performed are to be taken into consideration. The cost of accommodation is only a factor in cases where extra accommodation has to be provided owing to the trader's habitual delay in unloading; (3) four days, exclusive of the day on which the notice of arrival was given, was a reasonable period for unloading; primâ facie, this time would not begin to run until the trucks were in the siding, handed over to the trader, ready for unloading; yet if the trader were not ready to take delivery, the siding being blocked by him, the time ran from the moment the railway co. were ready to send the trucks to the siding; while, if the railway co. were in default, the trader would have his remedy under the contract for delivery; (4) the fact that ninety per cent. of the traffic was unloaded within four days, was not a ground for set-off to the traders as regards traffic detained after the four days, the period of four days not being a matter of right.

(5) A railway co. are not bound to find warehouse accommodation beyond a reasonable time for traders to take delivery unless they are paid for it, & if they find it inconvenient or expensive to allow the trucks to remain beyond a reasonable time for unloading them, they are entitled to make a reasonable charge for such accommodation.—MIDLAND RY. Harbour Trust, the route being partly over pltfs.' system & partly over the lines of the Trust. Pltfs. did the haulage over the Trust lines & charged a rate for conveyance at 2*s.* 8*d.* per ton & made a charge for the haulage services of 3*d.* extra. By a condition indorsed upon the consignment notes it was provided that after the termination of the transit, goods carried or conveyed by the co. would be subject in addition to the charge for carriage to further charges for demurrage of 3*s.* (subsequently reduced to 1*s.* 6*d.*) "per truck per day . . . no such charges should be made if the co. had not given proper opportunity for the removal of the goods or the discharge." By a circular letter notice was given by pltfs. to defts. that in the event of demurrage being incurred upon waggons loaded by defts. or upon sheets covering them, & detained upon the lines of the Trust at S. pltfs. would hold defts. responsible for the payment of such demurrage; that railway stock upon the Trust lines would be treated as upon a private siding, & that defts. would be allowed four clear days exclusive of the day of arrival before demurrage became chargeable. There was never any delay in transit while the trucks were on pltfs.' system, but when they passed on to the lines of the Trust delays frequently arose, the delays being entirely beyond the control of and not caused by any default of pltfs. In an action for demurrage:—Held: (1) the contract between the parties was one whereby pltfs. agreed to carry partly over their own system & partly over the Trust lines; & the condition in the consignment notes only referred to events happening after the termination of the transit, & therefore did not protect defts. against the claim for demurrage which arose during the transit; & (2) the condition did not refer to a detention of trucks upon the lines of the Trust.

By G. W. Ry. Co. (Rates and Charges) Order Confirmation Act, 1891, Sched., Part I., clause 5 (iv), the co. may charge a reasonable sum by way of addition to the tonnage rate for the detention of trucks, or the use or occupation of any accommodation, before or after conveyance, beyond such period as shall be reasonably necessary for enabling the co. to deal with the merchandise as carriers thereof, or the consignor or consignee to give or take delivery thereof; & by Part IV. the co. may charge for any accommodation or services provided or rendered by the co. within the scope of their undertaking by the desire of a trader, & in respect of which no provisions are made by this Schedule such reasonable sum as the co. may think fit in each case:—Held: (3) Part I., clause 5 (iv), only referred to detention

Co. of the proposal contained in the advice notes that the goods were held by the L. Ry. Co. as warehousemen on their behalf:—Held: the silence of the R. Co. amounted to a consent to the L. Ry. 1333. —— Trader acting on advice note.]—A railway Act empowered the railway co. to charge traders a reasonable sum by way of addition to the tonnage rate for (inter alia) the detention of trucks beyond such period as should be reasonably necessary for enabling the consignee to take delivery. Two truckloads of goods arrived by rail at pltfs.' station on a Friday consigned to a certain person who gave notice to pltfs. to transfer the goods to deft. An advice note was sent on the same day to deft. stating that demurrage would be charged at a specified rate per waggon per day or part of a day if the goods were not unloaded & removed within forty-eight hours after the despatch of the notice, & that deft. was to send for the goods not later than 6 p.m., & on Saturdays not later than 1 p.m. Deft. received the notice on the Saturday, & the unloading of the trucks was proceeded with up to 1 p.m. on that day & on Monday, & was finished on Tuesday. Pltfs. claimed demurrage in respect of the detention of one of the trucks on the Tuesday:—Held: (1) the receipt & acceptance of the advice note by deft. constituted privity of contract between pltfs. & deft.; (2) in calculating the period of forty-eight hours the whole of each day, excluding Sunday but including the time after 1 p.m. on Saturday, was to be counted; (3) deft. was liable for the demurrage claimed.—LANCASHIRE & YORKSHIRE RY. SUB-SECT. 2.—CLAIM BY TRADER.

See 1921 Act, s. 55, Sched. V. 3 (1).

1334. Claim by trader for—Conveyance in trader's trucks—Detention during transit.]—By L. & N. W. Ry. Co. (Rates & Charges) Act, 1891, s. 6, where merchandise is conveyed in trucks not belonging to the co., the trader is entitled to recover from the co. a reasonable sum by way of demurrage for any detention of his trucks beyond a reasonable period.

Coal in owners' trucks was conveyed by a railway co. for appcts., a firm of coal merchants, from certain collieries on their line of railway to appcts.' reserved sidings in L., the trucks being returned to the collieries without additional charge; the average duration of the transit during a period of twelve consecutive months was two & a half working days. Appcts. complained that in thirty-three instances during the twelve months their trucks had been detained an unreasonable time in transit, the time taken in nineteen instances being four days, in twelve instances five days, in one instance six days, & in one instance seven days, & they claimed to be entitled to demurrage in respect of the unreasonable detention of these trucks:—Held: (1) s. 6 applied to a claim for detention of the trucks during transit, & not merely to cases where the detention occurred before its commencement or after its conclusion; (2) the time occupied in the thirty-three instances in the transit being largely in excess of the average, the onus was upon defts. to show that the period of detention of the trucks was not unreasonable; (3) a sum of 6*d.* per ten-ton truck per day was a reasonable allowance in respect of the detention.—CHARRINGTON, SELLS, DALE & CO. v. LONDON & NORTH WESTERN RY. the services primâ facie included in the contract for conveyance; & no charge can be made for such services in excess of the maximum mileage rate authorised by the co.'s Act, except where the Act gives special power to make such extra charge; notwithstanding that as between two or more railway cos. a deduction of terminal charges in respect of such services would be made at the Clearing House in the division of a through rate.

(2) Where the total charge made by a co. for conveyance does not exceed their maximum mileage rate, & there is nothing on the face of it to show that part of it consists of a separate charge for station services, the co. is, as between itself & the public, entitled to attribute the whole charge to conveyance, notwithstanding that they may perform, in addition, station services, for all customers who require them, for which they might have made a separate charge, a customer who does not require such services is not entitled, on that account, to any rebate.

Appcts. placed waggons containing their goods, duly loaded & labelled in sidings belonging to a railway co.; the only work of a terminal station which the co. performed was that of arranging them in proper train order. In the case of goods consigned to appcts. the co. did part of the haulage from their goods station to appcts.' premises on their private siding. The railway company charged uniform mileage rates for all traffic, including that of appcts.:—Held: appcts. were not entitled to a reduction.—HOWARD v. MIDLAND RY. CO. (1878), 3 Ry. & Can. Tr. 1336. —— Benefit to railway.]—(1) Where a railway co. makes no separate charge for use of sidings, a siding constructed by a trader to entitle him to a reduction of rates as compared with other traders who have not constructed sidings, must be a benefit to the railway co., & not merely a means of accommodating traffic which could have been conveniently dealt with at the co.'s station.

(2) A difference in the mileage rate for grain carried for competing millers when taken in connection with the fact that the flour of these millers competes at various common points, may infringe 1854 Act, s. 2, although the difference in the grain rates themselves might not have been sufficient to establish the infringement.

(3) A charge for warehousing is not a proper ingredient in a railway rate.

(4) Where the difference in distance over which grain is carried for competing millers is fixed, & the only difference in circumstances in which the flour of the same millers is carried is that distance, a difference in the charge for flour greatly in excess of that for grain would be an undue prejudice.

(5) The charge in these circumstances ought to be uniform, & the difference for grain & flour ought to be the same in one direction as another.

(6) Where the rates to two places both exceed the maxima, it is primâ facie evidence of an undue prejudice that the excess should be equal or greater in the case where the costs of the terminal services is less.

(7) When the rate charged to a complaining trader is smaller than that to his competitor, although in such a case an undue preference might be proved, the Comrs. will not in the absence of proof infer an undue preference.—GREENWOOD & SONS v. LANCASHIRE & YORKSHIRE RY. CO. (1888), 6 Ry. & Can. Tr. Cas. 39.

Annotation:—As to (2) Refd. New Union Mills Co. v. G. W. Ry., [1896] 2 Q. B. 290.

1337. —— Terminal charges made.]—(1) A siding was constructed by a trader under a deed entered into by him with a railway co. providing for the sale to him of some surplus land adjoining their station yard, on which he was to erect two malt-kilns, & stipulating that he should, at his own cost, make a siding from the kilns to the line of the railway co. on land belonging to the co. The siding was to be repaired and maintained by the trader, & the railway co. had a right of use for shunting & the control & management subject to the trader's right of access to the kilns:—Held: the ownership of the siding was in the trader, & the siding was one "not belonging to the co." within 1894 Act, s. 4.

(2) 1894 Act, s. 4, gives a rebate "in respect that," that is, in proportion as or to the extent the railway co. do not provide station accommodation or perform terminal services, & the jurisdiction of the Railway Comrs. is not ousted by one terminal service, e.g. covering, being performed by the railway co.

(3) Appcts.' siding communicated with defts.' railway about thirty yards from defts.' goods station at R. By defts.' Order Confirmation Act, 1892, ss. 3, 26, R. was not a "terminal station":—Held: defts. were not entitled to charge appcts. a station terminal at R. station in respect of their traffic passing from or to appcts.' siding connected with R. station.—PIDCOCK & CO. v. MANCHESTER, SHEFFIELD & LINCOLNSHIRE RY. CO. (1894), 9 Ry. & Can. Tr. Cas. 45.

1338. —— No delivery at terminus.]—At the request of appcts. the M. Co. made arrangements for the transit of grain traffic at a certain rate "without rebate" over their own line & the N. Co.'s line to the junction with appcts.' sidings.

immediately to the north of the goods station at P. on the joint line of C. & N. B. Ry. Cos. & about 73 chains from C. station & 56 chains from B. station. They complained, under 1894 Act, s. 4, that they were charged terminals for traffic to & from their works at P. station, although the ry. cos. performed no terminal services & received & delivered the traffic on sidings not belonging to them. Appcts.' allegation that their rates included charges for station accommodation & for terminal services was based on the fact that the rates for similar traffic from the two nearest stations to P., viz. C. & B. (where there were no private sidings & no traders performing terminal services for themselves) were the same as those charged to appcts., or differed in amount only in respect of difference of distance.

The ry. co. contended that the charge was for services at or in connection with the sidings, such as marshalling, labelling, clerkage, providing sheets, etc., & that it cost them as much to render those services as it did to do the work which was done at such places as C. & B., & for which, when done, so far as it was not incidental to conveyance, terminals were allowed them.

On the facts:—Held: (1) the special services appcts. received at the hands of the ry. co. were not a satisfactory reason for the same rates being charged at appcts.' private sidings at P. as were charged at C. & B.; (2) appcts. were entitled to have lower rates than the rates in force for similar traffic at C. & B.—TENNANT & CO. v. CALEDONIAN RY. CO. & NORTH BRITISH RY. CO. (1898), 10 Ry. & Can. Tr. Cas. 194.—SCOT.

Appcts. applied under 1894 Act, s. 4, for a rebate from the rate, in respect that the cos. did not provide station accommodation or perform terminal services:—Held: (1) appcts. were not entitled, as their traffic was carried over the lines of the two cos. at a voluntary rate; (2) as by the contract appcts.' traffic was not to be delivered at or near —— the M. Co.'s terminal station, but at a siding off the co.'s system altogether, where they charged no one for station accommodation or terminal services, the Comrs. had no jurisdiction under the sect.—WATSON, TODD & CO. v. MIDLAND RY. 1339. —— Siding "belonging to company."]—An ancient siding was situated on a railway co.'s land & ran parallel to their main line, upon the same embankment, & had been constructed by the co. The co. conveyed land for building maltings to appcts. upon the terms (inter alia) that they should have full & free right & liberty at all reasonable times & in all reasonable ways to use without charge the railway siding for the purpose of conveniently forwarding & receiving & conveying all goods & commodities, & the co. undertook to place in a convenient part of the siding all trucks destined for appcts. & also on request to remove & forward them with all reasonable expedition; the co. further undertook to maintain the siding in good repair:—Held: a siding "belonging to the railway co."—GIRARDOT & CO. v. GREAT EASTERN RY. CO. (1900), 11 Ry. & Can. Tr. Cas. 244.

1340. —— ——.]—A trader, the lessee of land adjoining a railway, sub-let it to the railway co., who covenanted to construct upon it a siding & warehouse & to haul from the neighbouring station, three quarters of a mile away, into the siding, free of charge, waggons consigned to the trader & to afford him the free use of the warehouse. The waggons delivered into the siding were to be moved to the warehouse by the trader who was to do his own loading & unloading:—Held: (1) the siding was a siding "belonging to the railway co." both in the sense that they were lessees entitled to the possession of it & in the sense that they were entitled to the user of it, subject to the easement granted to the trader; (2) "belonging to the railway co." in 1894 Act, s. 4, does not mean belonging in a legal sense.—HUNTINGTON v. LANCASHIRE & YORKSHIRE RY. 1341. —— Date from which allowance runs.]—(1) An allowance granted by the ct. under 1894 Act, s. 4, primâ facie should begin from the date of the application.

(2) Where a siding owner does not require station accommodation, it does not necessarily follow that he ought to have an allowance in respect of not requiring it, since sidings may be a great burden to a railway company, and each case must stand on its merits.

(3) Where a railway co. has no power to charge a station terminal, & the rate is shown to include something for a station terminal, the ct. is not bound to allow a rebate; 1894 Act, s. 4, gives it a wide jurisdiction to do justice free from technicalities.

(4) In ascertaining the component parts of a rate the system adopted in the case of Pidcock v. Manchester, Sheffield & Lincolnshire Ry. Co. (No. 1337, ante) whereby the service charges were deemed to be in the same proportion to the rates actually charged as the maxima service charges would be to the sum of the maxima rates, cannot be taken as an absolute measure; where no charge is made for loading or unloading, too little would be attributed to the cost of conveyance & to the station terminal.—GILSTRAP, EARP & CO. v. GREAT NORTHERN RY. CO. & MIDLAND RY. CO. (1901), 11 Ry. & Can. Tr. Cas. 265.

1342. —— Question of fact—Whether services incidental to conveyance.]—(1) Where a trader's traffic is conveyed to his private sidings, although conveyance properly so-called does not terminate until the private siding points are reached, it does not follow that all use by the railway co. of their own sidings before that is part of conveyance. It is a question of fact in each case whether the service rendered is incident to conveyance, or is a service due to the request of the trader for which the co. are entitled to charge a reasonable sum.

(2) Where owing to inadequate accommodation of the trader's works, services are performed by a railway co. on their own sidings in respect of sorting the trader's outward traffic, & in respect of marshalling & providing sidings accommodation for the traffic, these are services rendered upon the trader's implied request at or in connection with his private sidings, within Railway Rates & Charges Order, 1891, s. 5 (1), in respect of which the co. are entitled to charge a reasonable sum.

(3) In respect of such charge the trader is not entitled, under 1894 Act, s. 4, to claim a rebate on the ground that the co. do not provide station accommodation or perform terminal services at the private sidings.

(4) Rates & Charges Order, s. 9, which specifies the maximum charges for the use of the co.'s trucks for the conveyance of merchandise according to distances, is perfectly general in its terms, & is not limited to the power of charging on the co.'s own line, but applies whether the journey is over one line only, or over more than one line.—BIRMINGHAM CORPN. v. MIDLAND RY. CO., LONDON & NORTH WESTERN RY. CO. & GREAT WESTERN RY. CO. (1909), 14 Ry. & Can. Tr. Cas. 24; 101 L. T. 920; 26 T. L. R. 46.

1343. Proof of title to—Whether terminal charges included in rate—Inferences as to.]—At the hearing of an application for an allowance or rebate under 1894 Act, s. 4, on the ground that the rates charged by the railway co., in respect of goods sent from appcts.' siding, included a charge for station accommodation at the siding:—Held: appcts., by merely proving that they were charged the rates, & that the siding did not belong to the railway co., had not made out a primâ facie case that the rates included a charge for station accommodation at the siding so as to throw upon the railway co. the onus of proving that the rates did not include a charge for station accommodation.—SALT UNION v. NORTH STAFFORDSHIRE RY. the co. did not in the case of the siding traffic provide station accommodation or perform terminal services. The co. denied that the rates charged on siding traffic included any charge for a station or service terminals at S. :—Held: (1) there was evidence that the rates in fact included terminal charges; (2) appcts. were entitled to a rebate of the whole service &, in the circumstances, defts. having given appcts. the exclusive use of certain sidings to supplement their private sidings, of one-quarter of the station terminal.

(3) Semble: the Comrs. have jurisdiction under 1894 Act, s. 4, to allow a rebate without proof that any definite amount of terminal is included, & primâ facie it is enough to found jurisdiction under that sect. if it is shown that, in respect of similar traffic between substantially the same termini & passing over substantially similar routes, a sidings' trader, who does not require or use any terminal accommodation or services, is charged the same amount as a trader who uses the station.—VICKERS, SONS & MAXIM, LTD. v. MIDLAND RY. 1345. ——— ——— ——— Statements in rate book.]—Appcts. were the owners of private sidings communicating with defts.' railway. The same rates were charged by defts. for appcts.' siding traffic as for similar traffic of other traders using defts.' goods station at B. :—Held: (1) notwithstanding a statement in defts.' siding rate-book that no terminal charges were included in the siding rates, some terminal charges were presumably included in their station rates; (2) the rates of both siding & station traffic being the same, it must be inferred that the siding rates included the same elements of charge as the station rates, thereby entitling appcts. to a rebate corresponding to the amount of such terminal charges; (3) such rebate might be counterbalanced in part by the charges which defts. were entitled to make for services rendered in connection with appcts.' sidings; (4) the net rebate, if any, due to appcts. was the money value, from a business point of view, of the accommodation provided & the services rendered at the station less the value of the services rendered at the siding.

(5) In answer to a complaint of undue preference shown by defts. in that the same rates were charged both to appcts. & certain of their trade competitors for traffic sent to certain common points of destination to which appcts. were considerably nearer, defts. alleged justification on the ground of competition by sea :—Held: such rates were justified where actual effective sea communication existed.—MUNTZ'S METAL CO., LTD. v. LONDON & NORTH WESTERN RY. 1349. ——— Amounts not applicable to conveyance.]—(1) If the mode in which a junction with a siding of a private owner has been effected is such that a railway co. need incur no greater expense in connection with it than is involved in stopping a goods train specially at the siding junction, & either uncoupling trucks there & depositing them in the siding clear of the points, or drawing out trucks ready marshalled & attaching them to the train, doing no work within the siding, & being paid for any special use of levers by signalmen in a signal box, there is then a mere delivery for which no extra payment is due.

(2) Appcts. owned a private siding near H. station of the C. Ry. Co. Owing to the nature & position of the siding it was not possible for a goods train to stop at the siding junction & for its engine to uncouple a truck & deposit it in the siding or to draw a truck out & unite it to the train, & all trucks to or from appcts.' siding had to be taken into the goods yard at H. station & there prepared for despatch or delivery, a process which involved extra hauling & the provision of standing room. In connection with appcts.' siding traffic the co. had to provide special points & signals, the levers for which were only required for such traffic. The co. charged appcts., on traffic to & from their siding, rates the same in amount as the rates charged as station to station, or collected & delivered rates, as the case might be, on similar traffic using H. station. The ct. having found that, in respect of appcts.' siding traffic, the co. did not provide the accommodation nor render the services, or any of them, for which station & service terminals were chargeable, but that they rendered certain other services in respect of that traffic, namely, some clerkage, shunting & signalling, for which a payment ought to be made to them :—Held: a reasonable & just allowance or rebate to be made from the rates charged to appcts., would be so much of each rate as is not applicable to, or charged for, conveyance, less the following sums: (a) a sum for clerkage equal to 30 per cent. of the charge the railway co. make in any rate as a station terminal at the H. end; (b) a sum for shunting equal to the station terminal at the H. end; and (c) in respect of the cost of signals, being a cost bearing the same proportion to the cost of all the signals in the siding signal box as the number of siding levers bears to the whole number of acting levers in that box, multiplied in each case by the average number of times they are respectively daily worked, such sum as the cost so ascertained works out at per ton of the siding traffic.—PORTWAY v. COLNE VALLEY & HALSTEAD RY. rates paid for traffic using that railway were the same as those for similar traffic to or from their goods station at N. All appcts.' traffic used the Q. railway & also a yard of defts. adjoining appcts.' siding: the rates paid had, subject to the agreed rebate, been the same as those charged for traffic using defts.' goods station, although nearly the whole of appcts.' traffic was loaded & unloaded on their own premises. Appcts. applied for a rebate in respect of their having provided their own station accommodation:—Held: (1) under the agreement of 1879, appcts. should, subject to the rebate then agreed upon, pay the same rates as those charged for traffic using defts.' goods station; (2) the rates referred to in the agreement of 1892 were rates which included station accommodation.—NEWCASTLE GRAIN & GENERAL WAREHOUSING CO., LTD. v. NORTH EASTERN RY. 1352. —— Silent as to terminal charges.]—By an agreement made with appcts.' predecessors, defts.' predecessors agreed to construct certain sidings in front of certain warehouses, subsequently leased to appcts., & to work the traffic from the principal siding free of charge. In computing the amount of mileage to be paid to defts. the warehouses were to be considered a terminal station in regard to all traffic conveyed thereto or therefrom on the main line & no extra charge was to be made in consequence of trucks going to or from the warehouses instead of to or from any ordinary terminus or station:—Held: (1) defts. were only entitled to charge appcts. in respect of the traffic to & from the said sidings a mileage rate calculated by the distance traversed both on defts.' own line & on such sidings; (2) the agreement being silent as to terminal charges appcts. were entitled to a rebate off the rates charged them in respect of their siding traffic.—WEAVER & CO., LTD. v. GREAT WESTERN RY. 1353. —— Subsequent legislation.]—By an agreement made in 1891 by a trading co. with a railway co. for the construction of a siding, the railway co. agreed to make to the trading co. an allowance of not less than 3*d.* per ton for loading & unloading waggons & sheeting them, in respect of cotton & yarns & other goods usually handled by the co., received at or forwarded from the proposed sidings, & agreed also not to charge any terminal in respect of coal traffic from the sidings. By the subsequent Railway Rates & Charges Order Confirmation Act, 1891 & 1892, Sched., s. 5, railway cos. are authorised to charge a reasonable sum, in addition to the tonnage rate, for services rendered to a trader at his request or for his convenience, at or in connection with sidings not belonging to the co. The trading co. applied for a rebate under 1894 Act, s. 4, the railway co. made a cross application for an allowance under Railway Rates & Charges Order Confirmation Act, 1892:—Held: (1) by the agreement the sidings in question were treated as a station, & the railway co. were to charge as at a station less the special allowances; (2) there was nothing in the subsequent legislation incompatible with the agreement, into which the parties had entered with the knowledge of impending legislation, & for perfectly good consideration, & by which they were bound.—CROMPTON & CO. v. LANCASHIRE & YORKSHIRE RY. SECT. 11.—INCREASE OF RATES.

See 1888 Act, s. 33 (6); 1894 Act, s. 1; 1913 Act, s. 1; 1921 Act, ss. 34, 35, 38, 39.

SUB-SECT. 1.—NOTICE OF INTENDED INCREASE.

1356. Sufficiency of.]—Under 1888 Act, s. 33 (6), the Board of Trade, in an order made in 1889, prescribed a form of notice of increase of rates, whereby a railway co. were to give notice that they intended to increase "the under-mentioned of the rates" published in the books required to be kept for public inspection. After the passing of 1913 Act, defts. gave notice of a general increase of rates, stating that they intended "subject to the statutory maxima" to increase the rates "to the extent & in the manner undermentioned," & underneath there were two columns, the first being "Present rate up to & not exceeding," & the second being "Additions to be made," beginning with "present rate up to & not exceeding" 1*s.*, & "addition to be made," ½*d.*, the increases ranging from ½*d.* to 4*s.*; & a notice in substantially the same form was inserted in the front of the rate book showing the increases so made. Appcts. contended that the notice did not comply with the requirements of the Act & the prescribed Board of Trade form, in that it contained the words "subject to the statutory maxima," & was a general notice applying to all the rates & did not set out each individual rule proposed to be increased; &, further, that the increased rates were not inserted in the rate books in the manner required by the Act:—Held: (1) the notice was a distinct notice of what the proposed increases were to be & was a sufficient compliance with the requirements of the Act as to the notice to be given; (2) there was a sufficient insertion of the increased rates in the rate books to satisfy the statutory requirements in that respect.—BRITISH PORTLAND CEMENT MANUFACTURERS, LTD. & NELSON (CHARLES) & CO., LTD. v. GREAT EASTERN RY. 1359. —— ——.]—Appcts. agreed to pay defts. for the carriage of casks containing vinegar on the actual weight of the casks, or in accordance with a scale of computed weights, not exceeding actual weights, to be fixed by defts., & under a scale of computed weights fixed by defts., carriage was paid by appcts. It being found that the weights upon which appcts. had been charged did not represent the true weights of the casks, defts. introduced a new scale under which their charges were increased:—Held: (1) on the construction of the agreement defts. were at liberty from time to time to frame a scale of computed weights for the purpose of arriving at the actual weights which they were carrying; (2) in any case no increase of rates had been made; defts. had only established a more accurate way of arriving at the weights than that under the old scale.—HOLBROOKS, LTD. v. LONDON & NORTH WESTERN RY. CO. (1916), 16 Ry. & Can. Tr. Cas. 154.

1360. —— Time for taking delivery.]—A railway co., being bound to give a reasonable time to the traders, after conveyance, to take delivery, prior to 1894 allowed the traders for that purpose four clear days, calculated on the average time that all the trucks of a particular trader occupied the co.'s sidings. After 1894, they allowed four days exclusive of the day of arrival, but calculated the time allowed on each truck & not on the average:—Held: not an indirect increase of the tonnage rate, which the co. were called upon to justify, under 1894 Act, s. 1, because, under the former system, no particular ton of coal would have had greater accommodation as regards time than under the new system.—MANCHESTER & NORTHERN COUNTIES FEDERATION OF COAL TRADERS' ASSOCNS. v. MIDLAND RY. CO. (1896), 10 Ry. & Can. Tr. Cas. 121.

1361. Alteration in classification.]—Appcts. for a period of thirty years prior to 1912 had consigned steel "strips," 1/8th in. in thickness & not exceeding 12 ins. in width, by rail from S. to L. & other places. Such strips were despatched either unpacked, or packed in cases or casks, & were described as "Bessemer undamageable" or "undamageable steel hoops." They were carried, whether packed or unpacked, at Class C. rates, amounting, in the case of 2 ton lots from S. to L., to 13*s.* 4*d.* per ton. In 1891 "strips not packed" were placed in Class C. of the general railway classification, while packed strips remained unclassified. From 1908 an exceptional rate was quoted in the rate books for steel strips packed, from S. to L., at 18*s.* 4*d.* per ton, but such rate was not charged to appcts.' traffic, which continued to be described as before. In 1910 strips iron & steel "except otherwise herein provided," i.e. packed, were introduced into Class 2 of the general railway classification, but appcts. continued to pay the old rate on their traffic, under its usual description. In 1912 the railway cos. required appcts. to describe such traffic, where packed, as "steel strips," & charged for its carriage from S. to L. the Class 2 or an exceptional rate of 18*s.* 4*d.* per ton. The railway cos. contended that, "steel strips packed" being unclassified, they were entitled, under their Rates & Charges Order, to charge Class 3 or any lower rates, & stated that this would have been done had appcts. truly declared the contents of the cases or casks containing their steel strips. Upon a complaint by appcts. that deft. railway cos. had increased the rates for their traffic & that such increase was unreasonable:—Held: (1) the railway cos. did in fact know of the contents of the cases & casks consigned by appcts., & in charging for such traffic Class 2 rates in lieu of Class C. rates they had increased the rates; (2) the fact that other traders had paid the higher rates on similar traffic did not in itself justify the increases complained of, although defts. would have laid the foundation for argument if they had proved that the volume of traffic upon which the higher charge was paid was really substantial as compared with that upon which the lower rate was paid; (3) the above decision should not prejudge an application to the Board of Trade for the classification of the traffic in question.—BEESLEY (W. T.) & CO., LTD. v. MIDLAND RY. CO. & CHESHIRE LINES COMMITTEE (1914), 15 Ry. & Can. Tr. Cas. 306.

1362. Charge for demurrage.]—Railway Rates & Charges Order Confirmation Act, 1892, s. 5, gives railway cos. power to charge a reasonable sum in addition to the tonnage rate for (inter alia) the use or occupation of any accommodation for such period as may be reasonably necessary for enabling the co. to deal with the merchandise as carriers thereof, or the consignor or consignee to give or take delivery.

Coal traffic on a certain railway was conveyed in waggons belonging to the traders themselves; & the practice was for the company to allow the waggons, on their arrival with coal at the terminal station, to remain on the co.'s sidings for an indefinite time until the consignees had discharged the coal from the waggons, & no charge was made for sidings rent beyond the conveyance rate & the station terminal. Owing to the increase of traffic the co., under the above sect., imposed a new charge for siding rent of 6*d.* a day per waggon for each day the waggon continued on the sidings after the expiration of four days:—Held: (1) four days was a sufficient time during which the obligation of the co. as carriers should continue; (2) as the Act gave the co. power to make a charge for accommodation after their duty as carriers had ended, the charge for siding rent was not a direct or indirect increase of any rate or charge within 1894 Act, s. 1, & the co. were not called upon to justify it; (3) the reasonableness of the amount of such charge in any individual case was a matter, not for the ct., but for an arbitrator appointed by the Board of Trade.—MANCHESTER & NORTHERN COUNTIES FEDERATION OF COAL TRADERS' ASSOCNS. v. LANCASHIRE & YORKSHIRE RY. SUB-SECT. 3.—JUSTIFICATION OF INCREASE.

1365. Onus of proof.]—On Jan. 1, 1893, a railway co. indirectly increased their rate for the carriage of coal, but not to the maximum. Before 1894 Act all rates below the maxima were presumed to be reasonable :—Held : (1) in the case of rates increased after Dec. 31, 1892, 1894 Act, s. 1 (1), removed that presumption & threw upon cos. the onus of proving that the increase was reasonable ; (2) the standard of reasonableness depended on circumstances existing or apprehended before the increase was made, and, therefore, in the case then before the ct., before the Act came into operation.

The rates & charges made by defts. for the conveyance of coal were, before Jan. 1, 1893, based upon the carriage of 21 cwt. to the ton ; they had, since Dec. 31, 1892, been based upon the carriage of 20 cwt. to the ton with an allowance for wastage of 2 cwt. per truck carried by defts. without charge :—Held : (3) defts. had, by so reducing the weight of coal carried to the ton, indirectly increased their rates & charges for the carriage of coal ; (4) it had not been proved by defts. that the whole of the increase in the rates which had been so made was reasonable.—RICKETT, SMITH & CO. v. MIDLAND RY. 1366. —— 1913 Act.]—(1) 1913 Act does not impose upon railway cos. seeking to justify an increase of rates the same burden of proving that the increase was reasonable as was imposed by 1894 Act.

(2) In order to determine under 1913 Act, s. 1, whether a particular increase for the purpose of meeting "a rise in the cost of working the railway," resulting from improvements made by the co. since Aug. 19, 1911, in the conditions of employment of labour, is justified, the right method is to compare the actual cost of labour in connection with the goods traffic at the date of the increase complained of with what would have been the cost of that labour under the old conditions.—ASSOCIATED PORTLAND CEMENT MANUFACTURERS (1900), LTD. v. GREAT NORTHERN RY. 1367. At what time reasonableness to be determined.]—(1) The question whether an increase in a rate is reasonable within 1894 Act, s. 1 (1), depends upon the circumstances existing at the time the increase was made, including the charges before & after the increase with reference to the services rendered & to be rendered, the expenses of performance, & every other fact with relation thereto.

1367 i. At what time reasonableness to be determined.]—In 1900 three railway cos. were amalgamated. Upon applications for orders sanctioning increases of all local rates, for goods & merchandise traffic, & for perishable traffic carried by passenger train, & also sanctioning similar increases of certain through rates, various tables in support were put in evidence comparing receipts, working expenses, & other figures for 1892, when the scale of maximum rates was fixed, & 1897 on the one hand, & 1912 on the other ; but, with certain exceptions, no comparison was instituted between the period immediately succeeding the amalgamation & the date of the applications. The result shown by the tables was that the percentage of working expenses had increased as between 1892 & 1912, but certain tables comparing 1901, the year succeeding amalgamation, & 1912, which were subsequently prepared at the request of the ct., showed that such percentage had considerably decreased as between the last-mentioned years :—Held : 1892 could not be accepted as a proper year for comparison, & the year succeeding the amalgamation, unless abnormal, should be adopted, the question to be considered being, how, if at all, the circumstances had altered since the date when the amalgamating Act said that the actual rates then in force were not to be increased without the consent of the ct.—Ex p. GREAT SOUTHERN & WESTERN RY. appcts.' collieries to T. & S. by 5*d.* per ton. Defts. proved that the cost of working appcts.' traffic had increased by increased cost for locomotive power, owing chiefly to the shortening of the hours of labour, increased wages, a greater number of waggons having been allotted to appcts. owing to their requiring greater despatch, & increased rates & taxes:—Held: the increase was not unreasonable.—CHARLAW & SACRISTON COLLIERIES CO. v. NORTH EASTERN RY. CO. (1896), 9 Ry. & Can. Tr. Cas. 140; 12 T. L. R. 211.

1369. ——.]—The charges made by the railway co. for the conveyance of coal were, prior to Jan. 1, 1893, calculated upon the carriage of 21 cwt. to the ton, of which 1 cwt. was an allowance for "wastage"; they were now calculated upon the carriage of 20½ cwt. to the ton; this resulted in an increase of 2½ per cent. upon the rate formerly charged to appcts.:—Held: (1) the railway co. having shown at least a proportional increase in the cost of working the traffic between 1877, when the original rates were fixed, & 1892, the increase of rate was reasonable; (2) the fact that since 1880 the railway co. had supplied waggons for the mineral trade as carriers of minerals, for the use of which a separate rate was charged, did not necessitate the exclusion of this branch of their business from the general account (for purposes of comparison, in order to ascertain a reasonable conveyance rate) because the trader providing his own waggons was also benefited by the increased facility & greater economy with which the traffic was handled; (3) the cost of providing relief men for mineral trains, which was necessitated by the shortened hours of labour, & the fact that such trains had to stand on one side for goods & passenger trains, was an item properly attributable to the mineral traffic, which must be worked subject to the ordinary conditions on a highway; (4) a comparison of expenditure & receipts in any two years is a fair method of comparison where no special disturbing elements can be proved to exist. For a comparison based on train mileage to be of value, it must be shown that the conditions of working the traffic in the two compared years have remained substantially constant.—SOUTH YORKSHIRE COAL OWNERS' ASSURANCE SOCIETY v. MIDLAND RY. 1370. —— Ratio of costs to receipts.]—(1) In justifying an increase of rates under 1894 Act, s. 1, it is not sufficient to show an increase in the ratio of cost to receipts to an extent equalling or exceeding that of the advance in the rates. If it be shown, after all elements of cost & economy have been taken into consideration, that the necessary cost per ton carried will, under uniform conditions, be increased by any sum without any compensating circumstances, then it is primâ facie reasonable to increase the charge by the same sum.

(2) In considering under the sect. whether an increase of rate is reasonable, the ct. is not precluded from having regard to any circumstances which may tend either to justify the increase or to prove it unreasonable.

(3) Although the rates, as existing before 1893, are presumed by the Railway and Canal Traffic Act, 1894, to be sufficiently high, an advance shown to be necessary to accommodate them to circumstances may be allowed, even though the circumstances are of a date prior to 1893 (e.g. circumstances existing since 1888), provided that the date is not too remote.—SMITH & FORREST v. LONDON & NORTH WESTERN RY. 1373. —— "Exceptional rate" traffic only increased.]—Defts. in order to meet the increase in the cost of working their railways resulting from the improvements they had made in the conditions of employment of their labour & clerical staff in the form of higher wages, shortening the hours of labour, etc., placed an increase of 4 per cent. on all their "exceptional rate" traffic & nothing on the "class" traffic or on coal, coke and patent fuel. Almost all kinds of merchandise are carried at exceptional rates, so that practically no particular kind of merchandise was unaffected except coal, coke & patent fuel. The reason for this was that class traffic was already charged almost up to the maximum & the rates on coal, coke & patent fuel had already been raised more than once, & it was not thought advisable to disturb the recent arrangements that had been made:—Held: there had been no contravention by defts. of 1913 Act, s. 1 (1), inasmuch as the word "traffic" in clause (d) referred to the class of goods, the particular industry, in which complainant was complaint, under 1894 Act, s. 1 (1), by colliery owners that the ry. co., Dec. 1899, increased the rates for the carriage of coal to an extent varying from 1*d.* per ton on rates not exceeding 2*s.* per ton, to 3*d.* per ton on rates exceeding 5*s.* per ton, & that such increase was unreasonable, the ry. co. alleged that the increase was reasonable on the grounds that the cost of working their coal traffic had increased owing to the shortening of hours of labour, increase of price of fuel, additional capital expenditure, & other causes. On the facts:—Held: raising the rates was not justified.—BLACK & SONS v. CALEDONIAN RY. CO., NORTH BRITISH RY. CO. & GLASGOW & SOUTH WESTERN RY. CO. (1901), 11 Ry. & Can. Tr. Cas. 176.—SCOT.

interested, & the object of the sub-sect. was to prevent one trader being unduly burdened by the increase of rates made, whereas the 4 per cent. increase on the exceptional rate traffic applied practically to all classes of goods & to all industries, & no complaint was made that any one industry or class of goods had been unduly burdened, nor was there any evidence of any hardship.—BUTTERLEY CO., LTD. v. MIDLAND RY. Correction of undue preference—Alteration in computation of weight.]—By an arrangement between appcts. & defts. in 1906 appcts.' soap was carried by defts. at rates based upon its computed weight, which was, in fact, substantially less than its actual weight. In 1907 other traders, whose traffic was carried at rates based upon actual weight, complained of the undue preference accorded by means of the computed weights, & thereupon defts. adopted the practice of charging all consignments at actual weight. Appcts. complained of this change of rate as an unreasonable increase & as illegal, inasmuch as public notice was not given of it as prescribed by 1888 Act, s. 33: —Held: defts. had taken a reasonable step in altering the computation when they found it inaccurate.—WATSON (JOSEPH) & SONS, LTD. v. MIDLAND RY. It was necessary to haul the timber from the place where it lay to the wharf, & pltf. provided horses for the purpose when deft.'s horses were absent. Pltf. sued in the S. county ct. for the balance of his account for the carriage, including a separate charge for hauling:—Held: on motion for a prohibition, the hauling & the carriage formed one cause of action; such cause of action was not complete until the timber was delivered in L.; & the county ct. judge had not jurisdiction under County Courts Act, 1846 (c. 95), s. 60.—BARNES v MARSHALL (1852), 18 Q. 1391. Freight.]—A carrier may detain goods for the carriage.—SKINNER v. UPSHAW (1702), 2 Ld. Raym. 752; 92 E. R. 3.

1392. —— Stoppage in transitu.]—Consignors delivered a quantity of iron to a carrier by water, the freight of which was to be paid for by the consignee. After the carrier had placed some of the iron out of each of the boats on the wharf of the consignee, he discovered that the consignee was a bkpt., & immediately reloaded the iron, & took it to his own premises:—Held: inasmuch as the consignee had not tendered the amount of the freight, & the carrier had not consented to forego his lien upon it, the delivery of the iron was not complete, &, consequently, the consignors were entitled to stop in transitu.

A carrier has a lien on the entire cargo, for his whole freight; & until the amount is either tendered or paid, the special property which he has in his character of carrier does not pass out of him to the vendee, unless, indeed, he does some act to show that he assents to the vendee's taking possession of the property before the freight is paid (BAYLEY, J.).—CRAWSHAY v. EADES (1823), 1 B. & C. 181; 2 Dow. & Ry. 1396. —— —— Confined to goods on which toll charged.]—The word "tolls" in Railways Clauses Consolidation Act, 1845, s. 97, does not mean charges for the conveyance of goods by the railway co. in their carriages, but only charges for the use of the co.'s line by persons conveying their own goods over the line in their own carriages; & the railway co. has no right, by virtue of that sect., to detain or sell goods on their premises delivered to them for conveyance, merely because the owner has failed to pay charges previously incurred in respect of the conveyance by the co. of other goods for him.—WALLIS v. LONDON & SOUTH WESTERN RY. Co. for the carriage of goods in the waggons:—Held: the claim could not be sustained under the earlier or the later part of s. 97; not under the later, because the waggons did not belong to the persons from whom the tolls were due; not under the earlier, because that part of the sect. does not entitle a railway co. to detain waggons for tolls due only in respect of the goods carried in the waggons.—MANCHESTER, SHEFFIELD & LINCOLNSHIRE RY. 1391 i. Freight.]—Pltf. ordered his agent to forward goods to him at B.; the agent instructed a carrying agent to forward them. The carrying agent agreed with a carrier to take the goods to B., but he, not being able to carry to B., agreed with the carrying agent to take the goods to W. The carrier having delivered the goods at W., pltf. refused to pay the freight. In an action by pltf. for conversion of the goods:—Held: deft. had a lien for the carriage.—GALLIMORE v. MOORE (1867), 6 N. S. W. S. C. R. 388.—AUS.

1391 iii. —— More demanded than due.]—Iron had been imported from E. by B., B., & G. Ry. Co., & was shipped from K. to C., subject to ocean freight, & the freight by schooner from K. On arriving at C., no one being ready to pay, the iron was left by the master in deft.'s charge, to hold subject to the freight. Pltfs. who had bought the iron demanded it from deft., who refused to give it up, claiming the freight from K., as well as demurrage, & other charges not recoverable. Pltfs. refused to pay anything:—Held: deft. had a clear right to detain for the freight from K., of which no tender had been made, & his right was not prejudiced by having demanded more than was due.—BUFFALO & LAKE HURON RY. B. General Lien.

(a) How Established.

1406. By course of dealing.]—To an action in trover, deft. pleaded that the goods were put by H. into the hands of defts. as a carrier to be forwarded from M. to his warehouse in L., & that deft. was entitled to retain against the estate for the general balance due from H. for the carriage of goods. This right was established by evidence of deft. having before claimed & been allowed to retain for his general balance both against bkpt. estates & solvent customers, & also by the evidence of a principal carrier on the western road to the same effect respecting himself.—ASPINALL v. PICKFORD (1800), 3 Bos. & P. 44, n.; 127 E. 1407. ——.]—The lien of a common carrier for his general balance, however it may arise in point of law from an implied agreement to be inferred from a general usage of trade, proved by clear & satisfactory instances sufficiently numerous & general to warrant so extensive a conclusion affecting the custom of the realm, yet is not to be favoured, nor can be supported by a few recent instances of detention of goods by four or five carriers for their general balance; but such a lien may be inferred from evidence of the particular mode of dealing between the respective parties.—RUSHFORTH v. HADFIELD (1805), 6 East, 519; 2 Smith, K. B. 634; 102 E. R. 1386; subsequent proceedings (1806), 7 East, 224.

1408. ——.]—Where, as in the case of a common carrier claiming a lien for his general balance, such a lien is against the policy of the common law & the custom of the realm, which only gives him a lien for the carriage price of the particular goods, there ought to be very strong evidence of a general usage for such a lien to induce a jury to infer the knowledge & adoption of it by the particular parties in their contract; & the jury having negatived such a general usage, though proved to have been frequently exercised by defts. & various other common carriers throughout the North for ten or twelve years before, & in one instance so far back as thirty years, though not opposed by other evidence, the ct. refused to grant a new trial.—RUSHFORTH v. HADFIELD (1806), 7 East, 224; 3 Smith, K. 1410. —— Construction of.]—Pltf. was assignee of a bkpt. colliery co., & defts. were carriers of goods on their line of railway from their B. station, having also an establishment at D. on their line, where they made and repaired their own locomotive engines, & also occasionally repaired those belonging to colliery proprietors whose works were connected with the main line of the railway. Before their bkpcy. the colliery co. carried on business as coal merchants & coal proprietors about two miles from B. station, at which latter their works were connected, by a tramway of their own, with the main line of defts.' railway; & in June, 1864, defts. opened a monthly credit account with the colliery co. for the carriage of their goods by defts. from B. upon certain written conditions, the sixth of which provided that if the monthly accounts were not paid in accordance with the specified conditions, defts. were to have the right at any time to detain any goods or waggons in their possession by way of lien to secure the general balance owing to them. In July, 1864, a locomotive engine of the colliery co., used by them for taking coals & goods from their works to defts.' line at B., being out of repair, was sent, by agreement, to defts.' establishment at D. to be repaired by them, & was drawn by defts. from B. to D. for that purpose attached to one of their ordinary luggage trains, & a sum of £2 18*s.* for such haulage was charged by defts. to the colliery co. in the monthly carriage account for July, & was not disputed by the latter before their bkpcy. Upon the subsequent adjudication of the colliery co. as bkpts., in Oct. 1864, defts. claimed to hold the engine, which was then in their establishment at D. undergoing repairs, as a security, not only for the cost of such repairs & the charge for haulage, but also for a general balance due to them for the carriage of coals, &c., for the colliery co.:—Held: the terms of the sixth condition of the agreement between defts. & the colliery co. which was intended merely to enlarge the rights of defts. as carriers, & to give them as such a right of lien beyond what they would have at common law, applied only to coals & such like "goods" to be carried in the ordinary way, & not to the engine in question, which was delivered to defts., not under any contract to carry, but under an agreement to repair, to which the charge for haulage was incidental; & the right of general lien claimed by defts. did not attach.—KINNEAR v. MIDLAND RY. CO. (1868), 19 L. T. 387.

1411. By notice—Goods sent to factor.]—(1) A carrier had given notice that all goods would be subject to a lien, not only for the freight of the particular goods, but also for any general balance due from their respective owners. Goods having been sent by the carrier addressed to the order of S. a mere factor:—Held: the carrier had, not as against the real owner, any lien for the balance due from S.

(2) Qu.: whether, if the notice had been, that all goods, to whomsoever belonging, should be subject to a lien for any general balance that may be due from the persons to whom they are addressed, he would have any right to retain the goods for the balance due from S.—WRIGHT v. SNELL (1822), 5 B. & Ald. 350; 106 E. 1412. —— Evidence of.]—In trover against a carrier, where the question was whether the goods were rightfully detained by deft. in satisfaction of a general lien:—Held: (1) parol evidence could not be given of the contents of a portable notice, hung up in deft.'s office, containing a statement that all goods carried by deft. were to be subject to such general lien, but that the notice itself must be produced; (2) evidence of bills delivered to pltf., containing a similar statement, could not be received without a notice to produce the bills.

(3) In trover by the owner of goods against a carrier who has detained the goods under a claim of lien, it is not necessary, in order to entitle pltf. to recover, that he should prove an actual tender of the carriage money, if it appear that he was ready to pay it, but that deft. refused to deliver the goods except on payment of an alleged old balance, which the jury find not to have been really due.—JONES v. TARLETON (1842), 9 M. & W. 675; 1 Dowl. 1413. —— Existence of contract a question for jury.]—The assignees of B. & Co. sued to recover possession of certain gas retorts delivered by B. & Co. to defts. to be carried to L., & which were detained by them under a claim of general lien. Bkpts. had agreed to pay ready money for all goods sent by them, & on three occasions they had done so, on each of which occasions, defts. had given them a receipt, with a heading, stating that all goods were considered as a general lien with respect not only to freight thereon, but also to the balance of any former account due from the owners to defts.:—Held: common carriers are not entitled to a general lien; but where the lien is claimed by express contract in writing, it is a question for the jury whether the goods were delivered on the terms of defts.' having a general lien.—ALDRED v. PEARSON (1843), 1 L. 1418. —— —— Stoppage in transitu.]—The vendors of goods, an American co., authorised their agents, on the arrival of the goods in England, to deliver the goods to defts. for carriage to the buyers upon the terms of a consignment note which contained a condition that all goods delivered to defts. would be received & held by them subject to a lien for money to them for the carriage of & other charges upon such goods, & also to a general lien for any moneys due to them from the owners of such goods upon any account. The vendors' agents accordingly delivered the goods to defts. for carriage to the buyers. The vendors had paid all freight & charges in respect of the carriage of the goods. While the goods were still in the possession of defts. as carriers the vendors, being unpaid & having been informed that the buyers were insolvent, gave notice of stoppage in transitu to defts. The buyers, who had meanwhile become owners of the goods by indorsement & delivery of the bill of lading, were indebted to defts. in the sum of £1170, on a general account. Defts. claimed, under the condition in the consignment note, that they had a lien as against the vendors in respect of the £1170 due from the buyers:—Held: the condition did not confer on defts. a right to assert a general lien on the goods in respect of the debt of the buyers in priority to the vendors' right of stoppage in transitu.—UNITED STATES STEEL PRODUCTS CO. v. GREAT WESTERN RY. (c) Effect of Liquidation and Bankruptcy.

1419. Possession obtained after winding-up petition—But before order.]—The N. Co. was indebted to the M. Ry. Co. for goods carried by the latter for the former. A petition was presented praying for a winding-up order of the N. Co. That co. then sent other goods to the M. Ry. Co. for carriage by them, after which an order was made to wind up the N. Co. The M. Ry. Co. refused to deliver to the official liquidator of the N. Co. the goods in their hands, claiming a lien on them for the debt previously due for the carriage of the other goods. The official liquidator of the N. Co. then took out a summons in chambers to obtain delivery of the goods to him on payment of the money due for the carriage thereof:—Held: the official liquidator of the N. Co. must pay the debt due to the M. Ry. Co. if he wished to obtain possession of the goods in their hands.—Re NORTHFIELD IRON & STEEL CO., LTD. (1866), 14 L. T. 695.

1420. —— ——.]—In 1876 an agreement was entered into between the L. Coal Co. & the G. W. Ry. Co., by which coals consigned by the coal co. were carried to a "ledger account," one condition of which was, that the goods & waggons belonging to or sent by the person having a ledger account should be subject to a general lien in favour of the railway co. for all moneys due to them, etc., from such person on any account, such lien to take effect immediately after the failure of payment on demand of any sums appearing to be due on the ledger account; "in case of bkpcy., insolvency, or stoppage of payment, such lien to take effect immediately for any sum appearing due in the books of the co.," with a right to sell the goods & waggons, & out of the proceeds to retain the sums due. The coal co. became insolvent, & on Dec. 16, 1885, a petition was presented for winding-up; in Feb. 1886 an order to wind up was made, & on the Jan. 20 following a provisional liquidator was appointed. When the petition was presented the coal co. was indebted to the railway co. in respect of charges for freight. Of the fifteen waggons in use by the coal co., & employed in carrying coal over the railway co.'s line, nine had been received by the railway co. prior to the presentation of the winding-up petition & had been detained by them ever since; four in possession of the railway co. when the petition was presented had travelled up & down the line since, but returned into the possession of the railway co. before the date of the winding-up order; two did not come into the possession of the railway co. until between the presentation of the petition & the winding-up order. The liquidator claimed delivery up by the railway co. of the fifteen waggons which the co. claimed to retain in satisfaction of the general lien under the agreement:—Held: the lien given to the railway co. by the agreement, which was made for the ordinary purposes of the coal co.'s business, was good & valid, & took effect upon the insolvency of that co., & had not been displaced by anything that had taken place in the winding-up proceedings.—Re LLANGENNECH COAL CO. (1887), 56 L. T. 475.

1421. Possession obtained after winding-up order—Without notice.]—In 1864 an agreement was entered into between pltfs., a joint-stock co., & defts., a railway co., by which goods consigned to pltfs. were carried by defts. on a credit account; one condition being that the goods or waggons belonging to or sent by pltfs. should be subject to a general lien in favour of defts. for all moneys due to them from pltfs., to take effect at the option of defts. at any time after the failure of payment of any sums appearing due on the credit account, or in case of bkpcy., insolvency, or stoppage of payment. Coke had been carried for some time by defts. for pltfs. under this agreement, & on Nov. 19, 1866, there was £2000 due from pltfs. to defts. on the account, for carriage. On Oct. 30, 1866, a petition for winding up pltfs.' co. was presented by a creditor, & notice was given in the London Gazette, & on Nov. 16 an order for winding up was made under Companies Act, 1862 (c. 89). On Nov. 19 an official liquidator was appointed, but the formal appointment was not made till Nov. 30. Pltfs.' business was still carried on under the liquidator, & on Nov. 20, coke, consigned to pltfs.' co., was put in trucks belonging to pltfs. on defts.' line, & they detained them at the place of loading, for three days, in exercise of their general lien, but, on the liquidator informing them of the order for winding up, they forwarded the trucks at once. 1422. Goods consigned by receiver—Carriage owing by bankrupt.]—(1) A trader opened with a railway co. a credit account for freight, by which it was agreed that the co. should have a general lien for all moneys due by him to them on any account on all goods belonging to him in their hands. He afterwards filed a liquidation petition, under which a receiver of his property & manager of his business was appointed. In order to carry on the business the receiver bought some goods, which he paid for with his own money, & sent them to the co. consigned to the trader. The co. claimed the benefit of the agreement, & refused to deliver the goods until they were paid the amount which the trader owed them for freight due at the time of the filing of the petition. The receiver in order to obtain the goods paid the co. £50 under protest, & then applied to the Ct. of Bkpcy. to order the co. to repay him the £50, & an order was made accordingly :—Held : the Ct. of Bkpcy. had no jurisdiction to make the order.

At this time, only part of the freight had been paid to the master of the ship. Soon afterwards the purchaser filed a liquidation petition, & a receiver was appointed. The balance of the freight was paid by the receiver, & the remainder of the iron was placed in medio :—Held : inasmuch as it could not be supposed that the master intended to abandon his lien for the unpaid freight, the delivery of the thirty tons did not operate as a constructive delivery of the whole

SECT. 2.—REMEDIES AGAINST CARRIERS.

SUB-SECT. 1.—WHO MAY SUE.

1438. General rule.]—Though, generally speaking, where there is a delivery to a carrier to deliver to a consignee, the latter is the proper person to bring the action against the carrier, yet if the consignor make a special contract with the carrier, such contract supersedes the necessity of showing the ownership in the goods, & the consignor may maintain the action, though the goods may be the property of the consignee. The question whether goods are delivered to a carrier at the risk of the consignor or consignee is a question for the jury: delivery of goods to a carrier by a consignor, does not necessarily vest the property in them in the consignee.—DUNLOP v. LAMBERT (1839), 6 Cl. & Fin. 600; Macl. & Rob. 663; 7 E. 1439. ——.]—In an action against common carriers for not delivering goods according to contract, the person, whose property the goods are, is primâ facie the person with whom the contract is made; & declarations made by him subsequent to the delivery to the carrier, that the goods belong to another person, are not of themselves sufficient to prevent him recovering in such action.—MULLINSON v. CARVER (1843), 1 L. T. O. S. 59.

1440. Joint owners—Goods addressed to one—Carriage paid by one.]—If A. & B. are separately owners of several articles contained in a box which is delivered to a railway co. to carry for them jointly, they may jointly sue the co. for the loss of the goods, though the box be directed to one of them only, & the price of the carriage be paid by that one only.—METCALFE v. LONDON, BRIGHTON & SOUTH COAST RY. Co. (1858), 4 C. B. N. S. 307; 27 L. J. C. P. 333; 31 L. T. O. S. 166; 4 Jur. N. S. 487; 6 W. R. 593; 140 E. R. 1102.

1443. —— Paying freight.]—B., a miller in S., sold flour to pltf., &, according to the usual course of business between them, consigned it to him in K., paying the carriage by the G. E. Ry. Co. to L.; the G. E. Ry. Co. delivered it to the S. E. Ry. Co., who forwarded it to pltf. in K., & charged him for the carriage by their line:—Held: though the property in the flour might not have passed to pltf. under Stat. Frauds, still, as he had contracted with the S. E. Ry. Co. for its carriage, he could sue them for damage done to it in the transit over their line.—MEAD v. SOUTH EASTERN RY. Co. (1870), 18 W. 1458. Pledgee.]—In an action for wrongfully depriving pltfs. of goods, it appeared that the goods had been consigned to E. from a colony. The bills of lading provided that the goods were to be delivered to the order of the consignor or his assigns. The consignor drew bills of exchange on the consignee against the consignment, & sold the bills of exchange, with the bills of lading annexed, which he had indorsed in blank, to a colonial bank, who sent them to a bank in L., with a hypothecation note empowering the L. bank to sell the goods if the bills of exchange were not accepted or not paid at maturity. The goods arrived in E., & were delivered to defts., a railway co., to be delivered to the order of the shipowners. The consignee paid the freight & other shipping charges & accepted the bills of exchange, but before the bills became due, he induced defts. wrongfully to deliver the goods to him without producing a delivery order from the shipowners. When the bills became due the consignee requested pltfs. to advance the money & take up the bills. They did so, & received the bills of exchange & the bills of
